"In the presence of such an issue as militarism, it is impossible that any Populist should hesitate as to his duty. When such an issue is raised there can be only two parties—the party, whatever its name may be, which believess in a republic, and the party, whatever its name, which believes in an empire; and the influence of every citizen is, consciously or unconsciously, intenionally or unintentionally, thrown on one side or the other. Where the divine right of kings is recognized the monarch can grant different degrees of liberty to different subjects. The people of England can be ruled in one way, the people of Canada in another, the people of Ireland in another, while the people of India may be governed according to still different forms. But there can be no variety in a republic. The doctrine of a republic differs from the doctrine of a monarchy as the day differs from the night, and between the two doctrines there is and ever must be an irrepressible conflict.

"Imperialism."

"A republic is always a menace to a monarch, just as truth is always a menace to error. Self-government, being the natural government, must necessarily create dissatisfaction among the subjects of those governments which build upon some other foundation than the consent of the governed. What the Orange Free State and Transvaal republics are to South Africa our republic is to the world, and only our increasing strength and the wide Atlantic have protected us from the inextinguishable hostility which must ever exist between those who support a throne and those who recognize the citizen as the sovereign. Every step taken toward imperialism by this nation meets with prompt and effective encouragement from Europe. Our opponents say that the world would laugh at us if we should give independence to the Filipinos. Yes, kings would laugh, aristocrats would laugh, and those would laugh who deny the inalienable rights of men and despise the humbler folk who "along the cool, sequestered vale of life keep the noiseless tenor of their way." But let this nation stand erect and, spurning the bribes of wealth and power, show that there is a reality in the principles which we profess; let it show that there is a difference between a republic and a monarchy, and the oppressed of every land will see in our flag the hope of their own deliverance, and whether they are bleeding upon the battlefield or groaning beneath a tyrant's lash, they will raise their eyes toward heaven, and breathe a fervent prayer for the safety of our republic."

To the Silverites.

Replying to the monetary league notification. Mr. Bryan said:

"When this speech was prepared and given to the press I did not know that formal announcement of the resolutions passed by the monetary league would be made at this time, and I desire here to express by gratitude to the members of that league for the support which they promise and for the cordial commendation which their resolutions speak. The monetary-league has for four years been active in the distribution of literature connected with the money question aimed at the enlightenment of the voters, and I have on former occasions, and do now, express my commendation of the efforts of this league and of similar leagues to spread before the people information on the money question, because I believe the more the question is studied and the better it is understood the stronger will be the demand for the restoration of the double standard in the United States."

This evening Mr. Bryan left for Manhattan, Kan., where he is announced to speak to-morrow. Chairman Butler was not present at to-day's meeting, and Jerry Simpson acted as chairman.

Speedy Steamers.

The end-of-the-century steamship is outdoing all that has gone before, although ten years from now recent speed records on the ocean may look like the traditional three dimes. The long-distance trial of the Deutschland from the mouth of the Oder to the mouth of the Elbe developed 35,200 mean indicated horse power, while on the trip from Plymouth to New York the average indicated horse power was 34,203. The total consumption of coal for twenty-four hours was 550 tons, or 1.5 pounds per horse power per hour, a remarkably low figure. This low consumption of coal is attributed to the use of a new system of forced draught. The average speed on the return trip to Plymouth was 23 knots and the average horse power 35,039. For many people who cross the ocean these figures have no interest. They prefer a more extended trip and they go by the slow lines. The average American, however, thinks it necessary to save time, and the fast lines are constantly watched for broken records.

Lowell's One Client.

James Russell Lowell studied law and took an office, but never had a case in court. The Rev. Edward Everett Hale sometimes tells, however, the story of Lowell's first client. The poet had laid aside his law book for the nonce and was polishing off a sonnet, when the door opened and a strange man appeared, with a look of doubt or trouble in his eyes. Lowell hastily hid the sonnet in a pocket, sprang up with all the alacrity of courtesy he could command, offered a chair to the visitor, took his hat and put it on the table with as much reverence as if it were a retainer, drew up a chair opposite, pulled out a brand-new notebook, and waving his pencil in a soft, inviting, confidential way, began: "Well, sir, I am all ready to take notes of your case. Please tell me everything, even the most trivial circumstances." The stranger stared at him with open mouth for a minute, then grinned most amicably, as he answered: "I'm the painter of your sign, sir, come to get my little bill."

The Absent-Minded Man.

Many stories are told of the absent-mindedness of the late Dr. McAllister, rector of Trinity church, Elizabeth, and brother of the late Ward McAllister. One night he was returning to Elizabeth from New York, and took a train which was not scheduled to stop at his station. Discovering his mistake, he appealed to the conductor, being anxious to get word to his wife.

Presently the conductor came back to the doctor and said that a railroad official was on the train, and that it would make an extra stop at Elizabeth.

"That is good," said Dr. McAllister, with great relief. "When you stop at Elizabeth, won't you send a message to my wife that I have been carried through to Trenton?"

"Why don't you get off yourself?" suggested the conductor.

"Oh, I never thought of that," said the doctor.—New York Times.

SPURIOUS PROSPERITY

Republican Plan to Manufacture Prosperity for Campaign Purposes Only.

Power of an Executive Order as Compared With a Legislative Enactment.

Some of the Numerous Causes of Mr. McKinley's Waning Popularity.

Apropos of this wonderful Republican prosperity, the following news item of Aug. 20 from LaSalle, Ill., explains itself:

Two hundred and fifty female employes of the Western Clock Manufacturing Company, of Peru, Ill., have suffered a reduction in wages of from 30 to 40 per cent. during the past week.

During the political campaign of 1896 the owners of the establishment posted bills in conspicuous places, announcing that in the event of Bryan's election the works would be shut down, while should McKinley be elected the employes would be given steady work at advanced wages.

In view of the difficulty which the Republican managers will find in forcing the "prosperity" issue, it is understood that the politicians and their allies, the Wall street stock jobbers, are arranging a scheme to boost stock market prices during the closing days of the campaign. According to Hearst's Chicago American, the scheme is exposed in a confidential circular letter recently sent out to its customers by the stock and bond house of Gaylord, Blessing & Co., 307 Olive street, St. Louis, in which appears the following interesting announcement:

"The market still remains under control of the professional traders, all the big operators being out of the city. With the return of the latter speculation may broaden somewhat, but it does not look as if affairs would change very materially until fall.

"The talk of a powerful bull pool being formed, to be composed exclusively of Republican politicians, for the purpose of giving the market a boost a couple of weeks before election time, is going around. A movement of this kind would, it is believed, have a beneficial effect on Wall street and throughout the country at large."

For the last six or eight months the market value of stocks has been dropping gradually, especially of those in the class known as "industrials," and it has been well understood that except for a fear that it would cost the Republican ticket millions of votes wages would have been reduced in hundreds of factories owned by industrial trusts throughout the country, and affecting hundreds of thousands of workingmen.

There are other indications that the Hanna-McKinley crowd expects to manipulate the stock market during the campaign for the purpose of convincing investors and voters generally that prosperity is on every hand and McKinley must be re-elected to continue the condition.

REPUBLICAN CONSISTENCY.

Republicans would do well to say as little as may be on the subject of fiat money. President McKinley is on record as believing in the absurd idea that while legislation by congress cannot regulate the value of money in our own land, an executive order by the president can fix the value of money even in a country which, according to the orthodox Republican doctrine, is not under the constitution of the United tSates. The order quoted below, together with the explanatory extract from the Congressional Record, makes interesting and instructive reading at this time, illustrating as they do the exaggerated ideas of Republicans concerning the power of the executive, and also that imaginary something which has been humorously called Republican consistency.

The following order, dated January 20, 1899, and signed by William McKinley, was issued from the executive mansion:

"It is further ordered that on and after February 1, 1899, and until further provided, the following Porto Rican or Spanish silver coins now in circulation in the Island of Porto Rico shall be received for customs, taxes, public and postal dues at the following fixed rates in United States money:

The peso	$0.60
The medio peso	.30
The peseta	.12
The real	.06
The medio real	.03

It is further ordered that all existing contracts for the payment of money in the currency of Porto Rico may be discharged and paid in that money in accordance with the contracts, or in United States money at the relative value set forth in the above table—namely, for each $100 United States currency 166⅔ Porto Rican pesos."

Extract from Congressional Record, 56th Congress, 1st session, page 2,040:

"Mr. Norton of Ohio.—If the gentleman (Mr. Payne, the Republican leader from New York,) will permit me * * * I would like to be informed upon one point, and ask him to yield to me for a question.

"Mr. Payne.—Certainly.

"Mr. Norton.—I think in giving the value of the peso a few minutes ago he said that it amounted to about 40 or 41 cents of our money.

"Mr. Payne.—No: the gentleman is mistaken. I said 93⅓ per cent. of the peso was silver, and that it was worth 41 or 42 cents in bullion; but by executive order the value was fixed at 60 cents on the dollar.

"Mr. Norton.—This increase was made by executive order. Now, if an executive order can increase the value of the peso in the proportion the gentleman has stated, why cannot an executive order make it equal to a full dollar in value and help the people in that way? (Laughter on the Democratic side.)

"Mr. Payne.—Well, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is drifting off from the subject.

"Mr. Gaines.—Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

"Mr. Payne.—No, I cannot yield; not even for the first gun fired in this war.

"Mr. Gaines.—Well, you are going to hear a good many fired before you get through with this question, I can tell you."

M'KINLEY STOCKS GOING DOWN.

The McKinley party in 1896 pulled their man through with a 50.88 per cent. popular vote (including fraudulent counts and all), while Bryan, the candidate of the people, polled 45.71 per cent., or 5.17 per cent. less than the candidate of the trusts. That a large portion of those who helped elect the trust candidate soon became sick of their bargain was evidenced by the congressional elections two years later, when the McKinley majority of 5.17 per cent. dwindled down to one of 2 per cent.—a loss of 3.17 per cent.—while the Democratic vote increased from 45.71 to 47.75 per cent.—a gain of 2.04 per cent. Thus the relative strength of the McKinleyites and the people in 1898 was as follows:

People	47.75 per cent.
McKinleyites	47.71 per cent.
People's majority	.04 per cent.

If the McKinleyites can extract any comfort out of this they are welcome. Others may take comfort out of the assurance that the figures are absolutely correct and represent facts that are facts, which no talk about "prosperity" or other twaddle can alter in the least. It may also be worthy to note that if McKinley stocks fell below par during the first two years of his so-called administration, with no other depressing cause than his inane impotency, they have not since then been enhanced in value by his unpopular Philippine war policy, nor by the trust curse, for which his administration is responsible.

THE VERDICT OF HISTORY.

In his introduction to Caesar's Commentaries the famous historian Froude says:

"To the student of political history, and to the English student above all others, the conversion of the Roman republic into a military empire commands a peculiar interest. Notwithstanding many differences, the English and the Romans essentially resemble one another. The early Romans possessed the faculty of self-government beyond any people of whom we have historical knowledge, with the one exception of ourselves. In virtue of their temporal freedom, they became the most powerful nation in the known world, and their liberties perished only when Rome became mistress of conquered races, to whom she was unable or unwilling to extend her privileges.

"If there be one lesson which history teaches it is this, that free nations cannot govern subject provinces. If they are unable or unwilling to admit their dependencies to share in their own constitution, the constitution itself will fall in pieces from mere incompetence for its duties."

When Republicans are charged with denying those truths concerning human rights which the founders of our government regarded as self-evident, they usually can be relied on to answer with the assertion that McKinley prosperity is giving to wage-earners steady employment and good pay. Therefore these wage-earners should in gratitude vote the g. o. p. ticket without bothering themselves about the departure of the party from the fundamental principles of free government. Now, there is no doubt there is a sort of spurious prosperity which laborers are enjoying at the present time. According to Bradstreet's, it is true that while wages have remained stationary in many classes of labor they have in some others advanced about 10 per cent.; but, at the same time, the cost of living has been increased from 20 to 30 per cent. during the past year, thanks to the trusts which have been bred by Republican policy, and which are sheltered behind the Republican protective tariff.

The Republican politicians are in the habit of boasting that they have given work to the unemployed; and they have a way of talking about laborers as though these were the wards of the party and needed a guardian, or as though they belongd to a separate race and were made of a different kind of clay. The self-respecting laborers will resent this sort of patronizing guardianship. Even assuming, for the sake of argument, that they are now able to get work is it not rather significant that this should be regarded as something to brag about? The country has an enormous amount of undeveloped wealth; and yet laborers are all the time being told that they must get down on their knees and thank God and the Republican party for the privilege of selling their labor for less than it is worth.

It may as well be admitted that the Republicans speak the truth when they say that the Filipinos and the Boers hope and pray for the defeat of the Republican party in our coming election. When the reform forces are taunted with having these foreign allies they would better own up and say with Mr. Bryan that naturally there cannot be found in all the world any people who are struggling for liberty and who look for help to the Republican party. McKinley is without question popular with the British tories, and, in general, with those who wish to destroy government by the people, but the South African peoples and the Filipinos have sense enough to know that no effort by the oppressed to secure the right of self-government can expect sympathy or assistance from that party in the United States which now openly places money considerations above human rights.

Talk about your gold bricks, here was Spain with an antiquated, played-out colonial system, which, to the knowledge of all the world, had been her disaster and plague for four hundred years; and yet McKinley not only took it off her hands, but actually, incredible as it seems, gave her $20,000,000 for it. This gold brick has already cost the country not less than $186,000,000 and 5,000 men in less than two years. How much will it cost us before we can expect to find some idiot so guileless as to take it off our hands?

Roosevelt holds that he must preserve the honor of this country, even if he has to defame the character of every Democrat in order to do it.

There was a time when the Republican party called itself the party of great moral ideas in order to cover up its nefarious business of fleecing the many for the benefit of the favored few by means of that old confidence game euphoniously called a protective tariff. The swindle has been exposed and the party of hypocrisy tried a new dodge by turning its eyes toward heaven with a sanctimonious air and making believe that in advocating a 200-cent dollar for the benefit of the bondholders it was in reality standing for honest money and guarding the national honor.

Now that the question of imperialism, or the moral right of one people to rule another without its consent, has become the dominant issue, some of the old professors of sham and canting hypocricy cannot resist the impulse to make the pious pretense that they are interested in "saving the Filipions for Christ." Still, a number of the more honest members of the party have thrown off disguise and frankly admit that in the effort to overthrow as obsolete the principle of human rights on which our government was founded they are actuated by nothing more sublime than selfish greed.

RIOTS IN NEW YORK

WHITE MEN GO ON THE WARPATH FOR NEGROES.

The Shooting of a White Boy by a Negro Started the Trouble and the White Element Began to Search Out Negroes—Several Colored Men Attacked and Badly Beaten—Negroes Attempt to Rescue One of Their Number While in Custody of an Officer, but the Officer Holds the Mob at Bay Until Assistance Arrives.

New York, Aug., 27. — A number of incipient race riots broke out here yesterday, the direct cause being the shooting on Saturday of John Brennan, a white messenger boy, by John Davis, alias "Lamplighter," a negro. Brennan was one of a crowd of boys who taunted Davis and a bullet from the black man's gun lodged in the stomach of Brennan. He was taken to a hospital and is expected to die. The shooting becoming noised about the whole white element began to search out negroes. Before daybreak yesterday morning James Arnold, colored, while passing Sixty-fourth street and Amsterdam avenue, was attacked by a crowd of whites and badly beaten. He was treated at a hospital. Shortly afterward about two blocks away the gand doled out to Alexander Ballentine, a colored man who was passing quietly along. In neither case were arrests made. At 9:30 in the morning a crowd of whites, led by Frank McPike, twenty-four years of age, went to a five-story tenement of Sixtieth street, occupied by negroes, with the avowed intention of cleaning it out. They had about demolished the windows and incidentally cracked a head or two when the police arrived. McPike and another man were arrested. At 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon Joseph Doyle, eighteen years of age, filled his hat with stones and took his stand at Fifty-ninth street and Eleventh avenue. He succeeded in inflicting scalp wounds on two colored men before a policeman clubbed and arrested him. Officer John F. Cleary for "being sassy" William Hopson, a colored man. He rashly undertook to take his prisoner to the station through West Sixtieth street. This street between West End and Amsterdam avenues is called "Cuckoo Row," and here colored people live by the hundreds. The fact that one of their race was in the hands of a policeman was all that several of them wanted and half a dozen of them thought they would release Hopson. Cleary used his club and then drew his revolver and threatened to shoot the first man to make a move. In this way he held the mob at bay until other policemen came to his aid. They arrested George Meyer, also colored. Clarey said he started the attempted rescue. Meyer all the way to the station and when he got there he had several scalp wounds. One in particular was very large and it is thought the negro's skull is fractured. William and Henry Rapp, brothers, white, were arrested and locked up on complaint of Adam Johnson, colored, who claimed they had stoned him.

Placed Under Arrest

The above are only a few assaults which came to light by arrests. The fact is that all day long the police in the neighborhood mentioned were kept busy dispersing small mobs bent on mischief. The consequence is that the force is unusually alert and prepared to cope with any serious trouble should it break out.

Russia Buys Beef.

Chicago, Aug. 27. — Armour & Co. have received and order from the Russian government for 6,000,000 pounds of beef "on the hoof" to feed the soldiers of the czar in China. This is the largest order of the kind in the history of the Chicago meat trade. Options were said to have been taken up on every available ship in carrying trade on the Pacific. It will take 5,000 fatted cattle to fill the order. The cattle will be sent from San Francisco via Hawaii and Japan.

One More Eulogy.

Lieutenant A. W. Thomson says, in The Independent, that when the civil war was practically over he was sent from the camp at Lincolnton to Charlotte, N. C., under a flag of truce. He entered the town and was conducted to General Echols' headquarters in a large upper room, evidently a schoolroom.

Our guide pointed out the general, a fine, portly gentleman, seated at a table. I advanced and laid my papers on the table.

"General Echols, I presume?" I said. "These dispatches are from General Gillam. Shall I wait for an answer?"

"Please be seated," the general said.

Glancing around, I saw 16 or 18 gentlemen, all, with one or two exceptions, in military uniform. Colonel Morgan came up to me, shook hands and said:

"I believe you and I are not entire strangers."

He had been our prisoner a year or so before. While we chatted a gentleman in a civilian gray suit turned to address General Echols. The cold stare of a glass eye caught my attention, and the features were somewhat familiar.

"Ah, Jefferson Davis! Are you here, pressed to the wall?" was my first thought. His face was far more pleasant than our northern papers had pictured it.

A dispatch was handed to General Echols, who read and reread it with an earnest, anxious lok. Half rising, he passed the paper to Mr. Davis, who read it slowly and then handed it back.

"Well," said he, "we have lost a generous enemy."

It was the news of President Lincoln's assassination.

When They Say "Goodby."

Did you ever hear two married women take leave of each other at the gate on a mild evening? This is how they do it:

"Goodby!"

"Goodby! Come down and see us soon."

"I will. Goodby!"

"Goodby! Don't forget to come soon."

"No, I won't. Don't you forget to come up."

"I won't.

"Be sure and bring Sarah Jane with you next time."

"I will. I'd brought her up this time, but she wasn't very well. She wanted to come awfully."

"Did she, now? That was too bad. Be sure and bring her next time."

"I will, and you be sure and bring the baby."

"I will. I forgot to tell you that he's cut another tooth."

"You don't say so! How many has he now?"

"Five. It makes him awfully cross."

"I dare say it does."

"Well, goodby! Don't forget to come down."

"No, I won't. Don't you forget to come up. Goodby!"

And they separate.

A Story of Culberson.

In the Fifty-first congress, when Speaker Reed first gained the title of "czar" by his arbitrary decisions, Judge Culberson was one of his strongest supporters, although he gave the speaker no public indorsement, for political reasons. One afternoon while the Democrats were in a terrible tumult over a decision of the speaker and the proceedings of the house were very near riot a thunderstorm came up. When the confusion was highest, a blinding flash of lightning and a terrible crash of nature's artillery startled every soul on the floor and caused a profound silence. Judge Culberson, like everybody else, was deeply moved, but was the first to recover: "That was God Almighty, sir, calling this house to order," he exclaimed in an impressive tone, addressing the speaker. Then, turning to his colleagues, he said, "Now let us proceed to business like men."

An Unreliable Adage.

"I suppose you lay a great deal of stress on the adage 'Money talks,'" said the man who gets familiarly facetious.

"No, sir," said Senator Sorghum. "If you had observed as many investigations as I have, you'd know that the success of pecuniary enterprise frequently depends on the ability to keep perfectly still."—Washington Star.

International courtesies are to be observed even in disreputable professions. Josiah Flynt, who has shared the company of tramps in order to procure data as to their methods of living, relates an instance of true politeness from one of that unsavory brotherhood. He says in "Tramping With Tramps:"

"In Glasgow a fellow vagabond did me a good turn. We were walking along the street, when three town tramps came along and 'guyed' my hat. My companion noticed it, and I told him I had suffered in that way before. Then he turned sharply about on the scoffers and thundered out:

"'Who're you lookin at? Ef you're tryin to guy this Yank, you'd better stop! Ef you don't, there'll be a fight!'

"'Let's run,' said I, 'if you really mean that.'

"'Not much! I'm English, you know, and I can knock out any Scotchman that comes round. I'm in the mood for it right now.'

"The town vagabonds took him at his word and left. Then I said to him, 'You English fellows seem to have things pretty much your own way here.'

"'Yes,' said he; 'we English fellers know how to bluff. We've been bluffin the world now for a good many years.'

"'You forget the United States!' I could not help interjecting.

"'Beg pardon, Yank,' said he. 'Beg pardon!'"

Deceitful Man.

Two men were standing together in a postoffice. One of them happened to notice that a postcard held in the fingers of the other was addressed to the holder.

"Why, what does this mean?" he asked. "Do you address letters to yourself?"

"In this case, yes," was the answer.

"That's funny."

"Well, not so very. See the other side."

He held it up, and the other side read: "Brother Blank—There will be a meeting of the I. O. O. S. B., No. 227, at the hall tonight to transact special business. Members not present will be fined $10. J. B., secretary."

"Yes, but I don't exactly catch on," protested the innocent.

"Oh, you don't? Well, I got the cards printed myself. The society is all a myth. When I want to go out of an evening, I direct one of these cards to my house. I reach home, and my wife hands it to me with a sigh. I offer to stay home and stand the fine of 2 guineas, but of course she won't allow that. That's all, my friend, except that the scheme is worked by hundreds of others, and the poor, deluded wives haven't tumbled to it yet."

Unexpected Opposition.

While Lord Kitchener was engaged in suppressing the Prieska rebellion he ordered the destruction of a certain farmhouse. Not seeing any signs of his orders being carried out, he rode over with his staff and found an interesting situation.

In the doorway of the doomed farmhouse stood a pretty young Dutch girl, her hands clasping the doorposts and her eyes flashing fire from beneath her dainty sunbonnet. The Irish sergeant in charge of the party of destruction was vainly endeavoring to persuade her to let them pass in, but to all his blandishments of "Arrah darlint, wisha now, acushla," etc., the maiden turned a deaf ear, and a deadlock prevailed.

Kitchener's sharp "What's this?" put a climax to the scene.

The girl evidently guessed that this was the dreaded chief of staff, and her lips trembled in spite of herself.

Kitchener gazed sourly at her, standing bravely though tearfully there, and turned to his military secretary. "Put down," he growled, "that the commander's orders with reference to the destruction of Rightman's farm could not be carried out owing to unexpected opposition. Forward, gentlemen."—London News.

It Met Requirements.

Charles Hoyt, the farce writer, once invited a friend to go to the theater with him.

"What play?" queried his friend.

"Nat Goodwin in 'Nathan Hale,'" said the playwright.

"I'm very sorry," said the friend, "but you'll have to count me out."

"What's the matter?" asked Hoyt in surprise.

"Well, to be frank with you, I don't like Nat Goodwin in anything. I hate him personally and can't enjoy him as an actor, and, as far as I am concerned, I wouldn't mind seeing him dead."

"Then this is your play," slyly added Mr. Hoyt in his peculiar Yankee dialect. "You don't want to miss it. They hang him in the last act."—News Letter.

Too Primitive.

"No, Maria; I can't go to church until I possess a high hat and a frock coat."

"Nonsense. Think of the primitive fathers of the faith and their humble altars."

"I should think you'd blush to mention them, Maria. If I went to church as a primitive father, they'd send me home in an organ pipe."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He Had Had Experience.

We Want Correspondents.

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

A Misnamed Train.

He had driven from a backwoods hamlet to the station and after making an inquiry of the conductor boarded the train for Philadelphia.

When well on the way, he stopped the blue coated official and asked in all seriousness:

"I'm sorter hungry. Will ye just tell me where the eatin car is?"

"There is none on this train," was the answer. "Its short run does not require it."

"Huh!" grunted the questioner. "Wich of yer keers is the one that ye jest loll around in an turn an twist yer cheer any way ye please? Don't imagine that because I've never went railroadin afore I don't know all about these things."

"You probably mean the Pullman. We haven't any attached."

"Well, bu'stin squashes, where's yer cigar stand, so's I kin be buyin a weed an lightin up?"

"We don't have such a thing, man."

"An ye've no place fer me ter git my shoes shined, ter be sure?"

"No, sir."

"Course I'd be crazy ter think ye might have a barber lad aboard?"

"We haven't any."

The rural gentleman subjected the conductor to a menacing scrutiny from head to foot and back again; then he drawled out in an angry, disappointed tone of voice:

"Well, sufferin cornmeal! I thought ye said this wuz an accommodation train!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Rush of a Shell.

As a shell rushes through the air at the rate of 1,000 miles an hour it gets heavily charged with electricity by friction, says London Answers. It parts with it to any good conductor it meets on the way, doing terrible execution. Passing in front of a British soldier, a big shell gave him such a shock that he instantly fell dead.

In one of our wars two officers, standing side by side, saw a shell coming. They stood apart, and it passed between them without touching either. But one officer lost the sight of both eyes, and the other instantly became blind in one and soon lost the other also.

In another battle a soldier had just stooped to help a fallen comrade when a shell passed over his back. He fell forward quite disabled, and for months after he could not stand erect.

A curious accident of a similar kind happened to an American officer in the Cuban war. He was galloping across the field when a shell whirled past in front of him. His horse rolled over, and he himself became unconscious. On recovery he found that neither self nor steed had been wounded, and he knew that they had simply sustained a severe electric shock.

"Her Touch."

A sailor who met with a serious accident was carried to the London hospital. The poor mother hurried to the building to see her son. She was met by a kind but firm refusal from the house physician, but nothing daunted she pleaded for admission to the poor fellow's bedside. Who could resist a mother's entreaties? The safety of the patient lay in his being kept absolutely quiet, but the physician consented to her admission on condition that she did not speak a word. She stole softly to his bedside and gazed as only a mother can at her unconscious boy. She dare not speak, but a mother's love was not to be denied all expression, and gently laying her hand on his fevered brow she let it rest there a moment and then noiselessly crept from the room.

The watchful nurse heard the comatose sleeper murmur the words, "Her touch," and, rousing himself, he added, "Surely my mother has been here. I know her touch!"

Ah, there was an electric thrill of sympathy in that touch which told its own tale to the dying man!—Weekly Bouquet.

A Match Trick.

A feat which any one can perform with little or no practice is that of placing 14 matches upon a table and lifting them all up upon one of the matches. This is how it is done: Pick out one match—the one that has the flattest surface—and then place six of the other matches about one-fourth each across the first one, each of the six being parallel to each other and the thickness of a match distant from each other. Next place six other matches one-fourth each across the first match, but from the other side, all parallel and in the spaces left by the arrangement of the first six matches. Now take the fourteenth match, lay it over the 12 matches where they intersect, and by carefully lifting match No. 1 and holding match No. 14 in place you will accomplish without difficulty the feat.—Adelaide Herrmann in Woman's Home Companion.

The Jefferson Bible.

"The Jefferson Bible in the Smithsonian institution," says the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record, "has never been printed. The manuscript remains as it left Jefferson's hands, and, although several persons have proposed from time to time to print it, no one has ever done so. The Bible consists only of the teachings of Christ, extracts from the gospel arranged in chronological order from his birth to his ascension, and nothing else. All controversial passages are left out."

Crazy to Expect It.

Harduppe—Say, old fellow, lend me a hundred, will you?

Riggs—A hundred what?

Harduppe—A hundred dollars. I—

Riggs—Oh, stop your joking.

Harduppe (earnestly)—Joking? I was never more serious in my life. I'm broke.

Riggs—My dear man, you're not broke. You're cracked!—Catholic Standard and Times.

Minnesota never had a better chief executive than Governor Lind." The Times is one of the newspapers which the Republican press bureau claims, have changed to the Republican side.

She was a bright girl and they were at the game of base ball. She had won his enthusiastic heart by understanding the game right off and he loved her even more than if she had been his sister. Guarding the President.

The safeguarding of the life of President McKinley from anarchists or the more feared class, cranks, is divided between the United States secret service and the local police department, says a special to the New York World from Washington. To reach the president while in Washington one must be known or have trustworthy credentials, and even then every visitor is under constant surveillance, and a menacing move would be instantly arrested by some of the attaches at the White House or the secret service men or local detectives constantly on guard at the executive mansion. Geo. F. Foster, one of the most trustworthy men in the secret service, is charged with guarding the life of President McKinley at all times when he is not in the White House. Foster travels on the same car stand on the steps when the president appears, and is always on guard at the door of the car. Charles Tharon, a Swede who is known as "Frenchy" to the White House employes, acts as the president's valet on all his trips, and is also in the secret service. He is virtually the presiden't body-guard. His wife is Mrs. McKinley's maid. The two mount guard over the president and Mrs. McKinley every time they take a trip or stop at a strange place, and it is their duty to see that no one reaches the private apartments of the president and wife.

In addition to Foster and Tharon there are several reliable men from the secret service always detailed to accompany the president when he is away from Washington. At the White House no one is allowed to enter except by the front door.

From the number of sporty looking citizens seen sneaking out of St. Hilaire lately with dogs and guns and other ominous gear, it would seem that the gun club of that village is more or less of a myth.—Thief River Press.

Yep, two rigs equipped with the whole hunting paraphernalia, including water for a dozen dogs, went out the day the five game wardens were here—but—they would not bite. If Thief River Falls had a gun club, and did as much to protect the chicken crop as the St. Hilaire gun club did, a thousand or more chickens would be spared to this date. We don't like to say anything about this matter, but we have it from good authority that prairie chicken and grouse have been killed almost daily since the 4th day of July by would-be sports of the upper Falls—and they don't feel ashamed of it either—making it all the worse.

Wall street is astounded at the financial doings of the Standard Oil Company. And for Wall Street to be astonished over a big profit, is saying a great deal. So far this year, the Standard Oil company has paid cash dividents of 38 million dollars, and it is said, that other dividends will run the total up to 48 million dollars for 1900. Just think of this vast profit for one year. This is nearly 2 millions more than the total of the dividends paid in 1899 by all the national banks in the United States.—Argus.

Executive Agent Beutner of the State Game Commission has advised all field game wardens that by the decision of the attorney General non-residents must pay a license of $25.00 to hunt or fish in this state. The law will be strictly enforced and notices will be posted conspicuously all over the state that none may plead ignorance.

A "round up" of exhibits and attractions reveals the fact that the State Fair of the present year will surpass even the expectations and announcements of its officers. Every building and every department is full to overflowing, and tent space is all that is left for belated applicants for places to exhibit. The exposition building, Horticultural hall, Dairy hall, Womans building, Poultry building, Agricultural hall, the Machinery buildings, the horse cattle, sheep and swine barns—all are crowded. Never before have such comprehensive and instructive exhibits been secured for a State Fair in this country. The amusement program is now fully completed and is high class throughout. Each afternoon there will be trotting, pacing and running races, with big purses and large fields of horses. Each evening there will be running races on the electric lighted half mile track and Pain's wonderfully realistic and brilliant spectacular pyrotechnic exhibition, "Dewey's Fleet in the Battle of Manila." Trapeze horizontal bar and bounding wire exhibitions will be seen both afternoon and evening and there will be continuous concert music by the best bands in the state. The Fair and the half rates announced by all the railways for that week, Sept. 3-8, seems to have been well advertised and an unusual attendance is expected. It will be the holiday week of the year.

"One Hundred Years in the White House," opening the September Ladies' Home Journal, gives some highly interesting glimpses of the social life of the country, and of the home life of our Presidents since the time the Adamses moved into the executive mansion as its first occupants, in November, 1800. The "Romances of some southern Homes," in the same issue, pictures the most notable historic mansions of the South, and recalls the incidents which made them famous—their brave men and beautiful women. Some new anecdotes attract further interest to the beloved Phillips Brooks, as a man and as a preacher. They are characteristic and exceedingly well told. Anticipating the rather radical change that fashion has decreed in woman's attire, ten special articles are devoted to the fall and winter modes. The pictorial features of the September Journal include a page drawing of "Loiterers at the Railroad Station," as A. B. Frost sees them; "The Wonders of California Gardens," and the beauties of Yellowstone Park. There are numerous practical articles and much else that is helpful in the departments. Climate and Crop Bulletin.

For the week ending August 27, 1900.

There were rains in all parts of the stace in the middle of the week. At many points the rains were heavy on the 24th, and there were scattered heavy showers on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd. In the South advantage was taken of the dry weather and stacking and thrashing from the stack are well advanced. In central and northern portions the rains have seriously delayed stacking and shock thrashing, or stopped them altogether, and a great deal of grain in shock was much injured, as is also some in stack. The straw of much grain was so short that it was impossible to make shocks that would turn the heavy rains that they have been exposed to, and some grain was stacked before it was dry enough. The wheat in southern counties has yielded well so far, but in the northern two-thirds of the state, the wheat is very uneven, and a great deal of it is very poor. The grade of wheat still remaining in stock will be considerably lowered. Late flax continues to do well. Corn is ripening rapidly, and many are cutting it. Plowing is going on well, and it is well advanced for the season, though the heat, flies and mosquitos have been so distressing to the horses that many have delayed this work till later. The apple and plum crops are good.

They are able to do this on account of there being no middle man's profit, as the goods are sold direct from the factory to the wearer. In 60 of the principal cities of the country they have their own retail stores. The goods are made in all sizes and widths, and few shoes equal them for style and durability.

The factory at Brockton employs over 1,100 hands, and all labor troubles are settled by the state board of arbitration. Nothing but union labor is employed, and pay about the best average wages of any shoe workers in the United States. The factory pay roll amounts to $17,435 per week. MINNESOTA FORESTRY

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST FOREST FIRES.

Fifth Annual Report of the Chief Fire-Warden of Minnesota.

The law for the prevention and suppression of forest and prairie fires has been in operation five years, and the fifth annual report of the Chief Fire Warden, Gen. C. C. Andrews, being for the year 1899, has just been published. It is a document of 144 pages, and contains numerous original illustrations of Minnesota forests. The law constitutes town supervisors fire wardens, and in unorganized townships having inhabitants the Chief Fire Warden appoints fire wardens. The Chief Fire Warden can mass the fire warden force of the state at any special point to suppress fires. In ordinary years their pay cannot exceed fifteen days at two dollars a day. In emergencies, any able-bodied male citizen 18 years of age may be called upon to help extinguish a fire, for which he may be paid $1.50 a day for not exceeding five days in a year. It is the duty of chairmen and of fire wardens in unorganized territory to investigate and report fires to the Chief Fire Warden. Such officers are furnished with blanks for the purpose and stamped return envelope, and may charge a fee for making reports. The number of forest fires reported for 1899 was only 10; acres burned over, 3,635; damage, $1,541. Number of prairie fires, 34; acres burned over, 24,616; damage, $4,856. The drought of 1900, regarded by many as equal to that of 1894, when the Hinckley fire occurred, had been broken just as the report was ready to be printed. In regard to this period the Chief Fire Warden says: "There have been many forest fires, but from all the information I have received I doubt if the aggregate damage caused by them will exceed $300,000, or 3 per cent of the total valuation of the forests. There has been no loss of life. Considering the vast extent of the forest region, the great activity prevailing and the dangerous weather, the damage is less than might have been expected. While in some cases fire warden could, no doubt, have been more on the alert, it is nevertheless a fact that many fires were prevented, controlled and extinguished by fire wardens. The fact that I have received over 300 reports from various fire wardens, relating to fires and the precautions being taken during the drought, is evidence of their interest and activity."

The Pay of Fire Wardens.

Under the present law it is the duty of county commissioners to audit the accounts of fire wardens when satisfied of the justice of the claim, but in two or three of the thirty counties where fire warden service should be active the county commissioners have refused to audit such accounts, and have practically nullified the law in their counties. The state promptly reimburses each county to the amount of one-third of what they expend for fire warden service, and no county can expend more than $500 in any one year under the fire warden law. What better method can be devised for the payment of fire warden claims than by counties? If payment be left to the respective town boards, a levy for the purpose will have to be voted each year by the town meeting, and it might frequently happen that the towns which most needed the service would fail to vote the money. Also it might often happen that money would be voted and not actually required; in which case there would be temptation to spend it. There might be cases where towns could not afford to pay the necessary expense. Suppose the state would assume to pay all such expenses, how could a central officer very well scrutinize the accounts? Would there not be liability of much more excessive accounts being presented than under the present system?

We made the following additional extracts from the report:

Punishment for Carelessly Causing Fires.

A few persons have been convicted and punished the past year for carelessly causing fires. Fire wardens, however, are reluctant to institute criminal proceedings; and it is natural that they should be unwilling to make criminal complaint against a man who, perhaps, will be their neighbor or townsman through life. Still, men who accept official trusts should have courage to discharge them faithfully. Communities often feel that a man is being wronged if he is prosecuted; they do not stop to think that the principal object of punishment is to deter others from committing similar offenses. Very good people are liable to be careless, and when we punish a man who, in a heedless and careless spirit, sets a fire in very dry and windy weather, which he ought to know he cannot control and which destroys or endangers the property of others, he should be made an example of; not for revenge or because we wish to injure him, but as a warning to many others to refrain from doing the same.

Guarantees by Railroad Companies Against Fires.

The act of congress of March 3, 1875, grants railroad companies rights of way through the public lands of the United States, and the act of congress of March 2, 1899, grants general right of way for railroads through Indian reservations; and the laws of Minnesota give railroad companies power to acquire rights of way by purchase or condemnation of land. None of these laws provide guarantees against causing forest fires by companies operating railroads, and it would seem that they should be amended so as to secure proper guarantees against such evils.

Fires on Indian Reservations.

While the fire warden law applies to white people on Indian reservations, it does not apply to Indians on their reservations; with the view, therefore, to having some regulations adopted that would help prevent forest fires on Indian reservations, I visited Washington in the early part of December last, and had satisfactory interviews with the secretary of the interior, the commissioner of the general land office and with the commissioner of Indian affairs, with the result that the latter issued regulations and instructions, in form of a letter to the United States Chippewa Indian agent at White Earth, under date of December 23, 1899.

What Forestry Science Is.

Forestry is the science of growing trees for profit and should interest us in this state, because our climate and much of the soil is peculiarly adapted for growing pine. The white pine loves good soil, but it is not an exacting tree, and will thrive on poor soil. True economy demands, and it is a fundamental principle of forestry that good soil be reserved for field crops. It takes eighty years on an average to raise a crop of pine trees on sandy soil. This is too long for individuals to wait for a crop, and, if the business is to be undertaken extensively it must be by the state. The one great truth to be impressed on the public mind is, that we have in Minnesota about three million acres of idle land which is fit only for bearing pine, and which, if planted with pine and administered on forestry principles, would earn a net revenue of 3 per cent per annum, compound interest on the capital expended in the work.

Should Lay the Foundations of Sustained Forest Yield.

To-day we are cutting fifteen hundred million feet of pine in our Minnesota forests each year, but in twenty years the demand on our forest resources will be far greater than now. We should begin to lay the foundations of sustained forest products; because nature will work with us. It was Frederick the Great who started forestry in Prussia, and the people of Minnesota can do as much for their state, if they will but give the matter attention. Fortunately, we have not the incentive that he had when, after six years' absence in a foreign war, he returned to a country reduced as Carlyle says, "to skin and bones."

The value of the 10,000,000 acres of state forests in Germany, being on land unfit for agriculture, is $700,000,000, an amount equal to the total assessed valuation of property in Minnesota. The average net revenue therefrom is $23,000,000. And the forests are more in the nature of a park than of a wilderness. The principles of forestry are the same here as in Germany, but, owing to the denser population, cheaper labor and higher value of products, the profits of forestry there are much greater than could be expected here for a time. However, they would be fair here, and prove from the start the mother of wages. The sun, air and rain—all great factors in forest growth—are ready to go into partnership with our state in the forestry business, the state to furnish its sandy soil as capital, and receive all the dividends.

Proposed National Park—Vandalism.

A year ago last August I visited Cass Lake, and found, to my surprise and delight, on its south shore, such an ideal pine forest as, with the remarkably clean and sandy beach, formed one of the most beautiful spots for a health and summer resort that could be imagined. I gave to the press some account of it at the time. Later a joint committee of the state medical societies made a visit there, and through the influence of a committee of woman's clubs the legislature memorialized the president to postpone for two years the sale of the land, so that the State of Minnesota might, if it should then deem it expedient, buy the same for a park.

Judge of my surprise and indignation, then, to find, as I did, on visiting the same spot again in the early part of July, 1899, that a dozen or more acres of this beautiful forest were lumbered and cut over the preceding winter, on the fraudulent pretense of its being "dead-and-down timber." The tops and branches of the trees—slashings as they are called—are now lying there, endangering the rest of the forest in the event of dry weather. Notwithstanding the terrible injury and disfigurement the forest is not ruined for a park. But in May, 1899, fires were set on the eastern side, the traces of which cover quite an area, and were set for the purpose, as is generally believed, of making pretext for another contract the coming winter to lumber it as "dead-and-down timber."

This sad and wicked despoilment of one of the most beautiful places of scenery Minnesota possesses was perpetrated under the fraudulent system of lumbering "dead-and-down timber," a system which offers a premium for firing the forest, and which was cunningly devised to enable rascals to obtain standing pine at a price far below its value. The government at Washington is directly responsible, and our people should hold their senators and representatives in congress accountable and responsible that nothing of the kind occurs again, for they are the officers elected to conduct the affairs of Minnesota with the executive departments at Washington and with congress.

Some Reasons for the Park.

If the park be acquired it will be managed on forestry principles. The mature pine will be cut and honestly accounted for. Of course, some groves of the handsomest pine on lake shores will be preserved. The younger growth of forest will be protected; bare spots will be planted; a substantial yield and revenue will be maintained; yet, in fifty years, the forest in the park will be more valuable, and the park itself more beautiful than at present. If here and there are tracts of good agricultural land, they will be cultivated. The establishment of the park will give a wonderful impulse to forestry, and prove a boon to the Northwest that few now can realize. We have not in Minnesota, the White Mountains nor the Catskills, but we have as beautiful pine forests, and as beautiful clear lakes in their midst, as can anywhere be found; and future generations will reproach us if we allow all of such scenery to be forever ruined.

What the United States Receives for Its Pine.

Lumbering has been going on in the pineries of Minnesota for more than half a century. For a number of years back the pine that has been cut each year in Minnesota has averaged in value just as it stood in the woods, $5,000,000. Fully $100,000,000 worth of pine has been cut in this state, and $25,000,000 worth more has passed into the possession of private parties. For all this how much has the government of the United States received in money? It is true that some of the pine was granted to railway companies, but all that the United States has received for pine lands in Minnesota does not amount to $7,000,000. Beginning with the year 1849, and up to October, 1897, all that the United States has received for public lands at its land offices at Stillwater, Sauk Rapids, St. Cloud, Taylor's Falls, Duluth, Alexandria, Fergus Falls and Crookston—offices whose districts included all of the pine lands and much agricultural land—amounted to exactly $7,266,599.40! In view of these facts and figures, it would seem strange, indeed, and most lamentable if a little remnant of all the great pine forests of Minnesota could not be spared for forestry and for a health and pleasure resort for the people.

Other features of this report are sketches of the forestry systems of as many as sixteen different European states, observations on the Big Fork forests; a detailed forest "working plan," quoted by permission from Dr. William Schlich's Manual of Forestry and Dr. C. A. Schenck's report to the State Forestry Board of Minnesota on "The Problem of Forestry in Minnesota." There are also maps showing the location of standing pine in Lake and St. Louis counties.

UNVARNISHED TRUTHS

WORK OF THE STATE RAILROAD AND WAREHOUSE COMMISSION.

The Grain Inspection—The New Freight Schedules—The Republican Bureau of Prevarication—Odds and Ends of Interest to the Reform Forces.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, Aug. 27, 1900.

The Republican bureau which has been established for the purpose of manufacturing alleged facts for use in the campaign in this state has succeeded in persuading a considerable number of the country papers that some good might be done at this time by the publication of certain falsehoods concerning the present administration of the state grain inspection department. In effect, the statement which has been sent out is this: When Mr. Clausen was chief grain inspector the inspection fee was only 15 cents per car load. Under the present administration the fee was raised to 20 cents, then to 25 cents, and now it may be raised to 30 cents. From these alleged facts the farmers are asked to draw the inference that the department is managed less economically than it was under the old regime.

The Republican campaign managers know the charges to be false in every essential feature; but some who are publishing them may regard them as true. It may, therefore, not be amiss to give the exact facts in the case and put the falsifiers down. The figures are taken from the official records of the railroad and warehouse commission and their correctness may be verified by anyone interested in learning the truth.

During the greater part of the time when Mr. Clausen was chief grain inspector the fee was 25 cents. This was the case in 1895 and 1896. On Jan. 1, 1897, the fee was reduced to 15 cents. This reduction could be made because there was a large amount of money standing to the credit of the department. On Nov. 30, 1896, this amount was $123,268.54. The fee of 15 cents was entirely inadequate to defray the expenses. As a result the cash in the grain inspection fund was reduced in two and a half years from $123,268.54 to $21,236.10. The last session of the legislature having created a board of appeals and thereby increased the expenses of the department by about $20,000 a year, it was necessary to increase the inspection fee. It was raised to 20 cents and then, after most of the crop of 1899 had been marketed, to 25 cents. This action had to be taken in order that a deficit might be avoided.

The salient point is that there was a loss of $40,000 a year when the fee was 15 cents. The department could stand this for two years by using up more than $100,000 of the cash standing to its credit in the treasury. But the drain could not go on any longer without plunging the department into debt. The actual cost of the inspection and weighing service was, according to the official accounts, lower in 1899 than in any previous year except 1892. In 1896 it was $174,808.24 for 179,307,770 bushels; in 1897 it was $176,220.97 for 156,168,200 bushels; in 1898 it was $191,681.12 for 158,092,600 bushels, and in 1899 it was $213,764.54 for 218,133,100 bushels.

It will be necessary for the Republican bureau to invent a new story for the one about the alleged extravagance in the grain inspection department is too plainly at variance with the demonstrable facts.

Sept. 4 is the date fixed by the railroad and warehouse commission for the final hearing in the matter of rates on merchandise to be charged by the railroads of this state. A proposition has been made by the commission which was submitted to the railroads some days ago. Without going into details the result of the commissioners' schedules, if adopted by the railroads, will be: First, to place all distributing or competitive merchandise and manufacturing industries on the same footing—thus permitting industries in the smaller towns to compete on a fair basis with like concerns in the larger centers; second, to establish a uniform gradation of rates substantially on a mileage basis, while permitting the long lines to compete with the shorter ones; third, a moderate and conservative reduction of rates on all merchandise, both from terminals and between local stations.

It has been the aim of the commission to abolish the shortsighted policy, so often adopted by railroad managements when left to their own devices, of loading down the smaller towns with unjust and prohibitive discriminations. These discriminations, while they dwarf the energies of the smaller places, are also a positive damage to the centers which it is attempted to favor, because it dwarfs the development of the country upon which they depend for support. It is a very reasonable view, too, that if you build up the country the cities will benefit by the country's prosperity; while if you attempt to build up the city at the expense of the country you injure and dwarf both of them.

In going about this matter the commission has had in view the failures of states that have attempted to accomplish too much at once, and have submitted a proposition so eminently fair and safe that no fears are entertained as to its ultimate success.

It is generally admitted that much good work has been done by the department of public instruction in Minnesota since Superintendent Lewis was placed in charge by Governor Lind. What has been accomplished will be far reaching in its effects in the raising of standards and the betterment of educational conditions. "Keep us posted on your new ideas. We feel that Minnesota is taking many steps in advance of us in educational matters," so writes the Ohio commissioner of education to Superintendent Lewis.

One important action taken by Superintendent Lewis has been the revision of the normal school system of the state. The Minnesota normal schools had long been below the standard of other normal schools in the country and below the standard contemplated when they were founded: They were doing high school and grade work. Superintendent Lewis insisted that in giving their time to work which was better done in the state high schools, the normal schools were not fulfilling their proper functions. He therefore, with the cordial support of the governor, drafted a scheme to raise the standard of the normal schools by making the conditions for admission more stringent, stiffening the course of study, doing entirely away with the elementary courses, and extending the work required for graduation from the advanced course.

At first there were some objections against the proposed change but it was put into effect, and today the Minnesota normal schools rank as high as any in the whole country. Furthermore, the department under Superintendent Lewis prepared and secured the passage by the legislature of a law for the uniform examination of state teachers. The superintendent was instrumental, also, in securing the passage of the Argetsinger bill, which more than doubled the state aid to the high schools and the common schools in the rural districts.

These are only a few instances of many, indicating how the service has been improved during the present state administration.

A report to the railroad and warehouse commission shows that the Duluth weights on grain have during the present year fallen short in Buffalo by only 8 pounds per 1,000 bushels. Considering the fact that the grain is handled twice, in and out, this is a remarkably good showing. In the preceding six years the weights fell short, per 1,000 bushels: Thirty-five pounds in 1894, 30 pounds in 1895, 30 pounds in 1896, 17 pounds in 1897, 20 pounds in 1898, 17 pounds in 1899.

The Republicans are making much ado about the return of Senator Stewart of Nevada to the Republican fold. There is nothing surprising about his action. In order to secure a re-election he was compelled to make terms with the late Collis P. Huntington and his railroad interests, and since that time he has voted with the Republicans on all questions.

In a letter to General John M. Palmer, Theodore Roosevelt has explained that in speaking of the Democrats as standing for dishonor and dishonesty at home and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad, he did not mean all Democrats, but only those who endorse the Democratic platform and vote the Democratic ticket. This is a distinction without a difference and puts Roosevelt in even a worse light than before he offered his explanation.

The gist of the Republican charges against Governor Lind is that he has a habit of displaying pernicious activity in doing his official duty. He refuses to follow the Republican example of drawing his salary and letting the business of the state run itself. One of the latest instances of his pernicious activity is a letter to Professor Otto Lugger asking that the farmers of the state be warned against the danger from locusts or grasshoppers, and advised how they may protect themselves against future damage by the simple method of plowing all their stubble fields during the fall.

In his speech at Topeka Aug. 24, in reply to the committee which gave him the official notification of his nomination by the Populists as their candidate for the presidency, Mr. Bryan effectually gave the lie to the assertion made by Republicans that he is trying to dodge the silver issue. He spoke with all possible clearness and emphasis, showing that while imperialism now has become the most threatening danger, the money question has by no means been definitely settled. In 1896 this question was, he declared, of paramount importance and the allies in that campaign united in the demand for the immediate restoration of silver by the independent action of this country. They were defeated, but that did not end the matter. The Democrats were defeated in 1888, but that did not end the agitation for tariff reform. Defeat at the polls does not necessarily decide a great problem.

"If an increase in the volume of the currency since 1896, although unpromised by the Republicans, and unexpected, has brought improvement in industrial conditions, this improvement, instead of answering the arguments put forth in favor of bimetalism, only confirms the contention of those who insisted that more money would make better times.

"The Republican party, however, while claiming credit for the increase in circulation, makes no permanent provision for an adequate supply of standard money. It denies the necessity for more real money, while it permits national banks to expand the volume of paper promises to pay money."

The silver question is not dead, but is merely allowed to rest while matters more pressing at this time are being discussed. No question is finally settled until it is settled right. P. S.

Not So Easy After All.

At one of his famous little dinners a prominent professional man of Washington was greatly pleased with the salad, as were also his guests. Evidently it was partly meat and partly vegetable, but the flavor was new, distinct and undeterminable. This was so faint that one guest declared: "It's not a taste at all; only a smell."

At length some one suggested that the chef be asked for the recipe, upon which the host remarked:

"My man greatly dislikes being asked for recipes. On this occasion, however, his vanity may overcome him if we tell him how greatly we have enjoyed the dinner, and the salad in particular. At any rate, we'll see."

The Frenchman soon appeared, and was visibly affected, not to say elated, by the compliments.

"Eet gif me gret plaisir," he said, "to tell how I mak ze sal-lad. Eet ver' simple. I haf ze laitue 'rrage ready; an' I haf ze meat chop ver' fine; an' I haf ze pomme de terre, ze patate, an' stan' a leetle an' dry; zen I mix zem up. A dear old lady with soft blue eyes, white ringlets around her ears and a quaint purple gown, got on a Third street car during the late torrid wave. She looked rosy, but cool and comfortable, while the others on the car were mopping their brows, fanning themselves and cursing inwardly.

As Miss '49 got on the car she said to the conductor, "Hi want to get hoff at H'm street."

"All right," said the conductor, and the car went on. Nothing happened until L street was reached, when suddenly the old lady looked up and asked, "H'is this he'l?"

"You bet it is," said a big, perspiring man, and soft, low cries of, "here, here," mingled with the laughter that rippled through the car.—Salt Lake Tribune.

UNDISGUISED GREED

ONE OF THE CONVERTS TO THE REPUBLICAN GOSPEL OF GREED.

The Awful Anarchist Plot—Republican Anti-Imperialists. General Apathy Will Be the Explanation—The Independent Republican Governor of Wisconsin—Other Odds and Ends.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 3, 1900.

Charles Denby, ex-minister to China, is being paraded in the Republican press as a recent convert to the McKinley cause. A convert, indeed! Mr. Denby was made a member of Mr. McKinley's first Philippine commission because he was known to be an imperialist. Since that time he has been engaged in writing of the advantages of imperial dominion. He is, as the Chicago Chronicle says, an imperialist of the most sordid kind, with no admixture of religion, humanity, benevolent assimilation or anything but pure and blind greed. Witness this extract from an article which he wrote for The Forum, and which was printed in that magazine in the number for February, 1899:

"The hard, practical question alone remains: Will the possession of these islands benefit us as a nation? If it will not set them free tomorrow and let their people, if they please, cut each other's throats or cut what pranks they please."

The Chronicle offers this pertinent comment:

"It will be seen that there is no Christianity or humanity or duty or destiny nonsense about that. There is no fear that "the world would laugh at us" or that some vulture nation would swoop down and make a meal of the islands if we should "haul down the flag" and "sail away."

"Denby's policy immediately the subjugation enterprise was openly entered upon more than a year and a half ago was the most cold-blooded "scuttle policy." His policy was: Keep the Philippines regardless of the wishes of their ten millions of people if you can make it pay. If you cannot make it pay turn them loose and let the people cut each other's throats or go to the devil any other way. You are out for the stuff, and all talk of humanity or duty is mere stuffing for sentimental ears."

Everybody is now laughing at that awful plot to assassinate President McKinley, which was reported to have been hatched by Italian anarchists and which was recently unearthed by the chief of our government secret service. The prompt arrest of two of the desperate anarchists on their arrival in New York from Naples was expected to result in some terrible revelations and create a sentimental regard for the president whose life had thus been providentially saved. But the thing has fallen flat.

The real facts appear to be these: Natale Moresca, one of the men arrested on suspicion of having been sent to this country by the Italian anarchists with orders to assassinate President McKinley, was a poor laborer in Naples. He wanted to marry a girl, who also was courted by another lover. Moresca was the favored suitor. He decided to go to America in hopes of making some money, and it was understood that the wedding would take place on his return to Naples. He secured a situation as waiter on the Kaiser Wilhelm and sailed for New York. His rival wrote an anonymous letter to Mr. Byington, the United States consul at Naples, denouncing Moresca and another man, Guida, who also sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm, as anarchists who were going to the United States for the purpose of murdering the president. The consul wired the startling news to New York and the two men were arrested immediately on their arrival.

This appears to be the whole truth regarding the awful tragedy which was averted by the courage and skill of the detectives in the secret service of our government.

There was a time when John Hay, the present premier of the McKinley government, believed what would be rank treason in one of the latter-day Republicans. In his book, "Castillian Days," he says:

"There are those who think the Spaniards are not fit for freedom. I believe that no people are fit for anything else."

Charles Sumner, one of the greatest of Republicans in his time, said in a speech on the acquisition of Alaska:

"I cannot disguise my anxiety that every stage in our predestined future shall be by natural process, without war, and, I may add, even without purchase. There is no territorial aggrandizement which is worth the price of blood."

Another old fashioned Republican, John Sherman, said in a speech at a soldiers' reunion in Mansfield, O., Aug. 26, 1899:

"I am and always have been opposed to war in the Philippines. We have no business there, and I hope they will soon be left alone to govern themselves. I shall be glad to welcome the day when the soldier boys shall be called home from the Philippines. We shall then again be the same great family as we have been heretofore. The war is not only an expensive war, but it is also unnecessary, uncalled for, and unjust."

Republicans everywhere appear to be casting about for some plausible explanation which they may offer when their fears have been realized in November. They are saying that they will win if they only succeed in getting out their full vote. But they fear the result because of over-confidence. There is, they say, general apathy in their ranks. Several of the leaders have sounded a note of warning against over-confidence. Of course, this simply means that Republicans are troubled with apathy, not because they are confident of McKinley's election, but because they don't care whether he is elected or not.

Lyman Gage, secretary of the treasury, says that if Bryan should become president "he could order his secretary of the treasury to make payable in silver all the public debt payable in coin and all current disbursements as well."

If this were true it would prove the loose-jointedness of the Republican legislation for the firm establishment of the gold standard.

Nothing, says the Philadelphia Record, affords more convincing proof of the plutocratic tendencies of the Republic party than the frank confidence with which Chairman Hanna goes from city to city making his levies for campaign funds upon rich men and officeholders who have obtained wealth and preferment through partisan favoritism. He told the Philadelphia magnates who on Saturday last were gathered to see him that Philadelphia would be drawn upon for $600,000. This is an immense sum. If the size of the draft be any criterion of the real exigencies of the McKinley campaign it is an evidence of desperation.

Edward Scofield, governor of Wisconsin, is a Republican who refuses to take his views ready-made from the headquarters of his party. At the banquet of the Iron Brigade in Chicago some days ago the governor made a speech and raised his voice in warning against the growing spirit of militarism. He used this language:

"The most highly trained army, all the authorities to the contrary notwithstanding, can never subdue wholly an army of intelligent men fighting for their homes. This fact becomes more true every year and our nation will do well to heed it. We have had a taste of war recently, which unquestionably has awakened a military spirit, and what we have now to guard ourselves against is a too great and dangerous growth of this spirit. We prefer peace and we are a nation whose glory is that when it does engage in war it is not for conquest, but for righteousness sake."

He declared that "our path to glory in an honorable future does not lie through bloody seas."

The poem entitled "America and Liberty," by Professor Wilhelm Petterson of Minneapolis, is becoming famous. It contains these spirited and patriotic lines, which will appeal to every believer in the true American doctrine of human rights:

Who said "Haul down our flag?" No man Whose warm blood is American.
"Thou Freedom's noblest symbol, rise
In growing splendor to the skies;
And be, where'er thou art unfurled,
The flag of hope to all the world."
But, mark ye well, our flag must wave
O'er loosened chains, to free, to save.
And if they say it waves its folds
O'er ships with slavery in their holds;
And if they say it waves o'er lands
Where men in arms as conquerer stands.
'Tis but a false, pretentious rag,
'Tis not OUR flag, 'tis NOT our flag.
OUR flag must wave, where'er it be,

The Goodhue County News pays this deserved tribute to Governor Lind:

"There is not a department of the state's activity where his influence is not felt, invariably in the people's interest. The secretary of state neglected his duty; Governor Lind called his attention to the lapse by citing facts without comment. Other governors never troubled themselves with the state's affairs in the attorney general's office. Governor Lind, without officiousness, has had more consultations with the attorney general than all his predecessors. Other governors have named railroad commissioners and let it go at that. Governor Lind knows what the railroad commission is doing and has made not a few suggestions upon which some of their most important initiatives were based. In the coal rate case, the Southern Minnesota grain rates, the Northern Minnesota joint rate case, he has been informed of every step.

"Other governors have appointed their boards and then gone off and left them. Governor Lind never fails, if he can help it, to attend the meetings of the prison board, the charities and corrections, and so on. There is not an institution with whose workings he is not familiar. There is not a problem he has not studied. There is not an interest of the state upon which he is not informed. There is not an interest of the people for which he is not zealously concerned.

"Nobody knows how much he has done for the state, how useful his labors have been. He is governor every minute and to every purpose."

The Des Moines Weekly Globe, a Republican paper, believes in imperialism and makes no secret of it. The paper speaks right out in favor of a change in our form of government. It develops its views in this wise:

"For a long time thinking people who have large commercial interests have felt unsafe with our present form of government from the fact that we are controlled by the little cheap John politicians and ward heelers. Now is a good time to do away with our obsolete Constitution and adopt a form of government that will be logical with our new expansion ideas and will give ample protection to capital. A constitutional monarchy is probably the most desirable plan that we could now adopt. Everything is ripe for the change. We take it that the great farming interests of our land will readily adapt themselves to the change. The farmer is a great lover of law and order, and anti-monarchy is largely the expression of French revolutionary ideas suggested by hot-headed theorists." P. S.

MADAME F. T.: The latest predictions are that your attentions to the fair Minnie Sota are becoming obnoxious. Your rival has become the light of her eye, and is particularly favored by her relatives. I advise you to retreat and cast your affections on the beautiful Missis Ippi, who has stood by you all these years of worry and toil, etc., etc.

BRAVE DEEDS

The Chicago American's Terrific Arraignment of the Rough Rider.

Tribute to Mr. Bryan's Honesty and Courage by the Springfield Republican.

Towne's Warning Against the Sacrifice of America's Moral Leadership.

TWO "BRAVE DEEDS" IN COL. ROOSEVELT'S LIFE.

Hearst's Chicago American.

Martha Place, a half-demented old woman, committed a most atrocious murder. It was a murder of jealousy. Homely, old, ill-tempered, not loved by her husband, she brutally murdered her step-daughter because she was jealous of the husband's attention to the step-daughter.

Newspapers had predicted that she never would die in the electric chair. Governor Morton, a plain old gentleman, who had never shot anybody in the back and had no especial claims to glory, had twice declared when governor that he would not allow a woman to be killed by electricity. No woman had ever been killed by electricity. None—not even the very worst—had been executed in the state for years.

But Martha Place committed her murder and was convicted when Roosevelt was governor.

Roosevelt feared nothing. When urged by his friends and family not to allow the old woman to be killed so brutally, he snapped his white teeth and declared that "mawkish sentimentality" could not move him.

Women and decent men appealed to him, but his "courage" could not be moved.

"What," he asked, "an electric chair paid for by the state and no governor has had the courage to send a woman to that electric chair? I'll show them what I dare do."

It was no idle boast.

The day came, the old woman was half carried into the death room. The back of her head was shaved so that the current might easily reach her brain. One of her legs was bared to the hip that the second electrode might burn her without setting fire to her clothing.

A score of men looked on at this sight, which history owes to the "brave" Governor Roosevelt. It was a sight to be seen only once. Roosevelt will never again be governor. There will never again be a man at the head of a great state capable of sending a woman in shameful dress to a shameful death before many men.

The "brave" governor was under his bedclothes far away. The woman was pushed into the chair and strapped in, the current—turned on by Roosevelt's order—entered the brain. Twice, three times, it was turned on, while the feeble frame moved convulsively, AND THAT WAS THE END OF ROOSEVELT'S BRAVEST DEED.

Some men are mawkish. Some are sentimental. Some could not enjoy executing an old woman. Some, if especially authorized by law to commute sentence to life imprisonment whenever they thought wise to do so, would have spared Martha Place the suffering and shame of that death. Perhaps they will not give their vote to Roosevelt for that particular piece of courage.

But the second heroic deed may move them.

That second deed can be told more quickly.

Roosevelt had gone to war. After heroic performances—told over his own signature in numerous magazines—he informs us that he took San Juan Hill.

At one stage of his glorious progress he saw fleeing before him a miserable Spaniard. The man's back was turned, of course. He was running away.

He had never hurt Roosevelt. He was in the army because compelled to be there. The real conflict was over.

But, as he ran, his back offered a most inviting shot. Roosevelt, you must remember, had never killed a man.

He had once killed a bear in a trap, according to western stories. He had killed rabbits and robins. He had indirectly killed old Martha Place. But he had not actually had the satisfaction of pressing the button.

Here was a chance really to enjoy the sensation of killing a fellow creature. It was a foolhardy undertaking, for the man's back was turned. He could not suddenly face round and do harm, for he had dropped his weapons in his flight. If ever Roosevelt was to enjoy the sensation of taking human life, here was his chance to enjoy the sensation safely.

He says in the shameful story which he himself has signed and left for his children to read:

"I SHOT HIM DEAD WITH MY REVOLVER."

We do not pretend to guess what the next "brave" deed of this brave man may be, if offices and opportunities continue to pour in upon him.

We simply narrate these two sample deeds of heroism as guides to those who must vote this fall.

AN OLD WOMAN ELECTROCUTED.

A FLEEING UNARMED MAN SHOT IN THE BACK.

Such are Roosevelt's chief claims to heroism at present. If you indorse such heroism vote for him by all means.

ONE OF LIND'S BOARDS.

The different state institutions are receiving business management under the Lind administration. Take, for instance, the Minnesota Institute for Defectives, which, for the first time in thirty years, is under the management of a board, the majority of which were appointed by a reform administration. The work that has been accomplished by the present board deserves the highest praise and commendation. The different departments of the institution are becoming recognized by the whole country as the leading ones of their kind in the United States.

Attention is called to the following reforms brought about by the board:

1. Under the leadership of Supt. Lewis, Superintendent of Public Instruction, who is a member ex-officio of the board, the teachers at the school for the deaf and blind have been placed upon a schedule salary basis, with minimum and maximum rates, increasing as teachers become efficient by long continued service thus preventing impartiality, insuring justice and bettering the service as well as the standing of teachers employed.

2. The change of system in the manner of purchasing supplies, allowing competitive bids among merchants, prevents a favored few from furnishing all the supplies to the institution at retail prices. This system of advertising for supplies in quantities to last three months at a time under what is known as the "Pennsylvania system," is a reform brought about at the special instance of Director H. D. Stocker, Jr., of Minneapolis, a recent appointee on the board by Gov. Lind, who has made a special study of the question. The bids, when opened on Aug. 14th, showed that a vast saving will be made to the state in the furnishing of groceries, meats, flour, etc., in the next three months, estimated by Director Stocker to be at least $500 a month, or $6,000 a year, and probably a sum considerably exceeding that, besides assuring a superior quality of goods to be supplied.

The recently inaugurated system above referred to places the institution on a business basis which all taxpayers of the state will fully appreciate.

3. The treatment and care of epileptics is receiving an attention never considered under previous administrations. When Director Stocker became a member of the board he at once became satisfied that the epileptics were not receiving sufficient consideration, and by his efforts, supported by the other members of the board, a special course of treatment is now being inaugurated for this poor unfortunate class. Better accommodations are also being provided for them in the form of cottages, which will suggest the home life, rather than that of an institution.

4. Surplus help has been dispensed with, which will be a saving of several thousand dollars a year to the state without detriment to the service.

The above are but a few of the important changes introduced by this Lind board, who are progressive in their ideas and businesslike in their methods.

The people of the state will give their seal of approval to the work being done by this board, and others, by voting for Gov. Lind for re-election.

A CHARGE REFUTED.

Some Republican organs and politicians have amused themselves by charging Mr. Bryan with being dishonest, merely because he did not make silver the burden of his speech at Indianapolis. The Springfield Republican, which is opposed to Mr. Bryan's views on the money question, replies to the charges against him in this way:

"The Boston Transcript builds up an argument that the Democratic candidate is dishonest on the strength of the fact that in 1890 he was talking for a low tariff; in 1896 for free silver, and in 1890 for anti-imperialism. How is it possible for a man to be honest who has a paramount issue every few years? If, however, the Transcript should send a correspondent to Lincoln to ask Mr. Bryan his views on the tariff and free silver what answers would it receive? Mr. Bryan would cordially tell the correspondent to print the fact as many times as he pleased that he believed in silver as much as he did in 1896, and in a low tariff as much as he did in 1890. Would this prove that Mr. Bryan was an honest man or a dishonest man? Are you to conclude from the fact that a man openly stands by his past opinions that he has no honesty of conviction?

"The basis of the charge of dishonesty is somewhat queer. It seems that while Mr. Bryan believes in a low tariff as much as ever, he is not now making it the burden of his speeches; that while free silver is as deeply imbedded in his convictions as ever, he can deliver an important, historic address without once mentioning 1 to 1. If that constitutes dishonesty, then Mr. Bryan is a dishonest man. Even Mr. Cleveland, were he to enter this campaign with his old activity, would immediately demonstrate his dishonesty because he would forget all about "free raw materials" and the "robber tariff" whichever side he espoused. Mr. Cleveland, it is safe to say, would make a speech without once mentioning the issue which he considered paramount all the way from 187 to 1894.

"Now, what is the real truth? Did Mr. Bryan ever make an issue in his life? Never. Circumstances made the issues. The people took them up. One after the other they have been given by the people the place of chief prominence in their political deliberations. Bryan has addressed himself, like John Smith or Reuben Brown, to those issues as they came along; he has taken sides concerning them, and when one issue has been succeeded by another in chief prominence he has not had the power to thrust it into the background. Bryan, good or bad, is a leader of men. But he has positive views, and tells you what they are, on the great public questions as they come along. He is not responsible for the order of their coming, or for the prominence the American people give to them. The issue of imperialism was not created or established in its permanent paramountcy by Bryan. Events created it and events made it paramount in the minds of the people.

"The opportunity to attack Mr. Bryan's opinions is unsurpassed, because they are so beautifully precise in their definiteness. He stands here on the tariff, and there on the income tax, and over yonder on silver. When you wish to whale Bryan you can always find him at home and coming to meet you at the door. On some points many of us disagree with him. But how can he be called dishonest in his relations to the American people?"

Mr. Bryan does not make issues, he meets them.

MISUSE OF THE FLAG.

The St. Paul Globe makes these sensible remarks:

"The correct impression was once general that the Stars and Stripes belonged to all citizens alike, regardless of political or religious beliefs, and that all citizens were equally interested in promoting the honor of the flag. Difference of opinion as to the administrative procedure affecting the welfare of the nation can exist without forfeiting the right of any class to be regarded as honestly loyal; but since Mark Hanna took hold of the Republican party in behalf of the trusts and the special private interests generally there has been introduced a new code of loyalty. As long as country was the chief concern of political parties, as long as all were striving honestly to apply party doctrines to the advantage of all people alike, the logic of universal proprietorship in the flag was too strong to combat. Then no one dared to defile the banner by appropriating it for the exclusive glory of a faction or of a party.

"But from the Republican standpoint the same logic does not now apply. Before the party looks once at the country as a whole it glances ten times in the direction of the trusts and the million-dollar special interests which it has promoted and sustained at the expense of the people. These are its particular care; in them are wrapped its hopes and its fears, in them the justification of its existence and continued hold on the offices. It is not strange that this gives the party a cross-eyed view of patriotism, and leads to an excess of protest of innocence, the evidence of which is revealed in the seizure of the flag as an exclusive party property. This misuse of the flag means a guilty conscience; it suggests an attempt at disguise. It is vain; it will do the party no good, for the majority of citizens are only disgusted at such display and are able to reason that if there existed any exclusive representative of loyalty and patriotism among political parties the distinction would be conceded as a matter of course, without any claims or protests from the favored one."

A trust robs you waking or sleeping, eating or drinking, working or playing, living or dying, and the coffin trust gets you in the end.

OPENED BY TOWNE

FIRES FIRST GUN OF THE DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN.

An Immense Audience Comprising Persons of All Shades of Political Belief Listen to the Silver Tongued Orator's Remarks—Goes After Roosevelt's St. Paul Speech Without Gloves — Imperialistic Policy of the Republican Party Denounced in Unmeasured Terms.

Duluth, Aug. 27.—The largest gathering to listen to a political speech that ever assembled in Duluth was that of this evening at the armory, when Hon. Charles A. Towne opened the campaign in an address in which he replied to the recent speech of Gov. Roosevelt delivered at St. Paul on the occasion of the national convention of the League of Republicans Clubs, and arraigned the administration policy in the Philippines.

The audience, which comprised persons of all shades of political belief and many scores of women, listened attentively to the silver-tongued orator's remarks for more than two hours and frequently throughout the discourse the applause was deafening.

The speech, which will be used as a campaign document, is considered as Mr. Towne's greatest political effort. At its conclusion he was tendered an ovation by the multitude present.

Mr. Towne will leave Tuesday or Wednesday for Idaho and other Western points to enter actively into the work of the campaign.

Mr. Towne opened by expressing lack of patience with any one who believed in his "party, right or wrong," or "any president, right or wrong," considering the latter simply another statement of the divine right of kings. He then said:

"Numerous questions are involved in this campaign. It is rare, however, that more than one great issue is decided at a time, and, as a rule, one subject of interest is uppermost in the public mind and chiefly calls for discussion and decision. This is especially true in 1900. The relatively secondary matters, important as they are all, have reference to policies to be pursued by the republic. The issue of first moment, the one that temporarily dwarfs all others by comparison, is whether the republic itself is to continue. Because of the magnitude of this question, which not only the Democratic platform but the public concern declares to be the paramount issue of the campaign, because time will not permit a full discussion in one meeting like this of all the subjects embraced in the party platform, and because I design to use a good part of this address in commenting upon the speech mainly concerned with this topic, delivered at St. Paul recently by the Republican candidate for vice president, I shall devote the greater part of the time to-night to the Consideration of Imperialism.

Let us first inquire how the question has arisen. It is one of the paradoxes of history that a policy of subjugation and conquest should have been the inheritance of a war of liberation."

He then reviewed at some length the causes leading up to the chief events of the Spanish war. He took up the insurrection in the Philippines, which had been raging for many years, sketching it briefly, and telling how brilliantly Dewey and his sailors engaged the Spanish fleet in Manila bay, and continued:

"It was thus as a mere incident in the prosecution of the war for the liberation of Cuba that we found ourselves in the Philippine islands. It is claimed that circumstances were such as to compel us, with due regard to our interests and our international duties, to pursue in those islands thereafter the policy for which the administration has become responsible. A brief examination of those circumstances will suffice to show that the policy adopted was not only unnecessary, but that it was in the highest degree disadvantageous to the United States, while involving the utmost cruelty and injustice toward the inhabitants of those islands and violating every principle of good faith and the honorable traditions of American diplomacy."

He said the coming of Aguinaldo was at the invitation of Admiral Dewey and that he was to be an ally of the Americans, quoting from the naval records in support of his assertion. After again referring to the different situations in Cuba and the Philippines, he said:

"But the statement that we never promised the Filipinos their independence conveys a false impression. Our conduct was such as to estop an honorable nation from urging such a plea as a justification or excuse for attempting to subjugate the islands. The Filipinos made no secret of their object in rebelling against the Spanish government. What they desired to do was to form a government of their own and to be absolutely independent of Spain. The representatives of the United States in the East know this object perfectly well. The Filipinos proclaimed it to the world.

"It is important to bear in mind that the Filipino republic established under the leadership of Aguinaldo was a government in fact, recognized throughout the Island of Luzon and several adjoining islands to the south, capable of preserving order, collecting taxes, maintaining education and a complete system of public administration, raising and supporting an army which for a considerable period numbered 30,000 men, and conducting war according to the humane principles of modern law.

"It is the fashion among apologists for the administration's policy to represent the Filipinos as little short of barbarians and savages, and as wholly incapacitated for the work of self-government. Fortunately the evidence on this subject to the contrary is readily accessible and overwhelming in quantity and certainty."

He quoted from Lieut. John D. Ford of the United States navy, Gen. Charles A. King, U. S. A., and others in support of his statement. Then he went on:

"It is impossible to determine the exact time at which the authorities in Washington decided to take forcible possession of the Philippine islands. It is clear that Admiral Dewey for a considerable period after the battle of Manila bay had no knowledge of such an intention. Gen. Anderson, who took command of our land forces in the islands about the first of July 1898, says in an article in the North American Review for February, 1900: 'I was the first to tell Admiral Dewey that there was any disposition on the part of the American people to hold the Philippines if they were captured.' There will be little dissent from the proposition that if he came to Manila with such knowledge the most obvious considerations of justice and fairness required that the Filipinos be speedily acquainted with it. Yet they were permitted to indulge all the illusion of hope from our supposed friendliness to their plans of independence with which their proclamations had made us familiar."

After describing the strained relations between the Americans and the Filipinos after the capture of Manila Mr. Towne said:

"Our opponents are in the habit of referring to the outbreak of actual hostilities between us and the Filipinos as though the latter were the aggressors; and much is attempted to be made out of such expressions as that 'they fired on our flag.' But, of course, since we had secretly formed a determination to seize the islands, it is apparent that whenever that design became manifest or we attempted to put it into effect the Filipinos, if they were in earnest when declaring their object to be independent, would resist it. When that time should come, the aggressor, regardless of who struck the first blow, would be, not he who stood in defense of a right, but he who, by act or threat, compelled the other to defend it. The development of the hostile design was itself an attack. The wonder is, considering the tropical nature of the islanders and the long continued course of our mingled that they were not betrayed into violence long before any physical clash actually occurred. As a matter of fact, however, as shown by Gen. Otis' official report, our troops fired the first shot, and the Filipinos stood on the defensive.

Reticence, Ambiguity and Offense,

"The plan to possess the whole Philippine archipelago and to subdue it if necessary by force of arms was bluntly set forth by the president in his instructions to Gen. Otis, under date of Dec. 21, 1898, which were embodied by the latter in the famous proclamation of Jan. 3, 1899. It is important to bear in mind the time when this proclamation was made, as touching the question of the president's right to issue it, its responsibility for the warfare that followed and its relation to the general subject of arbitrary power whose increasingly easy assumption and exercise are the invariable accompaniments of imperialism."

He then discussed the protocol and the treaty of peace, and the proclamation of Jan. 3, 1900, at Manila, which he declares "is of the very essence of imperialism. Divested of its cant and made over into plain language, the proclamation tells the Filipinos that we have seized their country by brute force and propose to hold it, and that they must submit to our pretension, yield to our assumed authority, or be shot to death. It boldly proclaims the right of conquest, the Highway Robbery of Nations.

"For the first time in American history it is asserted by the responsible leader of a great party and a president of the republic that we may rightfully wage war for purposes of dominion and to acquire property in the land of other nations, and jurisdiction over their liberties and persons, by the mere test of superior strength. It violates the most sacred traditions of our history.

"But what is probably as sinister in this proclamation as even this flagrant indorsement of force as the basis of political authority, and as significant of imperialistic tendencies in the executive, is the cool assumption by the president of the power to act before the execution of the treaty. The treaty was not yet ratified. It had not, indeed, been approved by the senate, and might easily never have been approved, since the final action of that body is said to have been taken by a bare majority of one vote. This assumption of power, admittedly before the treaty conferred it on him, and where the exercise of it was certain to involve the nation in war, as it soon did, was the most prodigious."

Taking up Gov. Roosevelt's speech, he declared it to be "enormously disappointing. Neither in matter nor in manner is it worthy of its occasion. In respect of argument the speech is, with rare exceptions, an alternation of evasion and assertion. In spirit it is a compound of scold and scullion. As to its facts, it abounds in inaccuracies which, if accidental, are inexplicable as coming from a man who has performed creditably in history and biography. But the world is accustomed to inconsistencies from Mr. Roosevelt. It has long looked upon him as a predestined and incorrigible eccentric. It has given up attempting to explain him or to reconcile him with himself. It is quite impossible, whether it would be worth while otherwise or not, to make an entirely satisfactory diagnosis of a civil service reformer in partnership with Thomas C. Platt; a citizen soldier who ridicules the volunteer; a leader in battle who finds glory in being rescued from an ambush; a hero who boasts of shooting a fleeing foe in the back; a candidate who poses to delegates and galleries to obtain a nomination that he does not want; a gentleman who charges six and one-half millions of his fellow countrymen with lawlessness, dishonesty and cowardice; a statesman who, mounted on a hobby, rides roughly at grave questions in economics and politics, swinging his partisan lariat and yelling like an intellectual Comanche."

Mr. Towne then read quotations from the St. Paul speech of Gov. Roosevelt, which he said showed the truth of what he had said of that speech as a whole. He argued at considerable length against any possible constitutional right under which the United States could hold and govern colonies, ridiculing the alleged claim that this right was given by that provision of the Constitution which gives congress the power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the "territory and other proertpy" of the United States.

Who Knows, Indeed?

She wept.

"Oh, you editors are horrid!" she sobbed.

"What is the trouble, madam?" inquired the editor, as he blue-penciled two paragraphs that had come as an inspiration to the young man who was "taking up journalism."

"Why, I—boo—boo—I sent an obituary of my husband, and—boo—boo—and said in it that he had been married for twenty years, and you—oo—oo—oo—hoo—your printers set it up 'worried for twenty years.'"

She wept.

But the editor grinned.

Perhaps it was right, all round.

The Roar of Battle.

The roar of the navy's four point seven's, their crash, their rush as they passed, the shrill whine of the shrapnel, the barking of the howitzers and the mechanical, regular rattle of the quick firing Maxims, which sounded like the clicking of many mowing machines on a hot summer's day, tore the air with such hideous noises that one's skull ached from the concussion, and one could only be heard by shouting. But more impressive by far than this hot chorus of mighty thunder and petty hammering was the roar of the wind which was driven down into the valley beneath and which swept up again in enormous waves of sound. It roared like a great hurricane at sea. The illusion was so complete that you expected, by looking down, to see the Tugela lashing at her banks, tossing the spray hundreds of feet in air, and battling with her sides of rock. It was like the roar of Niagara in a gale, and yet when you did look below not a leaf was stirring, and the Tugela was slipping forward, flat and sluggish and in peace.—From "With Buller's Column," by Richard Harding Davis, in Scribner's.

Ahead on Prayers.

A bishop traveling in the depth of winter came to a house of a presiding elder to spend the night. The weather was bitterly cold, and the bedroom into which the bishop was shown had a thick coating of ice on the windows. The elder waited to see the bishop safely between the feather beds. But when the bishop, half frozen, jumped into bed without stopping to say his prayers the elder remonstrated with him.

"You have forgotten to say your prayers," he said.

"No," answered the bishop. "I always keep 'prayed up' in preparation for nights that are as cold as this."

Natural as Life.

"So delighted to see you again. Why, you are scarcely altered."

"About ten years."

"And why have you never been to see me?"

"My dear, just look at the weather we have had."

Better to Have Waited.

The other morning Jones turned up at the office even later than usual. His employer, tired of waiting for him, had himself set about registering the day's transactions, usually Jones' first duty. The enraged merchant laid his pen aside very deliberately and said to Jones, very sternly indeed, "Jones, this will not do!"

"No, sir," replied Jones gently, drawing off his coat as he glanced over his employer's shoulder, "it will not. You have entered McKurken's order in the wrong book. Far better to have waited till I came!"—Pearson's Weekly.

No Private Interview.

"Could I have a few minutes' private conversation with you?" he asked as he stood at the open door of a lawyer's office in the Loan and Trust building the other afternoon.

"Can't you speak right out from where you are?" asked the lawyer in reply after looking the man over.

"I'd rather make a private matter of it."

"What is the nature of your business?"

"Confidential—strictly private and confidential, sir."

"Well, I have no time to grant you a private interview. If you have anything to say, you can let her go right here. Now, what is it?"

"I—I wanted the loan of a quarter, sir," stammered the man.

"Oh, you did! And you wanted a private interview to ask me that?"

"Yes, sir. I knew that it would hurt both our feelings if I were refused in public—yours because you couldn't afford to loan me the money and mine because I couldn't get it. Can you grant my request, sir?"

"No, sir."

"And does it hurt your feelings?"

"Not a bit. You are mistaken on that point."

"And my feelings are the only ones hurt?"

"Yours alone."

"Just so," said the man as he bowed and backed out. "I beg your pardon. I was mistaken. You have the money and no feelings, and I have the feelings and no money. Impassible chasm; no use in trying to bridge. Good day!"—Washington Post.

The Poodle and the Lions.

"I notice that Automobile Montgomery says that horses often make a dive for the corn he paints," remarked one art league student to another.

"Well, there might be some truth in it," said the second. "I saw a little incident at the art institute the other day that made me think of Mr. Montgomery's proud boast. You know those big lions on the sides of the steps, the work of Kemeys, are pretty lifelike. I was standing looking at them when a little white poodle came down the steps in the wake of a woman with stylish clothes on. The poodle had a gold collar around his neck and was altogether one of the tiniest, dandified specimens of a dog that you could find. He walked up to one of the lions, settled back on his hind legs, and looked at the big stone beast. Then he sniffed and glanced around inquiringly. All at once he made up his mind. He made a fierce rush for the lion, barking as viciously and as loud as a dog six inches long could bark. He positively swelled up and appeared about to explode with wrath.

"There you are. If Kenneys' lions so excited a poodle dog, it may be that horses will eat Montgomery's corn pictures."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Truthful Manager.

Business manager of great London newspaper to clerk:

"George, take down an advertisement as I dictate it, and then send it up. Ready? All right—'Wanted, a man for a pleasant indoor position. Short hours, light work, no experience necessary, place permanent; salary, £1,000 a year. Answer in own handwriting. Millionaire, Great Daily office.'"

Clerk—I have it down, sir, and will send it to the printers at once.

Business Manager (a week later)—George, how many answers were received in reply to that advertisement?

Clerk—Eighteen thousand.

Business Manager (an hour later)—Good morning, sir. What can we do for you, sir?

Seedy Individual—What do you charge for an advertisement for situation wanted?

Business Manager—Our charges are high, 2 shillings a line, but you must remember the vast number of people we reach. Why, sir, in reply to one single advertisement inserted last week there were received 18,000 answers!—London Tit-Bits.

The Highest Court.

"No," said the judge firmly, "I will not consent to your marriage with my daughter."

"Sir," returned the young lawyer haughtily, "I shall not take this decision as final."

"You won't?"

"No, sir, I will not. I shall appeal to the court of last resort."

"Oh, very well," replied the judge. "Submit your case to her mother if you want to."—Chicago Post.

How Needles Are Made.

Needles are all made by machinery. The piece of mechanism by which the needle is manufactured takes the rough steel wire, cuts it into proper lengths, files the point, flattens the head, pierces the eye, then sharpens the tiny instrument and gives it that polish familiar to the purchaser. There is also a machine by which needles are counted and placed in the papers in which they are sold, these being afterward folded by the same contrivance.

Friendship's Trials.

"Am I going to the wedding? Certainly not," snapped the pretty girl in blue. "I'd like to see myself there! You thought we were friends? Oh, yes, we're friends. I'd like to scratch her eyes out, the deceitful thing! How did it start? How did what start? If her young man wished to call on me, there was no law against it, was there? If he got in the habit of calling here every day in the week and twice on Sundays, it wasn't my business to turn him over to the police, was it? I wish I had, though, as he was an awful bore and so persistent that I never got a chance to go anywhere or see any one.

"And all the while that deceitful thing pretended to be crying her eyes out at the desertion of her young man into my camp. If I had not thought that that young man's presence here was making her awfully mad, he would have got his walking papers long ago. But I endured him because I thought that she cared everything for him and could not live without him.

"And to think that she simply turned him over to me to get rid of him as well as me while she landed the eligible young man with the bank account who recently arrived in the city! And I never knew that he was here until it was too late! And we were such dear friends too!"—Detroit Free Press.

Sparing of Her Remedy.

There is at least one woman in Kenwood who believes thoroughly in the efficiency of prayer. About a year ago her husband engaged in a business venture that looked rather uncertain. But his wife had strong faith that it would turn out well.

"Go ahead, John," she said, "and let us put our trust in the Lord. I pray every night that we may have no reason to regret the risk we are taking."

The affair seemed to turn out pretty well right from the start. Handsome dividends were paid all through the summer and during the winter, and great joy was in the home of this man and the sharer of his fortunes.

But there came a turn about a month ago. The business ceased to pay, and since then the losses have been increasing every day. Nothing was said about it at the fireside around which so much happiness had centered during the last year until the other day, when it was suggested by the worried husband that it would be well to cut down expenses. Questions followed, as a matter of course, and then it had to be confessed that the business was not going well.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the distressed woman when all the truth had been revealed to her. "I must begin praying again tonight!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Famous London Tavern.

The Mermaid was the name of a famous London tavern frequented by noted literary men and actors during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. All the wit and talent of the time assembled there for convivial enjoyment. Authors have made it the scene of great mind combats between such men as Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Beaumont, Fletcher, Selden, Carew, Donne and others of reverential memory. It was the gathering place of the celebrated Mermaid club, the origin of which is ascribed to Sir Walter Raleigh. The Mermaid tavern was located in Bread street and was handily reached from three thoroughfares, so that it has been often referred to in various ways. The Mermaid in Bread street, the Mermaid in Friday street and the Mermaid in Cheap street were, however, all one and the same. It was the nearest to Bread street. The Mermaid was destroyed in the great London fire. There were other Mermaid taverns, one in Cheapside and another in Cornhill, but they had no such associations as clung to that of Bread street.

Tolstoi's Sense of Honor.

At one music party at Count Tolstoi's a lady's singing displeased the count's boys, and they adjourned to another room and made a noise. Their father lost patience and went after them, and a characteristic admonition ensued.

"Are you making a noise on purpose?" he asked.

After some hesitation came an answer in the affirmative, "Y-y-yes."

"Does not her singing please you?"

"Well, no. Why does she howl?" declared one of the boys, with vexation.

"So you wish to protest against her singing?" asked Lyeff Nikolaevitch in a serious tone.

"Yes."

"Then go out and say so or stand in the middle of the room and tell every one present. That would be rude, but upright and honest. But you have got together and are squealing like grasshoppers in a corner. I will not endure such protests."—Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

Would Draw a Crowd.

A singer named Gordon once complained to Handel of the style of his accompaniments, which attracted the attention from the singer, saying that if he did not accompany him better he would jump upon the harpsichord and destroy it.

"Very well," said Handel. "Tell me ven you will do dat, and I vill advertise it. More people vill come to see you jump dan to hear you sing."

Sarcastic.

Myer—Have you noticed what a lot of new houses are being put up all over the city?

Gyer—Yes, and I've been wondering why they don't put up a few old ones just for a change.—Chicago News.

In Turkey amber is supposed to be a specific against the evil effects of nicotine, and as the people are great lovers of tobacco they freely indulge in the use of it, but take care to safeguard themselves by having amber mouthpieces to their pipes.

TIME AND SPACE are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

The cigarette fiend has a pretty hard row to hoe in this man's land now. Railroad companies, business houses, banks and other like concerns, are drawing the line on those who use the little coffin nails, and refuse to give them work, believing that those who do not use them are more likely to amount to something and will prove of some account. The young man of today is doing himself much harm if he allows himself to smoke cigarettes and the sooner he quits the better it will be for his health, and also for his prospects.—Ex.

The following from an exchange isnt bad advice: "Boys, the world is wide. If you wish to be somebody, pitch in. The brave always have friends. Where others have gone you can go. If the old track don't suit, make a new one; somebody will walk in it. Success is never attained in a country like this without an effort. If it is dark, strike a light. An Arkansas paper says in one of the mountain counties only one man took a newspaper, and the citizens from some distance around would gather in to hear him read when it came. One listener asked what the republicans were doing in congress. "Oh," replied the reader, "they've played the dickens over there they have passed a law adding two months to the year, and the worst part of it is they have made them both winter "months." "Blast their fool soals," said the listener, "and we are nearly out of fodder."—X.

The Origin of Baseball

An exchange has the following to say on the origin of baseball: The devil was the first coacher; he coached Eve when she stole first; Adam stole second When Isaac met Rebecca at the well she was walking with a pitcher. Samson struck out a great many times when he beat the Philistines; Moses made his first run when he slew the Egyptian. Cain made a base hit when he slew Abel. Abraham made a sacrifice. The Prodigal Son made a home run. David was a long distance thrower, and Moses shut out the Egyptians at the Red Sea. The game was called when the flood came on account of wet grounds.

CASE DECIDED.

Judge Watts Rules in the Celebrated Matter Between Polk and Red Lake. Polk Must First Pay. Appraised Value of Buildings and Bond Holders Will Collect From Both Pro Rata.

Judge Watts to-day decided the case brought by the commissioners of Polk county against those of Red Lake county to compel payment of Red Lake county's share of the bonded indebtedness that existed at the time of the creation of Red Lake county.

The action came up in the form of an application for a writ of mandamus requiring the commissioners of Red Lake county to immediately make provision for payment of Red Lake county's proportion of the bonded indebtedness and interest by levy and taxation upon property in that county.

The application is denied, and it is ordered in judgment that Polk county must pay the debts that fall due as a result of the creation of the new county. This is in amount of $32,800, being the appraised value of the county buildings, at the time the separation took place.

It is furthered ordered that the balance of the debt, consisting of its bonded obligations, is to be paid by both Polk and Red Lake counties directly to the holders of such evidences of indebtedness in proportion of the assessed values of the old and new counties to each other at the time of the creation of the new county, that Polk county not yet having paid to Red Lake county the appraised value of the buildings, until it does so has no claim against Red Lake county for any portion of its indebtedness, nor can it require the officers of Red Lake county to levy any tax to pay such indebtedness.

County Attorney Holston assisted by Special County Attorney Martin O'Brien applied for the writ and conducted the case for Polk county, Chas. E. Boughton and Van R. Brown being in charge of Red Lake county's interest.

The case will be immediately appealed to the supreme court, and owing to its importance will likely be preferred, and an early decision rendered.—Crookston Times.

Attention Farmers!

A mass meeting call to be held on Saturday Sept. 15th 1900 at 2 o'clock p. m. at the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake county Minnesota. The audience will be addressed on the wheat situation.

Object:—To make 75 cents the minimum or lowest price for good marketable wheat. Farmers be sure and turn out and come to this meeting as it is called for your benefit especially and it is bound to interest you intensely. Listen to the Idea of the promoter as it will deal with facts which are bound to entail your prosperity. Farmers:—It will cost you a trifle, only one cent per bushel, or ten cents per acre of your wheat acreage to keep up the organization which will give you an extra 25 cents per bushel for your wheat and very probably more and besides a great deal of information worthy for your intelligent consideration. Farmers you can't afford to go unorganized any longer unless you are willing to obey the dictations of the wheat clique who is setting the price on your products. It is out of reason. Farmers:—The producer has the unquestionable right to set the minimum or lowest price on his products which price shall never be less than the cost of producing the same. Farmers as a class are enslaved their products, wheat especially, the price of which is controlled by comparatively a few managed men who are reaping millions of dollars every year from this source.

Farmers! There is a way out of this dilemma.

Farmers! There is a Moses.

Farmers! There is a leader.

Farmers! Will you follow him?

Then be sure and come to this meeting and listen to the address, the wheat question of the day.

Yours respectfully,
P. E. Pirath.
Red Lake Falls.

Sept. 1st 1900.

Patronize home industry by buying your wall paper at the New Drug store.

An agricultural paper gives good advice when it says that now is the time to start the plow and keep it a going until the work is finished. Experience will demonstrate that one acre plowed in August is as good for most any kind of crop as two acres plowed in the latter part of October. There are several reasons for this. In the first place early plowing will kill the weeds and convert them into manure. In the second place it will give the soil the much needed airing during the fall months before it freezes up, and thus assist replacing the oxygen that has taken from it, and but not least, early plowing has a powerful tendency in resisting droughts. The green vegetable matter plowed under early in the fall acts as a reservoir for holding both the moisture and plant food for the following year. By all means start the plow early and keep it going until the last acre is turned over.

Bargains.

The remainder of our wash goods consisting of dimities, lawns, silk stripe zephyr, ponge zephyr, etc., will be closed out regardless of cost to make room for our fall and winter goods. Come and secure some real bargains.

Announcement.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for nomination to the office of County Auditor, subject to the approval of the republican convention, and if nominated and elected, I promise to conduct the business of the office in a manner that will meet the approbation of every tax-payer of the county.

Ozone.

Immediately after a thunder storm the atmosphere is always bracing and revivifying. You sniff it with pleasure and inflate your lungs to the full in an almost involuntary effort to drink in the freshness.

This phenomena is attributed by science to ozone.

Ozone is a form of oxygen which is produced by passing a current of electricity through the air. Ozone is regarded as a great invigorator and blood purifier, destroying the germs of disease in the blood, so it is employed extensively in the cure of disease.

People having good nutrition have no occasion to require ozone treatment. A healthy nutrition supplies plenty of healthy blood. Health is promoted by the use of "Golden Grain Belt" health food beers. The invigorating and strengthening sensation which is experienced through the ozone after a thunder storm is enjoyed from a bottle of "Gilt Edge," brewed by the Minneapolis Brewing Company. A case of pints or quarts should be in every cellar. Order from the dealer nearest you or you can be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Good Things to Learn.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room.

Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows.

Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in this world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to attend strictly to your own business. Very important point.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares whether you have earache, headache or rheumatism.

Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered with any of yours.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

During the civil war, as well as in our late war with Spain, diarrhoea was one of the most troublesome diseases the army had to contend with. In many instances it became chronic and the old soldiers still suffer from it. Mr. David Taylor of Wind Ridge, Greene Co., Pa., is one of these. He uses Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and says he never found anything that would give him such relief. It is for sale by The Imperial Drug Store.

Now I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough to you for what you have done for me."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio, Sept. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to thank you for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. It is the only medicine I have found that helped me. I doctored with one of the best physicians in the city of New York, but received no benefit. I had been ailing for about sixteen years, was so weak and nervous that I could hardly walk; had continued pain in my back and was troubled with leucorrhœa. Menses were irregular and painful. Words cannot express the benefit I have derived from the use of your medicine. I heartily recommend it to all suffering women."—MRS. MARY BARSHINGER, Windsor, Pa.

FORMED A COMPACT

RUSSO-AMERICAN PLAN TO SETTLE CHINESE QUESTION.

Recognize Emperor Kwang Su as the Ruler of China and Co-operate With Li Hung Chang to Restore Peace — No Territorial Acquisition and a Conference of Envoys to Settle Indemnity and the Open Door — Troops to Be Withdrawn From Peing and the Emperor and Empress Allowed to Return.

Washington, Sept. 1. — The United States and Russia have formed a compact for the settlement of the existing Chinese question. This compact was concluded at the second meeting of the cabinet, which lasted from 3 till 5:30 p. m. This fact of agreement has been communicated to all the powers. If France, Germany and Japan agree to the propositions in the Russo-American agreement the United States and Russia will immediately withdraw their troops from Peking, inasmuch as there remain in that city no foreign interests. The main features of the oral convention between Russia and America are:

First — That although accomplished by force of arms, the rescue of the ministers and foreign residents has been effected, for which purpose solely the allied army

Seized the Chinese Capital.

Second—That Emperor Kwang Su is the de facto and de jure ruler of China.

Third—That Li Hung Chang is the duly accredited envoy for peace of the Chinese government.

Fourth—The powers are requested to co-operate with Li Hung Chang and his government for the restoration of order throughout the empire.

Fifth—That this restoration of order and the status quo as to the open door and the arrangement of all proper indemnity can be secured by the accredited envoys of all the nations having grievances against China by reason of the recent outbreak.

Sixth—That the integrity of the empire be preserved and that no territorial compensation be demanded.

Let the Empress Return.

The tate department has dispatched its instructions to the United States diplomatic representatives abroad in conformity with the decision reached yesterday by the cabinet on the Russian proposal to withdraw the troops in Peking to allow the empress dowager and Emperor Kwang Su to return to the capital to institute negotiations for a settlement with the powers. The Chinese government must guarantee its ability to prevent the spread of disorder to the other provinces and a recurrence of such disorders as have occurred.

The United States government having asted upon the Russian proposition as to the withdrawal of troops from Peking, is now quietly waiting for responses to the notes which have been sent to our various representatives for presentation to the powers. Judging by the rate of progress made in the preceding negotiations several days, and, perhaps, a week, may pass before all of these replies are received. According to their formal expressions, all of the powers are agreed upon this one point: they do not desire to enter upon a formal war upon China. The United States is trying this result. For the moment it finds itself side by side with Russia, whose earnestness cannot be questioned at this time. The object now in view is to bring about a situation in China that will admit of the beginning of negotiations looking to the re-establishment of order and the cessation of hostilities, the insurance of protection to foreign life and property. After that the negotiations may touch upon other questions that remain to be settled. It is with this object that Russia has suggested the withdrawal from Peking in order that the Chinese government may resume the reins of power for the Chinese people, being guided by externals, are not apt to a government not in possession of its own capital. The action of the Japanese government in withdrawing from Amoy the troops or marines which have aroused the suspicion of the European powers has done much to clarify the situation. By this disclaimer of a purpose to seize Chinese territory Japan has avoided entering a wedge which might result in the splitting up of the Chinese empire among the powers. It now remains for Russia to take similar action as to the Russian forces at New Chwang, and from the private intimations that have been conveyed to the state department, Russia has assured us that this occupation has been purely military and temporary.

To Yield Fealty

RUSSO-AMERICAN SURPRISE.

London, Sept. 1.—The Russo-American "surprise," as it is called, is the chief feature of the morning papers. While Russia's part in the proposal is regarded with considerable suspicion, it is generally recognized that the flight of the empress dowager and the emperor renders the situation extremely difficult, and, therefore, that it might be wise to adopt the Russo-American programme as the best solution of the problem. At the same time a very strong feeling is displayed in favor of a more vigorous line of policy. The Daily Graphic says: "The United States are almost morbidly anxious to wash their hands of the Chinese embarrassment. This has long been apparent. But it is rather surprising to hear that their anxiety is shared by Russia. With the possible exception of Germany there is probably not another power that would seriously object to the evacuation of Peking."

The Daily Mail observes: "Probably Russia, with the assistance of the United States and France hopes to dictate to other powers a far Eastern policy insuring the accomplishment of Russian designs, which would be greatly facilitated by the acceptance of Li Hung Chang as plenipotentiary. The powers should refuse to accept any intermediary or to evacuate Peking, which would only be interpreted as a sign of weakness."

Claiming Her Rights.

The New York Telegram relates a story of a little girl, the daughter of a clergyman, who was ailing, and in consequence had been put to bed early.

"Mamma," said she, "I want to see my dear papa."

"No, dear," said her mother. "Papa is not to be disturbed just now."

Presently came the pleading voice:

"I want to see my papa."

"No," was the answer. "I cannot disturb him."

Then the four-year-old parishioner rose to a question of privilege.

"Mamma," she said, "I am a sick woman, and I want to see my minister."

MYSTER YIN DYNAMITE.

Unknown Persons Lays the Foundation for Great Loss.

Kendall, Wis., Sept. 2.—An unknown person forced an entrance into Evans' barber shop and placed two bombs, wrapped in newspapers, there. The papers were set on fire and were consumed, which ignited the fuses of the bombs, but for some reason they did not reach the explosives inside. When the bombs were found the people thought it was a hoax, but concluded to test the matter. One of the pieces of pipe was placed in a box which was carried into an open field. When the bomb became heated it exploded with terrific effect, tearing the box to pieces. The other bomb is carefully preesrved and it will be used as vidence if the perpetrators can be located. It is now believed that there was a plot to destroy a portion of the village.

WHITES AND BLACKS CLASH.

Street Laborers on the Verge of a Row at La Crosse.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 2. — Lack of harmony between white and colored laborers on the paving work brought on a quarrel and threatened assault, and this was followed by a strike of all the white men working directly with negroes. The contractor was asked to discharge the negroes, which he refused to do, saying the negro ought to have killed the man who provoked him." This is not well received by the other white laborers, and the matter is in rather a precarious state.

CONVICT ESCAPES.

Pounding Stone Not to His Liking, He Jumps His Job.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 2. — Jack Keifer, who was lodged in prison about a month ago under a sentence of three years for grand larceny, from Stanley county, made a daring escape while at work with the other prisoners in a stone quarry near the penitentiary. Eluding the vigilance of the guard he succeeded in reaching the east side of the Sioux river. He found a horse and mounted and galloped away. As soon as his escape was discovered officers started in pursuit.

Ironwood has 1,500 more men employed in the copper mines than last years.

READY FOR CROWDS.

Preparations for the Big Exposition Almost Completed.

St. Paul, Sept. 2.—The fair grounds yesterday was a scene of intense activity. Vans laden with farm machinery of all kinds cast up clouds of dust. FIRE AT FAIR GROUNDS.

Eight Buildings and Contents Destroyed.

St. Paul, Sept. 1.—Fire bbroke out in the machinery department of the state fair shortly before midnight last night and in less than two hours upward of $20,000 worth of farm machinery, implements, buggies, wagons, etc., were destroyed, together with the buildings that covered them. The total loss is estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000. It falls entirely upon the exhibitors, who owned their own buildings. The state or the state fair association loses nothing. The fire started from an unknown cause in the office of the Crane & Ordway, St. Paul, exhibit. It was discovered by one of the watchmen about 11:30. It took some time to spread the alarm through the grounds and very little could be done when all the men at hand were aroused. The fair grounds are absolutely without fire protection. Long before the first apparatus arrived the flames were spreading along the row of buildings. The flames jumped from one to another with lightning rapidity, and the heat was so great that little could be done in the way of saving the exhibits just placed for next week's fair. Finally when seven of the structures had succumbed, the eighth was torn down. The ruins of the razed building subsequently took fire and were destroyed with the rest, but the spread of the conflagration was checked.

SKELETON MYSTERY.

Discovery of Bones Leads to Surmises of a Tragedy of Years Ago.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 1. — A deep mystery surrounds the finding of three skeletons at Bell Center, a small town in the Kickapoo valley. They were found while tearing down a house which is about forty years old. No one seems to be able to give any light on the mystery, but the prevailing opinion is that the skeletons are those of three persons who were murdered a long time ago, old residents having only a slight remembrance of the affair. The bones are well preserved. An investigation by the authorities will follow.

HEAVY DAMAGE.

Western Manitoba Storm-Swept—One Killed and Many Injured.

Brandon, Minn., Aug. 1. — Western Manitoba and the territories have been swept by a storm which has heavily damaged crops and property. A child was killed at Wapella, N. W. T., and many were injured at Pipestone and Virden. Crops are generally damaged. Telegraphic communication has been cut off. There was no damage of moment here.

Prize for Minnesota Butter.

St. Paul, Sept. 1.—Minnesota butter has won a grand prize at the Paris exposition. The announcement from the exposition authorities, which was received by B. D. White, assistant dairy and food commissioner, states that the award had been made to samples exhibited by Samuel Haugdahl of New Sweden. The award is the highest distinction which the exposition authorities have power to bbestow. Six Minnesota factories were represented.

Small Boy Shoots His Sister.

FUNDS FOR COUNTY FAIRS.

Appropriation of $14,000 Is About to Be Divided Among the Applicants.

County fair associations which held fairs last year will receive equal shares of the $14,000 appropriation made by the state for their encouragement. The state auditor is making up a list of the counties entitled to come in as the state's beneficiaries. The amount which each will receive will be about $235. Under the law which granted aid to county fairs the division of the appropriation will be on a pro rata basis. In deciding which counties are entitled to money the auditor will receive proof that the fair association which applies for its money actually held a fair last year, and expended in cash prizes and premiums an equal amount to the pro rata share which it is entitled to this year. In counties where two fairs were held last year only one will be entitled to money from the state. Last year about sixty different county fairs received aid from the state. The number will be about the same this year. The auditor has a bunch of papers certifying that these associations are entitled to aid. The money will be distributed to the different associations as soon as the list of applicants is completed.

JACKSON'S DEFENSE.

Sets Up New Points in the County Seat Contest.

Jackson has filed a defense in the county seat contest. It demurs to a portion of the contest notice filed, and denies each and every allegation not demurred to. Jackson set up as new points that M. H. Evans, George Paine, I. J. Pritsch, George Sawyer, H. J. Hollister, John Frederickson, Rudolph Korschinck, John O. Engan and numerous others, openly, secretly, and in divers other methods, paid money for votes, and then goes on to recite the parties to whom money was paid and the amounts paid to each, ranging from $5 to $75. Fifty-three names of persons to whom money was paid are named. Others are named who were induced to stay at home; and others were not qualified to vote because not residents nor legal voters; and still others were named who were not entitled to vote because they were under age; still others were intimidated from voting. Finally the claim is made that Lakefield tried to bribe the voters of the county by offering and serving free lunches and free liquors. In all precincts where Lakefield had a majority of the votes a recount is asked. From the looks of the notice a very warm time is still to come in the contest.

THE WINONA NORMAL.

Everything Ready for the Opening of the School Year Next Week.

The vacancies in the normal school faculty at Winona have now all been filled, the latest appointment being that of Lucy E. Browning of Illinois as kindergarten director. She studied for a year under Frau Schrader at the Pestalozzi-Froebel house, at Berlin, Germany, and has since done very successful work as director of kindergarten in Beloit and as head of the kindergarten training department at the Milwaukee school. It was expected that Miss Atwood, who was granted a year's absence, would return this fall to this place, but illness prevented. The school will open for enrollment next Tuesday. This will be the last year for the three-year elementary course of study. Students who have heretofore started on this course and can complete it this year will be allowed to do so, but hereafter they must take the five-year course unless they are graduates of high schools, when the professional and one and two-year courses will be open to them. It is not expected that this change will materially reduce the attendance at the school.

New Jail at Madison Lake.

The state board of corrections and charities has received plans and specifications for a new jail at Madison Lake. The structure will be built of brick and stone. Secretary Jackson, who has been absent on a vacation for several weeks, will return early next week.

PROMOTION FOR CHAFFEE.

A Brigadier Generalship in the Army Coming to Him.

Washington, Aug. 31. — There is no doubt that Gen. Chaffee will be appointed brigadier general in the regular army upon the retirement of Gen. Wheeler. It is stated at the war department that the services Gen. Chaffee has rendered in China entitle him to this consideration. Gen. Wheeler will retire on Sept. 3. Gen. Chaffee will continue to hold the rank of major general of volunteers while in command of the troops in China.

Coal Famine in Germany.

Berlin, Aug. 31.—The coal famine in Germany has become very serious and a number of chambers of commerce have petitioned the government for relief. The Prussian cabinet has resolved to grant a modified railroad tariff for foreign coal to facilitate the importation of coal from England and the United States. Indeed the famine is so pronounced that the Prussian minister of railways in the interest of the state has laid embargo on all the coal mines in the state mine.

Brings Sick From Manila.

San Francisco, Aug. 31.—The United States transport Thomas arrived last night, twenty-nine days from Manila, via Yokohama. She has on board 261 sick and wounded soldiers, 31 military prisoners, 51 cabin passengers, 173 in the steerage and 7 stowaways. Seven deaths occurred during the voyage. The vessel has not yet passed quarantine inspection and neither mail nor passengers will be landed until this afternoon.

Price Goes Up.

Pittsburg, Aug. 31. — The Crucible Steel Company of America has advanced the price on all open hearth products $4 a ton. This affects all open hearth products except fine tool steel, which remains at the old price.

Postoffice Robbed.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 31. — Safe blowers cracked the safe in the postoffice. The extent of the loss is not yet known, but it is believed to be from $2,000 to $5,000. No arrests have been made.

Grounds for Apprehension.

Fred—Do you know that I am half-afraid to propose to Belle, the more I think of it.

Dick—Pshaw, man! Why are you faint-hearted?

Fred—Because, from what she said last night, I have got an idea that she will decline to accept me.

Dick—What did she say?

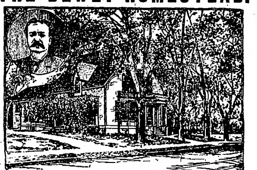
Fred—She said I was a "poem."—

Defined.

Mrs. Jones—This paper speaks of a "lobbyist" as though it was a term of reproach.

Mrs. Plagore—Of course. A lobbyist, I take it, is one of those deceitful men who sneak out between the acts for a drink, claiming that they are merely going into the lobby.—Philadelphia Press.

THE DEWEY HOMESTEAD.



The above picture shows the house where George Dewey was born December 26th, 1837. It was occupied by the Dewey family until after the death of the Admiral's father. It then came into the possession of Captain Edward Dewey, who sold it to its present owner and occupant, T. R. Gordon, Esq., in the summer of 1889. Mr. Gordon moved it to its present site in the following February, 1890, and has occupied it until the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are unfailing in their courtesy to the thousands who visit this shrine, the birthplace of Admiral Dewey.

A recent letter from T. R. Gordon to the Peruna Drug M'f'g Co., Columbus, Ohio, reads as follows:

"It is with great satisfaction that I find myself able, after an extended trial, to write you in this emphatic manner of the good your Peruna has done my wife.

"She has been troubled with catarrh from childhood, and whenever she has a cold, or any unusual condition of the weather, it was worse than usual, and seemed more than she could bear. English-Made Mummy Cloth.

Sir William Bailey, head of the well known Albion works, at Salford, told a good story the other day. A certain Manchester merchant saw a mummy in Egypt and brought away a portion of the mummy cloth. This was handed to a buyer of a large Manchester warehouse, who was asked if he could tell where it was woven. After examining it carefully with his glass, he said he thought he could put his finger on the mill where it was produced if he could borrow the piece for a few days. Afterwards he reported that it was made where he had thought, near Oldham. Manchester men are known to be acute. —Liverpool Post.

How China Was Explored.

As far back as 1816 English explorers began their work in Southern China, for in that year Amherst made a journey along the banks of the Pekiang, a northern tributary of the Sikiang, sometimes called the River of Canton; but Macartney had already done valuable work up the same stream in 1793. It was not, however, until the early part of the second half of the century —in the '60s—that systematic exploration of that part of China was undertaken. During that decade the southwestern and southern provinces were regularly quartered out by English explorers.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

China has still the old-fashioned system of private letter carrying. Letter shops are to be found in every town. CHANGE OF FRONT

REPUBLICANS BELIEVED IN DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

A Wail of Distress From Hanna's Secretary—Van Sant's Plans, According to Bixby. Republicans Plead Guilty. The Return of Olney—Miscellaneous Matter.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 10, 1900.

The Republicans were not afraid of the Declaration of Independence 24 years ago. In their platform of 1876 they professed faith in that part of the time-honored declaration of rights which they now regard as obsolete. The platform contained this plank:

"The Republican party has preserved this government to the hundredth anniversary of the nation's birth, and the party's principles are now the embodiment of the great truths spoken at its cradle; that all men are created equal and they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that for the attainment of these ends governments have been instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Perry S. Heath, the secretary of Mark Hanna's national committee, has sent a confidential letter to the faithful with a wail of distress. He says that Mr. Bryan's election would mean the withdrawal of our army from the Philippines some time next year. From a Republican viewpoint this would be an awful calamity. It develops that the Republican leaders do not expect the Filipinos ever to be pacified. 'An army is be kept in the islands for all time. In his speech at Alexandria some days ago Senator Knute Nelson announced without reserve that a standing American army in the Philippines will be necessary after the war is over. Bryan, on the other hand, does not believe in the permanent maintenance of American troops at the antipodes. He wants the people of the Philippines to enjoy the blessings of liberty and independence; and when he says that those distant islands shall not forever be ruled by the American soldiery, the Republican committee crosses itself and says: "Isn't it awful?"

It is no secret that Captain Van Sant fought against the election of Knute Nelson to the United States senate. What he might do now, if he were to become governor, is not in itself an important question, since the supposed contingency will not come to pass. But, still, the friends of Senator Nelson may find some food for thought in what Tams Bixby's paper, the Red Wing Daily Republican, said on the subject two years ago. In its issue of June 3, 1898, Tams Bixby's paper said:

"No one should be such an innocent politically as to suppose that the combine, whose headquarters are at present in the state capitol at St. Paul, proposes to go out of existence after having accomplished so trifling an achievement as the nomination of a state ticket this year. No political combination ever works that way. They are gotten up to last, and they take into the scope of their plans and work all the places and emoluments that will be for distribution for years to come. Otherwise men would not give their time and energy to a work so temporary and trifling.

"This is the case in the present emergency. It pleases the combine, of course, to say that Governor Clough wants nothing for himself, and that the nomination of Van Sant will be the culmination of his pure and self-sacrificing political existence. This kind of talk may go down with a political tenderfoot, but anyone less unsophisticated does not need to be taught that the real plan runs far into the distance and contemplates the control of every state and federal place within the reach of any citizen of Minnesota.

"As an illustration, it is worth noting that the Clough-Van Sant workers are passing the word around quietly, when they think that it will do good rather than harm, that what they are after is not a governorship merely, but a senatorship as well. This is done to stimulate interest in quarters where some great incentive is necessary, but there is no reason to doubt that it represents the exact fact. Not one, but both senatorships, have been part of the great prize which the combine have set out to acquire for themselves.

"Senator Davis was marked for the slaughter originally, and the alliance of leaders last fall included a pledge to unite in defeating his re-election. The progress of events have made him so popular that this purpose has to be concealed if not abandoned. What the Clough-Van Sant people intend is still to beat Davis if there is the remotest chance, by the use of any means or influence known to politics, to send Clough to Washington in his place. If this cannot be done without the wrecking of their other schemes, then they will swallow the Davis pill with a wry face. But they do not propose to be balked two years hence in any event. Nelson's prominence is particularly obnoxious to them, and they intend at once to gratify that ambition of an aspirant to higher place, to cement their own power and to punish one not in with their gang by retiring Nelson at the end of his present term. It would hardly be going too far to say that the two senatorships are the real objective point of this new confederation in state politics, and all the rest of the scheme is bent to manage the state so as to obtain complete command of these great posts. That is the ultimate purpose of the combine that stands confessed in method before the Republicans of Minnesota today."

Mr. Bryan is being accused of a want of tact because he said some things in his Labor day address in Chicago which Republicans do not like to have mentioned. He discussed the rights of the wage earners, and this is regarded as a secret attack on the Republican party. He denounced the trust evil and imperialism and thereby hurt the feelings of some Republicans. By construing his remarks as an attack on their party the Republicans really plead guilty of imperialism and of subserviency to the interests of the trusts. The situation is much like the one which obtained in Minnesota at the time when Governor Lind declared, in a speech at Minneapolis, that the American volunteer soldier was not the proper man to carry on a war of aggression and conquest. The Republican organs then set up a howl because the governor had attacked the McKinley administration. Without intending it they entered the plea of guilty to the charge that they were engaged in a war of aggression and conquest. In like manner they now take the position that an attack on the trusts and an endorsement of the self-evident truths of the Declaration of Independence are equivalent to plunging a dagger into the vitals of the Republican party.

The recent declaration of Richard C. Olney that he will support the Democratic platform and candidates was a body-blow to the Republicans in the East. Mr. Olney would have been worth more to the Republicans than all the other converts together, about whose conversion they have been boasting. Four years ago he was one of the strongest of all the opponents of Bryan. Now Mr. Olney's vigorous Americanism has brought him back into the party which stands for American ideas. He will be a tower of strength in New England. When Bryan gains such a supporter, who was the soul of the Cleveland administration, he is indeed advancing far into "the enemy's country." It is about time for the Republicans to admit defeat.

Some of the Republican organs are denying that the Des Moines Globe, which openly advocates the establishment of a constitutional monarchy for our present form of government, expresses the sentiment of the latter-day Republicans. In measuring the value of this denial it should be remembered that until recently these same Republican organs were equally emphatic in denying the purpose of their party to establish the single gold standard, demanded, as is imperialism, by organized capitalistic greed.

"The Republicans say we cannot haul down the flag where it has once been hoisted. If that is true, how are you going to get the flag away from Peking? Our soldiers are there and carried the Stars and Stripes with them, and if your doctrine that whenever the flag floats over a land the land cannot be given back is true, you cannot get your soldiers away from Peking, and if you follow the doctrine that you followed in Manila, you have got to take the whole Chinese empire, because we took all the islands of the Philippines, and if that doctrine is true we have got to take the 400,000,000 subjects over there. It is a thousand times better to haul down the flag in the Philippine islands and raise the flag of the Philippine republic than to change our flag from the flag of the republic to the flag of an empire."—W. J. Bryan.

These are some of the things which such an independent Republican as Hazen S. Pingree of Michigan, who does his own thinking, says of the present Republican party:

"There should be a general cleaning out of the gang that has betrayed the republic at Washington."

"I am a Republican, but I honestly believe that, with the Ohio crowd in control, the best thing that could happen to the Republican party this fall would be the success of the Democrats."

"I have always contended that McKinley's backbone did not reach far enough toward his neck to support his brain or will power."

"How long will the American people tolerate a state of affairs like that in the Philippines and China? How long will they suffer to be controlled by such enemies of the republic as Hanna?"

Republicans are trying to disown the Des Moines Globe, because it is honest enough openly to admit that it wants our country changed from a republic to a monarchy. The fact remains, however, that the Des Moines Globe is a Republican paper, published and edited by one of the Republican committeemen in the Republican county of Polk, Ia. And his is not the only paper which has lost faith in the republic. The Chicago Journal, a straight Republican organ, says, Aug. 21:

"What, after all, is the Declaration of Independence or the constitution? Who created them? The people of the United States. Who has the right to throw them overboard? The people of the United States. Men invoke the past to dictate to the present. Absurd. Any tyro in political science will tell you that government is a fluid, not a solid.

"For a hundred years or more we have been living under a certain form of government. It has pleased us to have that sort of government. But is it intrinsically any better than another existing form of government? Certainly not. And if tomorrow we should elect to change to a limited monarchy, it would mean no more than that a limited monarchy was better suited to our twentieth century needs."

In all sections of the country the Republican managers are sounding a solemn note of warning against "over confidence." With a fine disregard of the ordinary rules of reason, they declare that they are so confident of success that they fear they will be defeated.

How Republicans Insult as Well as Injure the Laborers.

Carl Schurz Gives Lyman Gage a Lesson in Laws of Finance.

The Republican managers offer an outrageous insult to self-respecting American laborers by proposing to ticket them with the "full dinner pail" badge. Says Hearst's Chicago American:

"The Republican party seeking to catch the labor vote, and understanding labor about as well as a monkey understands a tiger, has hit upon the "full dinner pail" as a trade mark.

"Poor, stupid Republicanism decides to issue hundreds of thousands of badges, each with the "full dinner pail" painted on the badge.

"Workmen, if you please, are expected to wear these badges, to wear with them a happy, grateful smile as they trudge from the trust factories to their homes.

"Of course only workmen are to wear the dinner pail badge. No trust manager would think of doing so. He will wear, if anything, a small facsimile of a government bond—if he saw his fellow with the full dinner pail badge on both would laugh very heartily.

"Foolish Mark Hanna, foolish Rockefeller, foolish trusts and bankers. You get so far from the people, you forget that they are human beings.

"You think of the workmen as you think of swine; eager only to fill their bellies. You do not know them. They think of their children, of their children's future, of THEIR OWN PRESENT INDEPENDENCE AND MANHOOD.

"When you offer them a "dinner pail" badge, you offer a stupid insult with every badge. They want THEIR RIGHTS, not YOUR CHARITY or patronage. They don't thank YOU for the food that comes through their hard work. You have not yet got them into mental attitude of serfs. They do not look on you, Messrs. Trusts, as their Divine Providence.

"The American workman thanks HIMSELF for what is in his dinner pail. And although you never seem to dream of it, the workman even dares to think of a day when he shall eat dinner NOT from a PAIL, but at home, with his family, as you, MESSRS. TRUST OWNERS, EAT YOURS."

As a representative of the trust idea of the workingmen Mr. Roosevelt is an ideal Republican candidate. He does not understand or sympathize with their aims. He has never worked for his living. He has never worked save for social or political preferment. While the workmen before him were at their apprenticeships, he was fox hunting on Long Island, and the fence still stands near Morgan's place, where he broke his arm trying to jump his horse out into the road. He CAN sympathize with the man on horseback. He can NOT sympathize with the man on foot.

Roosevelt looks not at the sea of faces, but rather at the array of BODIES. In that crowd he sees not by any means HIS equals, but human atoms that can be used to build up the frame of superior men—like himself. He sees potential regiments of troops to be led gloriously, to be shot plentifully AND TO BE FORGOTTEN while he and the other leaders come home to glory, and to write in the magazines.

Mr. Roosevelt, of course, means well—all men do, or think that they do.

But a great crowd of workmen in his eyes is a great crowd of inferiors. He sees in them men to be enlisted as soldiers for his own glory, men to be cajoled as voters for his own glory, men TO BE KEPT WHERE THEY ARE, for his own glory, that there may be contrast marked and strong between the aristocrat and the plebeian.

THE TRUTH ABOUT MILITARISM.

The Republican National Literary Bureau is circulating, as a refutation of the charge that imperialism and militarism go together, a campaign speech delivered, with exquisite taste, by ex-Senator Manderson in his official capacity as a graduation day speaker at West Point.

General Manderson has compiled a series of tables designed to show that the military burden is insignificant in the United States compared with that borne by the subjects of the armed monarchies of Europe. These tables, we are informed, have been prepared "with very great care," with the idea of having them "accurate beyond possibility of dispute." We are also informed that in so far as they refer to foreign countries the figures have been "brought down to the very latest date possible."

We have first a table showing the number of men in the army of each country, and its proportion to population. Next we have the area of each country, the ratio of soldiers to the square mile and of square miles to soldiers. It is all very interesting, but ought there not to be something more? Yes, and General Manderson has not forgotten it. We want to know how much all this costs, and here is his answer:

	Population	War Budget.	Yr. of Budget.	Amt. per capita.
France	38,517,905	$123,517,631	1898	3.20
Germany	52,279,901	141,175,351	1898	2.70
Austria-Hungary	41,527,800	86,165,124	1897	2.05
Russia	128,902,173	148,640,191	1896	1.15
Turkey	23,569,757	19,921,785	1897	.84
Italy	29,899,785	45,659,609	1898	1.52
Great Britain	37,888,439	88,152,750	1897	2.22
United States	75,000,000	51,193,927	1896	.68

These figures for the United States look strangely small to those who have given the subject any attention. We look at them more closely, and we find that they are for 1896, under a Democratic administration, and before the policy of imperialism was heard of.

It is only for foreign countries that these statistics are brought down "to the very latest date possible." The actual army appropriation for the fiscal year 1901 is 114,220,095.55, which is nearly five times the amount under the Democratic regime. The cost of the army in 1896 was only $23,252,608. The rest of General Manderson's $51,093,927 represents river and harbor and other non-military expenditures.

Thus, even on the Republican statistician's own showing, there are only three military powers in Europe that spend more on their armies than we are spending now. But that tells less than half the story. All the following expenditures, provided for in our appropriation bills for the fiscal year 1901, are included in the European military budgets:

Army	$114,220,095.55
Fortifications	7,383,628.00
Military Academy	653,589.67
Pensions	145,245,230.00
Total	$267,502,543.22

How is this for militarism? Nearly double the burden carried by Russia or Germany; more than double that of France; three times that of Austria or Great Britain; six times that under which Italy is staggering, and thirteen times the load that is breaking the back of Turkey. It put the United States far in the lead of all the military powers in the world in the cost of its military service. How does it improve matters from a Republican standpoint that we do not have much of an army to show for it?

And this does not include the cost of the navy, on which we are properly spending more than any country in the world except England.

SCHURZ AND GAGE.

Secretary Gage recently made the statement, with a view of stopping the movement of gold Democrats to the Bryan side in this campaign, that Mr. Bryan's secretary of the treasury would be able to throw the country on a silver basis simply by making a large or exclusive use of silver in meeting the costs of government. "There would thus be established," he said, "a circuit of silver out of the treasury into the hand of the people, from the people into the banks, from the banks into the custom house and into the hands of the collectors of internal revenue, and the government, properly speaking, would be on a silver basis."

Mr. Schurz denies the statement, writes the Duluth Evening Herald and very properly criticizes Mr. Gage for adopting the role of an alarmist and spreading false alarms that might cause trouble in financial circles. The attention of the secretary of the treasury is also drawn to two points that may not have occurred to him when he rushed into print with this "false alarm." First, if his statement is true, the Republican party acted dishonestly towards those who were promised that it would maintain the gold standard. Second, there will be another session of the present Republican congress before the next president will be inaugurated. There will thus be ample opportunity for the Republicans, as Mr. Schurz points out, "to pass any legislation required to make it utterly impossible for any president to break down the gold standard in the way Mr. Gage describes in his interview."

But Mr. Schurz might have gone further and shown that the treasury figures tell a story which effectually turns Mr. Gage's argument against himself. The treasury's net cash fund, as shown by the last statement, was made up as follows:

Gold coin and bullion	$40,755,044
Gold certificates	22,098,020
Silver coin and bullion	4,750,507
Silver certificates	8,452,930
United States notes	26,096,355
Other assets	17,259,742
Total in treasury	$125,412,598

This is the fund directly under the control of the secretary and apart from the holdings of national bank depositaries. It will be seen from this table that of all the forms of money coming into the treasury, silver is made the largest use of by the present secretary in his disbursements. He obviously pays it out in preference to any other kind. He is evidently fairly forcing the stuff into circulation, and keeping it there. Of the nearly $500,000,000 silver which has been coined or purchased by the government since 1878, all save about $13,000,000 is in circulation among the people, either in the form of certificates or coined dollars. And this small fraction of less than 3 per cent held by the treasury is the smallest of any of the secretary's holding in other varieties of money.

Now, if, as Mr. Gage has said, the crowding of silver out of the treasury and into circulation would suffice to force the country to a silver basis, he is shown by his own figures to be somewhat of a conspirator against the gold standard himself. He is nursing his gold holdings and crowding out the silver instead. He has so far succeeded in the latter effort that out of some $500,000,000 of silver only $13,000,000 is left in the treasury—whereas his gold holdings exceed $62,500,000; and he asks the country to believe that the paying out of this remnant by a Bryan secretary of the treasury would precipitate a panic and cause a drop to the silver basis. But the actual immediate result of paying out the silver remnant would be rather an increase in the treasury's gold holdings and the strengthening of the treasury's position in respect to the gold standard.

The ingeniousness of the secretary in making up his extraordinary statement is brought sharply into question by the figures of the department under his own management. He has sacrificed truth for the sake of trying to make political capital.

ROOSEVELT AND THE VOLUNTEER.

If any Minnesota volunteer imagines that he has a sympathetic "fellow soldier" in Roosvelt, who comes west soon, we ask that misguided militiaman to learn what Roosevelt really thinks of him. When the war department was selecting troops for Puerto Rico Roosevelt sent this letter to the secretary of war. He will not deny its authenticity, because it is in the official records:

"Santiago, July 23, 1898.

"My Dear Mr. Secretary: I am writing with the knowledge and approval of Gen. Wheeler. We earnestly hope that you will send most of the regulars and at any rate the cavalry division, including the rough riders, who are as good as any regulars and three times as good as any state troops, to Puerto Rico," etc., etc.

Mr. Roosevelt's idea that rough riders led by Roosevelt, of course, were three times as good as any state troops, may appeal to the average Minnesota man who enlisted for his country—and then again it may not!

Gen. Alger, then secretary of war, replied that the volunteers were just as good as any troops in the service, and advised Roosevelt to quit talking so foolish.—(The Winona Herald.)

THE ALLIANCE WITH ENGLAND.

Under the caption "A Great Alliance," the Daily Republican of Red Wing, edited by the head of the Republican party management in this state, on May 27, 1898, came out boldly in favor of an alliance with England thusly:

"The alliance between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race is becoming something more than a mere theory or speculation. It is already far advanced to the rank of fact. And in this, too, we find one of the results of war which is worth no small measure of the loss of blood and treasure that we are likely to sustain.

"It is race movements that govern in history. Individuals and policies change; but the great tie of race affiliation persists; and it is today, in the broad sense, as it has always been, a question of what race is fittest to survive, to subdue the world and to dominate it. Whatever that race may be, and we have but one possible answer to the question, the different branches of that race must draw together, get ready to stand shoulder to shoulder, and resist the common assault upon them, whose coming is a matter only of time.

"What the Anglo-Saxon race has done, as represented by the triumphs of Englishmen and American in the four quarters of the globe, is the warrant for calling this the race of the future. But Europe has other answers; and already they who hate the Anglo-Saxon and would crush him are drawing closer their alliances and laying their plots and counterplots. When the enemy closes up his lines, that should be the signal for order of battle on our part; and the Anglo-Saxon can meet the coming assault only by a union of forces that shall sway the world.

"The memory of ancient contests has kept us foolishly apart. The time has come now to lay those aside, and England has magnanimously led the way. In this time of our danger, she has stood between us and the hate of Europe, and her statesmen do not hesitate to prophesy the future alliance as their accepted policy. Let us accept the hand so freely offered. We of the same blood must stand together against the world; and with England and America holding firm alliance, the very gates of hell and the wrath of Goth and Vandal shall not prevail against them."

McKinley's administration will rank in expensiveness with any former administration in the history of the country, not even excepting the Lincoln administration during the rebellion, writes the Omaha World-Herald. For over two years now the government has been pouring forth its treasury without stint in making preparation for and in conducting foreign wars, and now at this date the disbursements are going on greater than ever. The draughts from the Philippine war are steadily increasing, while the Chinese campaign is making heavy inroads into the treasury. During the month of August the cost of running the government was nearly $1,000,000 more than the receipts from all sources. To realize the full import of this loss it should be remembered that during August a year ago there was a surplus in the treasury of $4,500,000. The relative loss, therefore, is more than $5,000,000 for the past month. According to the report of the treasurer for the month just closed the total receipts of the government were $49,688,755, as against $49,978,173 for August of last year. The expenditures were $50,500,198, which was $4,947,887 more than during the same period a year ago. The expenses of the navy were increased $868,588 and were $5,456,553 for the month just passed. The expenses of the army were $250,309 greater than in the previous year and were $15,231,700. The largest increase, however, was in the civil and miscellaneous account, which was $11,869,782, an increase of $4,305,330 over the same budget for August, 1899.

Part of this heavy loss is credited to the cost of the census and the redemption of Porto Rican coins, but even granting this, is it not evident that the government is pursuing a course that may well cause all thoughtful citizens to inquire, "Whither Are We Drifting?"

HAMILTONIANISM VERSUS DEMOCRACY.

The Springfield Republican suggests that Speaker Henderson's cry for a revival of Hamiltonianism is not liable to be echoed by men who know from their historical studies what Hamilton's ideas in government were, says the Duluth Evening Herald. Speaker Henderson declares that he wants a man elected to the presidency who believes in those doctrines. Does he include Hamilton's aristocratic theories in his approbation? Does he know what kind of a government it was that Alexander Hamilton wished the thirteen American colonies to set up after the war of independence? In Mr. Lodge's biography of Hamilton the Massachusetts senator describes the "republic" which the great revolutionary statesman advocated, in this passage: "The republic of Hamilton was to be an aristocratic republic as distinguished from a democratic republic, and the power of the separate states was to be effectually crippled. The first object was to be obtained by committing the choice of the president and senators, who were to hold office during good behavior, to a class of the community qualified to vote by the possession of a certain amount of real property. The second was to be secured by giving to the president of the United States the appointment of governors of the various states, who were to have a vote on all state legislation. These provisions, as may be seen at a glance, involved the essential character of the government, and although purely republican, came much nearer to the British model than any other by their recognition of classes and of the political rights of property."

There you have Alexander Hamilton's proposed philosophy stripped and exposed. Hamilton was a remarkable man, but his ideas were not in the least democratic. They will not make a good issue in this campaign.

HELPFUL TO ALL.

The Glencoe Enterprise:—Governor Lind deserves to be, and without fear of disappointment it is confidently predicted that he will be re-elected by an increased majority. A lawyer of broad learning he has been his own chief counsellor; of studious habits he has familiarized himself with all the duties pertaining to his high position, and by reason of his various attainments both native and acquired he has been helpful to the legislature and the business man as well as to the teacher, the farmer and the common man of toil. John Lind don't have to rely on nationality or accidental birth for re-election; thousands who voted against him two years ago, but who recognize true merit will help swell his majority in 1900.

A PATRIOTIC DUTY.

The National Republican:—National Republican will support Bryan and Stephenson as a patriotic duty. It is the only way to preserve a republican form of government for the United States. If McKinley is elected we will have an Imperial President supported by militarism and trust corruption. If Bryan is elected Lincolnian republicanism will bless the nation and peace and prosperity will return to the homes of the masses.

We are at the beginning of the two ways—one leading to monarchy, the other to a government by the people for the people. Every Lincolnian will choose the latter. Every honest, patriotic Populist will vote for Bryan and Stevenson. By this act they do not abandon Populism. It is like joining a neighbor for mutual protection against an attack from highwaymen. Our national inheritance is in great peril, and he who refuses to unite for its protection is a traitor. When Bryan is elected each patriot can return to his own political home honored by his devotion to the largest liberty to the greatest number.

Who Is Sherlock Holmes?

When a judge is adjudging he is sometimes very oblivious.

In a case at the law courts yesterday a witness referred to "following up a clew in the manner of Sherlock Holmes."

"Who is Sherlock Holmes?" inquired Mr. Justice Day.

"A person who has been made notorious by Conan Doyle," was the reply.

"Who is he?" continued the judge.

Then counsel came to the rescue. "Sherlock Holmes," he explained, "is the name of a book, my lord."—London Mail.

The Lady Interfered.

Senator Spooner of Wisconsin is one of the most eloquent men in the upper house, inimitable on the stump and credited with being able to do about as he pleases with his audiences. A friend and admirer who has known the senator from boyhood is authority for the following story:

Some years ago, when taking part in a symposium in the northern part of the state Senator Spooner was making an impassioned appeal to his audience in the midst of which the master of ceremonies touched him on the shoulder, and, pointing to the clock, indicated that his time had expired.

Quick as a flash a woman rose from her seat, and, mounting a chair in front of the clock, threw her shawl over its face amid the laughter and cheers of the audience and to the dismay of the master of ceremonies. It is doubtful if Senator Spooner ever received a prettier compliment.—Washington Letter.

WHEN DOGS ARE SICK.

The Way to Give Medicine to These Highly Sensitive Patients.

In all treatment of a sick dog remember you are dealing with a highly sensitive and nervous patient. Be very gentle, avoid roughness or anything likely to alarm him. In giving him any liquid medicine do not open his mouth, but, placing him between your knees, with his face looking in the same direction as your own, gently raise his jaw and, pulling his lips away from his teeth on one side of his mouth, to form a cup or funnel, very slowly pour from bottle or spoon the quantity he is to have into it.

Keep his head raised for a minute or two and if he does not swallow the dose insert a spoon between his front teeth. This will have the effect of drawing off his attention from the medicine and he will usually swallow at once. If the dose is a pill, bolus or anything solid, hold his head the same way as before mentioned, but with the left hand under lower jaw, press firmly on each side with thumb and finger at the junction of upper and lower jaws.

This will usually cause him to open his mouth, when the dose should be put into the mouth as far back as possible over the tongue (or he will spit it out) and close the jaws somewhat sharply, and in most cases the deed is done. If any trouble arises with the action of his front paws this may be got over by wrapping him round with a shawl or coarse apron.

When once you have got into the way of it, you will be surprised how simple it is. I am quite sure a practiced owner or kennelsman would dose a dozen dogs while a novice was making a bungle over one.—"All About Dogs," by Charles Henry Lane.

THE COLLAR BUTTON.

Its Blessings Realized Only by Those Who Have Lived Without It.

"In looking over a trunk full of old truck the other day," said the elderly man, "I came across a lot of old shirts with the buttons sewed on, and as I looked at them I realized anew what the collar button means to humanity. There have been greater inventions, surely, but not many that have conferred a more unmixed blessing on mankind.

"The younger person of today, accustomed to the collar button always, cannot realize what it was to be without it. He can never know what it was to have shirts with the buttons sewed on—or not, as the case might be. Not so very many years ago, when the collar button was yet comparatively new, before persons had come to keep, as everybody commonly does now, a lot of buttons on hand, the man who had lost his collar button thought himself entitled to the sympathy of his fellows, but wrung as he might be by that loss he could not even guess at the anguish that in the sewed on button days filled the heart of the man who, when he came to put on his last clean shirt, found that key button, the one on the collar band, most important one of all, gone entirely or only just hanging by a thread!

"I knew a man once who had this happen to him and didn't swear. That was the only great thing he ever did, but I have always thought that that alone was enough to stamp him as a most extraordinary man."—New York Sun.

Ditched the Bishop.

"I remember once driving across the country with Bishop —," writes Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady of "A Missionary In the Great West" in the Ladies' Home Journal, "while discussing the nature of the soul. That is, the bishop was discussing. I was only prompting by a question now and then. We were on the rear seat of a wagon, with the driver on the front seat. It was a very dark night. In the middle of the bishop's exposition the wagon took a wild plunge, there was a crash, and over we went into the muddy ditch.

"'I beg your pardon, gents!' said the driver, who had retained control of the horses as we scrambled to our feet. 'I was so interested in hearin the man discussin my immortal soul, which I hardly ever knowed that I had one before, that I clean forgot where we was and drove you plump into the ditch.'"

THE GALLUP FAMILY.

AN EVENING OF LAMENTATIONS BY THE AILING WIFE.

She Knew Her Time For Departure For the Other World Had Come, and She Was Anxious to Become an Angel, but There Were Drawbacks.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

Mr. Gallup had finished his supper, removed his coat and shoes and sat down in the rocking chair to read the copy of The Chemung County Gazette he had brought home from the post-office when Mrs. Gallup dropped down on the lounge with a sigh and began:

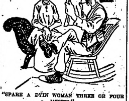
"Samuel, if you could spare a dyin woman three or four minits of your time I should like to talk to you. I know you don't like to be bothered when you are readin, and I wouldn't say a word if it was only a bile on my leg or one of my back aches, but it's more serious than that, Samuel—fur more serious."

Mr. Gallup stretched his legs out to their fullest extent and made his toes crack, but he never looked up from his paper.

"I don't want to give you no sudden shock," continued Mrs. Gallup as the tears began to stream down her cheeks and her nose to twitch, "but it's my duty to tell you, so you kin prepare yourself. Samuel, you'll be a widow before Saturday night! Tonight is Tuesday night. Before sundown on Saturday night the funeral will be over, I'll be an angel, and you'll be free to go out somewhere every evenin and play checkers. Do you hear me, Samuel?"

Mr. Gallup may or may not have heard her, but if he did he paid not the slightest attention.

"Yes; I've got my call to go," she resumed as she wiped her eyes on her apron. "I've had rheumatiz, fever, consumption and heart disease, and many and many a time I've expected to go, but I have never felt like this before. My heart goes tunk, tunk, tunk; my lungs seem to be hitchin around, and now and then my breath shuts off on me the same as if I had got caught in a hole in the fence. Mrs. Watkins was took this very way before she died, and so was Mr. Comfort. It may come tonight, or it may be delayed till tomorrer, but within a day or two I'll be an angel. You won't blame me fur dyin, will you, Samuel?"



"SPARE A DYIN WOMAN THREE OR FOUR MINITS."

Mr. Gallup turned his paper over, pulled in his feet and crossed his legs, but made no reply.

"Folks can't help dyin, Samuel—that is, I can't. I hate to go before I've made the soft soap and put up the fall pickles, but I can't help myself. It was so with Mrs. Watkins. She had the soap grease all ready and was all ready to dye rags fur a new carpet, but when Gabriel's horn sounded she had to spread her wings. You'll miss the soft soap, Samuel, fur you're a great hand to wash up, and you'll miss the pickles, fur you love sour things, but will you miss me?"

Mr. Gallup held the paper in his left hand and reached down his right to scratch his heel through his sock, but he was dumb. Mrs. Gallup looked at him through her tears for a time and then choked down a sob and said:

"Well, if you don't miss me I can't help it. I've allus had hot water ready when you wanted to wash your feet, and you've never found me without stickin salve fur sore fingers. I've nursed you through colic and sot up with you through fever. You've never had to tell me my bread was heavy or the biscuit tasted of saleratus. And when I'm laid away, Samuel, you'll remember that I wore the same bonnet and shawl fur 21 years and that I allus made a pair of shoes last three years. Haven't I done purty well all things considered?"

Mr. Gallup might have agreed with her, but if he did he didn't say so aloud. He crossed his legs the other way and scratched the other heel, and when Mrs. Gallup could restrain her tears she observed:

"I ain't leavin this house the way some wives would, Samuel. When I am gone, you'll find your shirts and socks and everything in the usual place, and you won't have to sew on a button. I'll even scald out the teapot and scour out the dishpan if I have time. If angels can look down from heaven, then I want to look down and see that I've left everything in order. I want to ask you about angels, Samuel. Are they all old or young angels, or are they sorter mixed up? Will I be set back 30 or 40 years, or will I be an old woman angel?"

She looked directly at Mr. Gallup and waited for a reply, but he was reading how to make a hammock out of a flour barrel, and he paid no heed to the question.

"And are all angels purty, Samuel?" she continued after awhile. "I've never been purty since I was a baby and fell out of the winder, but if I've got to be an angel I want my face made over as soon as I get up there. I'm not goin to be p'inted out fur my homeliness as I fly around. If I was, I know I'd make up faces at some of 'em. Will I be changed in the twinklin of an eye and made as purty as the rest of 'em?"

Something like a smile flitted over the face of Mr. Gallup, but it was probably caused by the article he was reading.

"And about the music, Samuel? I can't play on no harp without lessons. I have never even seen a harp. When we was first married, I used to play on the accordion fur you, but it was awful poor playin, and you soon got sick of it. Is it goin to be expected that I kin fly right up to heaven and begin playin on a harp the very first thing? If it is, then I dunno as I want to die. I never could a-bear havin folks laugh at me. And the singin, Samuel—the singin! My voice is cracked, and I sing through my nose, and is that goin to do up there? I s'pose I could walk around with a robe on and talk and visit, but I can't sing nor play, and they needn't expect it. Samuel, shall we talk about whether you'd better take a second wife or not? Sometimes I think you had, and sometimes I think you hadn't. What do you think?"

Mr. Gallup turned from the hammock article to one on natural gas in Ohio, and he extended his legs again and prepared to digest it thoroughly. It might have occurred to him that Mrs. Gallup was in the room and that she or some one else was talking to him, but he answered not. Ten minutes had gone by when he finished the article and looked up and around as if he had suddenly missed something. Mrs. Gallup lay curled up on the lounge fast asleep, and in the corner of each eye still glistened a big tear.

HER "SUSPICION CURE."

It Made Life One Lingering Honeymoon For Mrs. Jones' Adviser.

"I would be quite happy if my husband would not spend so much of his time at his club," said Mrs. Jones, with a sigh.

"Why don't you try the suspicion cure?" said her intimate friend.

"What in the name of Susan B. Anthony is the suspicion cure?" asked Mrs. Jones in amazement.

"Well, my husband got in the habit of spending his evenings at his club, and I worried over it for some time before I hit upon a plan to keep him at home. At first I pleaded with him, telling him how lonely I was at home when he was away, but he would only laugh and promise to be home early, which meant midnight or later. Then I changed my tactics. Instead of asking him to remain at home I urged him to go to his club. The way he raised his eyebrows the first time I suggested it showed me I was on the right tack, and I resolved to keep it up. One night when he came home for dinner he announced that he had a severe headache and would remain home for the evening. I opposed the idea and pointed out that an evening at his club would cause him to forget his headache and do it good. He gave me a hard look, but acted on the suggestion and left for his club. Something told me that he would be back within an hour, so I made an elaborate toilet and waited for him to return. He came home, as I expected, with the plea that his head was worse and that he couldn't stand the noise at the club. I condoled with him and ignored his question concerning my elaborate toilet. He hasn't been away for an evening since. It is almost like the old honeymoon, only he appears to have something on his mind that he is not entirely satisfied about."—London Answers.

Baldness.

It has been found on study of 300 cases of loss of hair that baldness prevails most with unmarried men, which is contrary to the general belief. The worries of the bachelor may be fewer, but they are more trying to the scalp than are the multitudinous cares of the man of family. Most bald people are found to lead indoor lives, and almost all of them belong to the intellectual class. Usually the loss of hair begins before the thirtieth year. In woman it usually constitutes a general thinning; in men it affects the top of the head. Diseases that affect the general nutrition of the body are likely to thin the hair. Heredity is a factor. If one has baldheaded ancestors, all the drugs of the pharmacopoeia will not bring out flowing locks.—Argonaut.

Four to One.

An English officer in Malta stopped in riding to ask a native the way. He was answered by a shrug of the shoulders and a "No speak English."

"You're a fool then," said the officer.

But the man knew enough English to ask:

"Do you understand Maltese?"

"No."

"Do you know Arabic?"

"No."

"Do you know Italian?"

"No."

"Do you know Greek?"

"No."

"Then you four fools. I only one!"—Youth's Companion.

An Incredulous Lawmaker.

It is recalled that when the projector of the railroad up Mount Washington sought a charter from the New Hampshire legislature one of the lawmakers, in his speech on the subject, said, "Give the fool permission, but he might as well ask for a railroad to the moon!" But the railroad is still running to the Tip Top House.—Buffalo Commercial.

TIME AND SPACE are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED

Governor John Lind Reviews National and State Issues in His Address at the Auditorium in St. Paul.

Facts and Pertinent Comment for the Consideration of the Electors of the State of Minnesota.

Last Thursday evening the Auditorium in the city of St. Paul was filled with an enthusiastic audience to listen to the presentation and discussion of campaign issues by Governor Lind, Mayor Gray, and others. The speech delivered by Gov. Lind was in acceptance of the unanimous nomination accorded him by the democrats, populists and silver republicans for a second term as governor, and was as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen and Members of the Conventions: Four years ago when the same parties, who have today honored me with the nomination for the most important office in the state, first conferred upon me the same honor, the people of the state were not ready for the change of policy which my election would have implied; but not daunted nor discouraged, you again placed my name in nomination two years ago, and your action was ratified by the people by an overwhelming majority. Two years I have served as the chief executive of the state. My every act has been subjected to the most searching scrutiny, friendly and unfriendly. That you should again, without solicitation and without seeking on my part, place my name in nomination in the same manner for continuance in this great office, is evidence of confidence and approval more touching and gratifying to me than the mere political victory in which it may result if your selection is again approved by the people of the state. I thank you all sincerely for the honor conferred. I also desire to thank you, and I congratulate our political friends and the people of the state, on the wise selection that you have made for the other positions on the state ticket.

I have not, as yet, had an opportunity to study the platform that you have adopted, but I assume that it is in line with our endeavors in the state, and nationally, in the past. If the people of the state shall see fit to approve of your choice, and I believe that a true regard for their own best interest will prompt them to do so, the state will have an administration that will be fair, just and efficient in every department. In view of the occasion and the pending campaign, you will pardon me, I am sure, for devoting a few moments to the discussion of the questions awaiting decision at the polls.

AMBITION OF THE FEW.

Ever since the formation of our government, two tendencies have been apparent and operative in every general election that the country has had. In fact, they developed in the convention which formed the constitution, and in that convention was laid the foundation for the existence of the political parties which have in turn directed the administration of public affairs since that day. One of these tendencies, and it is a tendency inherent in every society and under every form of government, is the endeavor on the part of the few to control the government and to so direct legislation and the administration of public affairs as to secure to themselves and to their class special privileges and economic advantages through governmental intervention. The other is the effort of the common people at self-preservation, politically and economically. This was the issue in the memorable campaign of one hundred years ago which resulted in the election of Thomas Jefferson. The federal party of that day stood for the same principles and tendencies in government that Hannaism represents at the present time. Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, represented, and in his administration of public affairs developed and formulated, the principles of just and equal laws, fairly and efficiently administered, with equality of privilege and of opportunity to all men.

The party lines formed thus early have continued, though not with identity of name, to the present day. In 1830 Jackson represented the same principles contended for by Jefferson, and so did Lincoln in 1860. The slaveholding aristocracy of the south, without relinquishing the name of democracy, to which it was in no wise historically entitled, had adopted all the vicious principles of the old federal party. Their trust was in the power of wealth and in privilege, with force in the background, as is that of the Republican party today. Lincoln, on the other hand, represented the principles of Jefferson and the aspirations and conscience of the common people, as we believe that our valiant leader, W. J. Bryan, does at the present time. Our political and economic situation at this moment verifies this historical resume. Let us look at the actual conditions that confront the American people, and it is easy to determine what the real issues are in this campaign. Notwithstanding the fact that ours is the greatest, the most populous, the most intelligent, the most powerful and the wealthiest civilized country in the world, its entire industry has, with the aid and through the operation of class legislation, passed into the control of comparatively a handful of men. The enumeration of the trusts controlling our industries, which is given in the Minneapolis Journal Almanac, on pages 127 to 137, covers every form of American industrial enterprise, and shows that their domination is complete. The capitalization of the trusts that had been formed before the present year exceeded $7,000,000,000, and many have been organized since the 1st of January. With the power of such wealth exempt from taxation, with the monopoly of patents and the control of transportation facilities, with a tariff specially designed to accomplish their ends, it is not surprising that they control the industry of the nation.

PARTIES' ATTITUDE TOWARDS TRUSTS.

What is the attitude of the parties on this question?

The Republican party, in its platform, pays a tribute to the virtues of the trusts and extols their value in extending our foreign trade. It admonishes them to better behavior at home, it is true, but the real position of the party on this, as on other questions, is best defined by its chairman and acknowledged leader, Mr. Hanna. He defined the party's position on this subject, as I read from a dispatch to the Pioneer Press, under date of Oct. 19, 1899: "The Democrats say I am a fraud to talk about trusts. I am not going to talk about them. This combination of capital for one purpose and another is not a political question at all. It is a business proposition and ought not to have been brought into politics." And then he continues: "The so-called trusts are not new; they have been found in England and Germany as far back as 200 years and are increasing. Therefore, from a business standpoint of view, the foundation of these combinations, in one sense, is a step forward. The Democrats would have us believe that they are terrible anacondas that would swallow us up. However, if the trusts are a menace to the country, what party better than the Republican party will give us relief?".

Yes, my friends, we do believe that the trusts are anacondas, and we believe they will consume the substance of our people; that they will undermine the independence of our citizenship, and destroy the opportunities that ought to exist for the individual in a free country. On this point ex-Senator Washburn used the following language in an interview in the Chicago Times-Herald Sept. 11, 1899:

"When I was a young man—I am now sixty-eight—I had the world before me, and there was absolutely a fair field for me. Take all of our most successful business men of today and their experiences were like mine. They entered the race without a handicap, and their grit and capacity won. Now, this building up of trusts puts a stop to fair and equal opportunities for the young men of today. The young man just out of college has no opening, as a rule. He cannot begin business on his own account against organized capital. He must join the procession; he must content himself with being a mere clerk, and the chances are that he will never get any further because there are so many in his class. This makes the situation a serious one, and I am sorry for the young man of today. I have studied the situation, and I am sure of what I am saying."

HANNA'S DEFENSE OF TRUSTS.

I ask you, young men in this audience, whether this statement is true or not. "But," say Mr. Hanna, "from a business standpoint of view the formation of these combinations is in one sense a step forward." This may be true from Mr. Hanna's standpoint. It may be true from the business standpoint of Mr. Rockefeller; but is it true from the business standpoint of the farmer, of the merchant, of the mechanic, or of the man in any occupation who lives by the labor of his hands or of his brain?

Let us see what this "organized industry" has accomplished, for instance, for the farmer, who is a great producer and the foundation of the wealth and prosperity of this state. He produces for the competitive market at home and abroad. There is no trust to govern the prices of what he sells, and, in the nature of things, there cannot be; but every article that he buys, from the matches on the shelf to the coal in his stove and the lumber in his barn, from the salt on the table to the fencing for his stock, is controlled by the trusts, and the prices of these commodities, and hundreds of others, are arbitrarily fixed, without reference to market value or cost of production.

Taking the farm value of a bushel of wheat as worth at an average throughout Minnesota 10 cents less than the Minneapolis cash price, ten bushels would buy, at the wholesale prices quoted by the Commercial Bulletin, the official trade journal of Minneapolis jobbers, the following goods on the dates named:

Kerosene oil (Minnesota state test), Jan. 1, 1898, 101 gallons; Jan. 1, 1899, 70 gallons; Jan. 1, 1900, 56 gallons.

Granulated sugar, Jan. 1, 1898, 157 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 118 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 104 lbs.

Common salt, Jan. 1, 1898, 9½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1899, 6½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1900, 5 bbls.

Lumber (16 ft. 2x4). Jan, 1898. 723 feet; Jan. 1, 1899, 536 feet; Jan. 1, 1900, 418 feet.

Wire nails, Jan. 1, 1898, 4 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1899, 3 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1900, 1½ kegs.

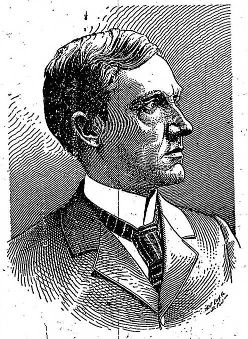
Barbed wire (common painted), Jan. 1, 1898, 435 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 310 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 133 lbs.

The above figures are based on the wholesale prices of oil, salt, sugar, lumber, nails and barbed wire at Minneapolis. Freight, handling, and retailer's profits would probably make these articles cost, on the average, at the farm about 20 per cent more, and the amount of each of these articles which ten bushels of wheat would buy would be correspondingly less. Ten bushels of wheat, like any other product, are worth what they will buy. The prosperity of the farm is not measured by the volume of its product, nor even by the market value of the product, but by the net purchasing power of the commodities produced.

WILL BRING SERFDOM.

It needs no argument to convince you that the continuation of this condition of affairs will rapidly reduce the mass of the America people to a condition of absolute serfdom. Will you have that condition or will you not? It is for the people to answer at the polls. Hanna says:

"However, if the trusts are a menace to the country, what party better than the Republican party will give you relief?". This is great comfort and might carry some weight were it not for the fact that the Republican party has been in absolute control of every power of the government during the last four years and is today. If it were desirous of destroying the trusts and protecting the people, why has it not done so? To this the Republicans answer: "We proposed a constitutional amendment and the Democrats would not help to pass it. We are helpless; we can do nothing." What was the aim of that constitutional amendment and what was its purpose? The aim and effect of that proposed constitutional amendment would have been to deprive the states of every vestige of power that they now possess to protect the people against the oppression of these combinations. Its purpose was to defer action upon the question upon a plausible pretext until Hanna had had an opportunity to again call upon the trusts for the exigencies of this campaign. Every citizen knows that it takes years and years to bring about an amendment of the constitution. Is our constitution such a failure that it vests congress with no power to protect its own people against oppression? To admit that, is to admit that it is a lamentable delusion. The very men who argue to this effect insist that the congress of the United States has the power to govern other peoples and countries against the convictions of "plain duty." Is our constitution such a perversity that under it congress can legislate for the oppression of foreign peoples, but is powerless to legislate for the protection of our own? Such logic will not appeal to the American voter.



GOVERNOR JOHN LIND.

CONGRESS CAN THROTTLE TRUSTS.

With absolute control over interstate commerce, with obsolute control of the power of national taxation, congress has the power to drive every trust that ever existed into oblivion. Congress, by proper legislation, regulated the transportation of commodities manufactured by prison labor among the states. Isn't it absurd to say that it has not the like power to regulate the transportation of trust products? When congress saw fit to abolish the issue of paper money by state banks it put a tax of 10 per cent on the issuance of such notes, and state bank notes came suddenly to an end. Thank God the Kansas City convention did not stand terror stricken before this anaconda threatening the future of the American people! In language that cannot be misconstrued or misunderstood it said in its platform:

"Private monopolies are indefensible and intolerable. They destroy competition, control the price of all material, and of the finished product, thus robbing both producer and consumer. They lessen the employment of labor and arbitrarily fix the terms and conditions thereof, and deprive individual energy and small capital of their opportunity for betterment. They are the most efficient means yet devised for appropriating the fruits of industry to the benefits of the few at the expense of the many, and unless their insatiate greed is checked all wealth will be aggregated in a few hands and the republic destroyed.

"The dishonest paltering with the trust evil by the Republican party in state and national platforms is conclusive proof of the truth of the charge that trusts are the legitimate product of Republican policies; that they are fostered by Republican laws and that they are protected by the Republican administration in return for campaign subscriptions and political support.

"We pledge the Democratic party to an increasing warfare in nation, state and city against private monopoly in every form. Existing laws against trusts must be enforced and more stringent ones must be enacted, providing for publicity as to the affairs of corporations engaged in interstate commerce and requiring all corporations to show, before doing business outside the state of their origin, that they have no water in their stock and that they have not attempted to monopolize any branch of business or the production of any article of merchandise, and the whole constitutional power of congress over interstate commerce, the mails and all modes of interstate communication shall be exercised by the enactment of comprehensive laws upon the subject of trusts.

"Tariff laws should be amended by putting the products of trusts upon the free list to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection.

"The failure of the present Republican administration, with an absolute control over all the branches of the national government, to enact any legislation designed to prevent or even curtail the absorbing power of trusts and illegal combinations, or to enforce the anti-trust laws already on the statute books; proves the insincerity of the high-sounding phrases of the Republican platform.

"Corporations should be protected in all their rights and their legitimate interests should be respected, but any attempt by corporations to interfere with the public affairs of the people or to control the sovereign which creates them should be forbidden under such penalties as will make such attempts impossible."

BELIEF IN FREE LIST.

If Bryan is elected what is here indicated will be accomplished. With regard to many of these trust commodities, the simplest and easiest way to afford the people relief would be to put them on the free list. I saw an editorial statement in the Minneapolis Journal some six weeks ago to the effect that the sugar trust had raised the price of sugar five times since the 1st of May last, and each time it cost the country $8,000,000. When you bear in mind that the sugar trust is protected by a tariff of 1 95-100 cents, practically two cents a pound, and that the price of raw sugar is usually about two cents a pound, you can readily see how this grievance could be removed by putting sugar on the free list. And I ask you, earnestly and candidly, why in the world should this not be done? It was good Republican doctrine when I was a Republican; why is it not good doctrine now, as well as common sense? It would save the American people hundreds of millions of dollars and bring additional comforts to the table of every American home; but the sugar trust controls the administration and it cannot be done.

THEY WANT THE EARTH.

But these interests, these privileged classes, are not content with our own country. They want more worlds to conquer. They want to control populations that have less power of resistance than the white race—lands where their dominion may be complete, and so, taking advantage of the conditions growing out of the Spanish-American war, they are now endavoring to establish imperialism by fastening upon our institutions a colonial system and a large standing army. Our people know intuitively that there is menace and danger in this new departure. To overcome this feeling they appeal to the patriotism, to the national pride and to the selfishness of the people. They say that the glory of our flag and the prestige of our name demand it. They say that, besides, there is money in it. This latter they rely upon as their most convincing argument. Did the Spanish people find imperialism profitable? Did their colonial empire tend to the upbuilding of their industries, their trade and their progress? On the contrary, it had the opposite effect. From being the most powerful state of Christendom, the most enlightened and in many respects the most progressive, before it embarked in the venture of colonial empire, its power, its resources and its people had been dragged down to the lowest depths of degradation before we forced it to abandon the system. Shall we disregard the example of Spain and adopt the very system that destroyed her power and impoverished her people?

Nations can grow and expand, as ours has, to their political and economic advantage. But such national growth always has been, and always will be through the occupation and acquisition of territory, not already occupied by a dense population, and by the planting therein of the expanding nation's own people and its own institutions. Such was our expansion over the territory acquired from Spain in the southern part of our country, and from France in the south and to the west of us. The same is true of Alaska. But the white race never has and never can permanently occupy and inhabit land within the tropics.

INTEGRAL PARTS, NEVER.

We can never hope to make the Philippine islands integral parts of our Union, occupied by people of our race, with our political and social ideals, as we have in Florida, Louisiana and California. Our occupation of these islands will be military and the government colonial, thus converting our own institutions from a republic, resting upon manhood suffrage, governed by laws of the people's own making, in other words, governed by the consent of the governed, to a military empire. Such changes in the institutions of nations in the past have always proven destructive of the liberties of the people, and in the end, of their national existence. This historical fact is well expressed by Froude, the historian, in his introduction to his "Life of Caesar." He says:

"To the student of political history, and to the English student above all others, the conversion of the oman republic into a military empire, commands a peculiar interest. Notwithstanding many differences, the English and the Romans essentially resemble one another. The early Romans possessed the faculty of self-government beyond any people of whom we have historical knowledge, with the one exception of ourselves. In virtue of their temporal freedom, they became the most powerful nation in the known world, and their liberties perished only when Rome became mistress of conquered races, to whom she was unable or unwilling to extend her privileges.

"If there be one lesson which history teaches it is this, that free nations cannot govern subject provinces. If they are unable or unwilling to submit their dependencies to share in their own constitution, the constitution itself will fall in pieces from mere incompetence for its duties."

The rightfulness of the proposition to govern other peoples against their will ought not to be open for discussion by the American people, whose government rests upon the proposition that government by force, against the will of the governed and not instituted by the consent of the governed, is tyranny. The only answer that we can get to this proposition is that the Philippines are ours—that we have acquired them by purchase and by conquest. I deny the validity of each of these claims. There was a time when human beings could be bought and sold under our laws, but happily that time is past. McKinley's statement, that conquest is criminal aggression and cannot be permitted by our code of morals, is as true to-day as when he uttered it. Why did not he stick to his original code of morals? Why did he permit Hanna to revise it?

WILL NOT DISCUSS IT.

The truth of the matter is that we cannot enlist our opponents in an earnest discussion of this question, at least not upon the moral side of the controversy. They will not listen to it. If we appeal to the constitution, they say we have outlived it. If we refer to the Declaration of Independence, they say that that document is a collection of glittering generalities, good enough in their day, but not applicable now. If we cite them to the maxims of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, they say that these men are dead. Our only recourse, therefore, is to demonstrate to the people the falsity of the claim that imperialism will pay. A colonial empire may prove profitable to the trusts and to the army and navy contractors, and to the favored individuals, but it never can and never will profit the country or the people as a whole.

The only way in which the American people could secure gain from the possession of the Philippines would be by the expansion of our trade with them. The profit of such trade, in the nature of things, could not be greater than the value of the commodities that would pass in exchange. The total value of the exports and imports of the Philippine Islands have in no year exceeded $30,000,000. The profit on such trade cannot be many millions, and supposing it were doubled, trebled or quadrupled, the profit would not be large enough to bear the expense of the increased military establishment for one month. But whether the profits were great or small, one thing is certain: Those profits would not return into the pockets of the same people who have to bear the burden of maintaining the army and navy necessary for and incident to colonial empire. But the whole argument is fallacious. As was well said by Mr. Bryan, you need not own a people to trade with them. A friend is a better customer than an enemy. If we want the trade of the Philippines, let us secure it as we secure other trade, by the superiority and cheapness of our products, by fair treatment and by the establishment of mutual confidence and relations of good will. These are the conditions that bring trade—not conquest, not war nor oppression. But in considering the question of the profits of imperialism you must not lose sight of the expense of its companion evil—the large standing army.

THE LARGE ARMY.

When I was a member of congress, when we were building and providing for the navy which fought and won the victories of the Spanish war, when we had the same regular army establishment that we had at the commencement of that war, the total appropriation for the army and navy in no year during my term of service exceeded $80,000,000. This amount was not exceeded in any year prior to the Spanish war, except 1897, when it reached $82,000,000. That the standing army that we then had was ample and sufficient for the protection of our country and institutions is a matter of history.

When the war with Spain broke out, and the President made a call upon the states for additional forces, that call was responded to almost before it was made. And it is no exaggeration to say that if the exigencies had demanded, ten men could have been had for every one that was required. A large standing army may be necessary for the purpose of imperialism, but it is not necessary for the protection of republican institutions, and its necessity had never been urged until imperialism made its appearance. A popular government, while it should have a small number of trained and efficient regular troops and a sufficient number of officers for manning its defenses, for emergencies, and to form the nucleus in case of need for larger forces, should rely in the main for the defense of its institutions on its volunteer citizen soldiery. This we have done in the past, and this is in harmony with the theory of our institutions and the views of the fathers. Gen. Knox, a Revolutionary soldier, who was the first secretary of war under Washington, and under whom our army establishment was organized, used this language in his first report, which was forwarded to congress by President Washington with his approval:

"It is the intention of the present attempt to suggest the most efficient system of defense which may be compatible with the interests of a free people. * * * The modern practice of Europe with respect to the employment of a standing army has created such a mass of opinion in their favor that even philosophers and advocates for labor have frequently confessed their use and interest in certain cases. Whoever seriously and candidly estimates the power of discipline and the tendency of military habits will be constrained to confess that whatever may be the efficiency of a standing army in war, it cannot in peace be considered as friendly to the rights of human nature. * * * A small corps of well disciplined and well informed artillerists and engineers and a legion for the protection of the frontiers and magazines and arsenals are all the military establishment which may be required for the present use of the United States. The privates of the corps to be enlisted for a certain period, and after the expiration of which to return to the mass of the citizens. An energetic and national militia is to be regarded as the capital security of a free republic, and not a standing army, forming a distinct class in the community. It is the introduction and diffusion of evil and corruption of manners into the mass of the people that renders a standing army necessary. It is when public spirit is despised and avarice and indolence and effeminacy of manner predominate and prevent the establishment of institutions which would elevate the mind of the youth in the paths of virtue and honor that the standing army is formed and riveted forever."

WHY ANY INCREASE?

Are the people of the United States prepared to turn their back on these words of caution from the past? What reasons are assigned for the increase of our standing army to 100,000, according to the imperialistic programme? They say that we have grown to be a great populous nation, and, as such, should have a respectable army like the other powers of earth. If empire and conquest are our programme for the future, perhaps, yes. If the protection of our institutions and the development of our industries and commerce is our aim, then I say, no. There may be good reasons for an increase in the naval establishment, for the states have no naval militia, but there is none for the material increase of our standing army. But instead of arguing this proposition on theoretical and political grounds, let us look at it from the taxpayers standpoint. Let us count the cost of our present military establishment. Let me cite you to the last report of the secretary of war. He says, on page 60:

"The summary of expenditures for the fiscal year 1899, appropriations and allotments for 1900, and estimates for 1901, is as follows:

GENERAL OBJECT.	Expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899.	Appropriat'ns for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900.	Estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901.
Civil establishment......	$ 1,080,080.13	$ 1,067,700.00	$ 2,108,008.00
Military Establishment (support of the army and military academy)......	*234,880,354.13	87,015,290.08	128,170,383.54
Public works (including fortifications and river and harbor improvements)......	27,855,006.70	30,400,576.08	50,088,271.49
Miscellaneous......	4,928,010.83	5,106,700.00	4,570,030.00
Grand total......	$269,457,100.79	$124,070,371.71	$185,903,651.03

*Including expenditures from national defense.
Including allotments from national defense.

"The appropriations for the year ending June 30, 1900, were made on a basis of a military force which has been greatly exceeded by the exercise of the authority conferred under the act of March 2, 1899, and the raising, equipping and transporting to the Philippines of additional troops and supplies. It will therefore be necessary to ask congress for a deficiency appropriation of about $51,000,000, bringing the total amount of the appropriation for the current year up to about the amount of the estimates which have been submitted for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901."

The appropriations for the year ending June 30, 1899, embrace the cost of the Spanish war and cannot be considered. But the last two years show the requirements for the imperialistic peace establishments. From the totals given should be deducted $35,000,000 per annum on account of river and harbor improvements.

This leaves the annual expense of the present army establishment in round numbers $150,000,000. Add to this the annual cost of the naval establishment, which is in round numbers $75,000,000, and we have a total expenditure, for army and navy and for the instrumentalities of war, of $225,000,000, and this in times of peace! These figures do not include expenses that may be incurred in the Chinese difficulty. These are the appropriations for imperialism on a peace footing. This sum of $225,000,000 is so immense that the ordinary human mind can hardly grasp it. Let us express it in the leading products of the Northwest. According to the last report of the secretary of agriculture, the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin,

Nebraska—
Wheat	20,000,000	10,000,000
Corn	224,000,000	51,000,000

The total value of the crops named of all these states for last year was only $221,000,000, less than we are paying annually for our army and naval establishments under the imperial regime.

The entire amount expended for education in the United States for the year 1898, which is the last year for which I have authentic figures was $189,000,000. Our average consumption of wheat is less than five bushels per capita. Assuming our population to be 75,000,000, our consumption of wheat would be 375,000,000 bushels. At the average farm price, which does not exceed 60 cents, the cost of the nation's bread is $225,000,000, the same sum that we pay for our army and navy. When the people find that they are paying more for the instrumentalities of war than they are for education and as much as for bread, will they not conclude that it is time to weigh carefully the merits of imperialism, before taking the final step and fastening it upon our country?

The same interests that prompted the formation of trusts in industry, that advocate the establishment of a colonial system and the maintenance of a large military establishment, have induced the Republican party to surrender to them the country's finances. Garfield said that he who controlled a country's volume of money controlled its trade and industry. By the legislation of the last congress, which, finally turned over the governmental function of issuing paper money to the national banks, those favored institutions have obtained complete control of our finances and our business. It is in their power to suffer good times or to produce a panic. They can pursue either course as suits their caprice or interest. No other country on earth has committed such power to private hands. We believe that the issuance of money is a governmental function and should not be delegated to private corporations. We believe that the coinage of both silver and gold as standard money and as a basis for credit would insure greater stability in prices and more equal justice between borrower and lender and all interests; but the people by their representatives have adopted the gold standard and the complexion of the senate is such that however this election may turn, there is that this can be disturbed during the next administration. Hence it is of no profit to discuss that question at this time. I repeat, as I said two years ago, the gold standard is on trial. If by reason of an increase in the output of gold, or for other cause, that metal alone shall prove sufficient in quantity adequately to perform the functions of standard money, and as the basis of credit, then we are all satisfied. If it fails in that regard, our people will not be the only nation to discover it, and the question of standard will then be adjusted in due season, as other economic questions have been adjusted from time to time in the past. It is, after all, only an economic question, and as such, whether settled rightly or wrongly, cannot materially affect our institutions. Economic questions in the nature of things are only relatively right or wrong. They are not like the questions that go to the very core of our institutions and to the form of our government. This is illustrated by the tariff question. During the history of our country we have had free trade, and we have had extreme protection. Now, one or the other of those policies, in the nature of things, must be right or wrong. They cannot both be right in the same country under substantially the same conditions and within a short period of time; but the country has continued to increase in wealth and the people have prospered under each regime so that the utmost that can be said of an economic question is that it is only, as I have said, relatively right or relatively wrong. A mistake of that character can be righted. If we convert our republican institutions into an imperial form of government, the history of the world holds up no promise but that of national destruction.

I do not contend that the election of Mr. McKinley this fall would result in the establishment of an empire during his administration. But I do believe, and I do insist that the victory of Hannaism which his election would imply and lead to, would irrevocably fasten upon the country policies which would eventually, notwithstanding that our institutions for a long time continued republican in form, lead to empire as certainly as the succession of day and night.

These are the facts; this is the situation. Is it difficult, then, to determine what the issues are?

STATE ISSUES.

Important as these questions are, there are other questions involved in this campaign peculiar to our people as Minnesotans, that deserve our attention and the careful consideration of the people quite as do the national questions.

First and foremost among these is the question of taxation. What I assumed the discharge of the duties of my office, I found, as I had contended the facts to be in the preceding campaign, that the bulk of the taxes collected by the state and by the municipalities under it were levied and collectetd from the people's homes, rather than upon income bearing wealth and the specitl advantages and franchises enjoyed by the few. In my message to the legislature I said upon this subject:

"The truth of the matter is that our state is today exacting taxes on the little stock, tools, implements—the means of subsistence of numbers of our citizens who are struggling to support themselves and their families, while thousands who possess great wealth escape. Besides the inherent injustice of this, the state can ill afford to have those already battling for an independent existence loaded with additional burden, which will sooner or later transfer many of them into the dependent classes. That this condition of affairs exists, the most cursory investigation of the subject will show. It is no more just or candid to charge this to the depravity of the wealthier members of the community than it is to cry demagogy whenever the subject is brought up. It is in my judgment a condition resulting from the new forms that wealth has assumed under the remarkable progress and the economic changes which have taken place in this century. It is not a subject for declamation or invective, but for patriotic, speedy solution, now and here, and as rapidly as the forms of our institutions permit."

To remedy in part this condition of affairs I made three specific recommendations to the legislature. One was the imposition of a license fee upon foreign corporations doing business in this state, the same as is imposed upon the formation of corporations under our statute. Second, that the legislature enact legislation providing corporations doing business in this state, the same as the law authorizes the taxation of domestic corporations. Third, that the gross earnings tax upon the railroad property in this state be increased to a figure somewhat commensurate with the rate of taxation imposed upon other property in the state.

LEGISLATURE ACTED UPON ONE.

Of these recommendations the legislature saw fit to act upon one only, and that the least important. By the passage of the law known as the Somerville bill, a license fee was imposed upon foreign corporations for the privilege of doing business in this state. The law is rather crude in its provisions, and its enforcement having been committed to the office of secretary of state, the receipts under it have not been as large as would have been the case had it been more carefully drawn and more diligently enforced. Notwithstanding, it has brought upwards of $50,000 into the state treasury. By the omission to adopt my second recommendation, namely, the passage of a law to provide for the annual taxation of the business of foreign corporations in this state, the legislature prevented the people of the state from imposing any taxes upon the immense amount of foreign capital employed in profitable trade and business in this state, except such little office furniture and fixtures, or property of that character, as may be found at their places of business. As a citizen of the state, I feel humiliated to think that the legislature, elected by the people, sworn to support the constitution of our state, which imposes equal burdens upon all, and permits special privileges to none, should refuse to pass a law enabling us to tax the Standard Oil trust, which transacts millions of dollars' worth of business in the state annually, or the Federal Steel company, which owns nearly all the valuable mining properties in the northern part of the state, to say nothing about the lucrative business of the various loaning companies, machine companies, and other corporations that enjoy the advantage of our trade, protection of our laws, and the fruits of our industry. But such is the fact, and so it will continue until the people pass judgment upon such action in a manner that cannot be misunderstood.

GROSS EARNINGS TAX.

The inadequacy of the present gross earnings tax I called to the attention of the legislature. Our state auditor, Mr. Dunn, did the same in his annual report, but with a perversity that is inexplicable on principles that ordinarily guide human conduct, the senate absolutely refused to afford the taxpayers any relief from this unjust discrimination in favor of railroad property.

In Iowa railroad property is taxed 3 7-10 per cent on gross earnings; in New York 7 4-10 per cent; in Illinois 5 4-10 per cent; in Massachusetts 8 5-10 per cent; in Missouri 3 8-10 per cent; in Kansas 12 per cent; in Connecticut 5 per cent; and in Minnesota only 2.8 per cent. Were railroads in Minnesota taxed as in Iowa and Wisconsin they would pay one-fourth more taxes than they do now. Were they taxed as high as in Illinois they would pay double their present tax. Were they taxed as high in proportion to earnings as in New York, our receipts from that source would be increased over 150 per cent. Were they taxed in Minnesota as in Massachusetts the revenue from the railways in this state would increase over 200 per cent. The gross earnings of the railways in the state of Massachusetts for the year under discussion were $41,000,000, and were taxed by the state $3,527,820. In Minnesota they were taxed only $1,127,950. In Minnesota and Missouri, both agricultural states, the earnings were about the same, but the Missouri roads paid $336,000 more into the state treasury of that state. And yet, with all these facts before the Republican legislature of two years ago, with an overwhelming majority, with absolute power to pass or defeat any bill, the senate persistently fought and deliberately killed a bill to raise the gross earnings tax on the railroad property in this state to 4 per cent. By this action the taxpayers of this state and the state have been deprived of nearly $2,000,000, even though the next legislature, after the election of a new senate should act as promptly upon the question as the forms of law permit. Ordinary arguments of this question I fear are of no avail with the senators now elected. The only argument that can convince them is the citizens' argument at the polls. But these facts do not measure the convictions of duty of the present Republican state senate to the people of the state and to the state. I had specially called attention to the fact that one of the railroads in this state, operating under an old territorial charter, was not paying even the 3 per cent rate on gross earnings. It under provisions of its charter. The senate, with a quickened sense of public duty, which it had not experienced during the discussion of the general gross earnings bill, passed a bill through the senate imposing a 3 per cent tax on that company, but added a clause repealing the existing law for the taxation of railroad lands. The latter feature of the bill was discovered in the house, and its consequent speedy burial cut short its mission of senatorial usefulness. Had the legislature adopted the legislation which I recommended, the increased revenue to the state from those sources, together with careful and frugal administration, would have enabled us to start on the new century without being compelled to ask the taxpayers of the state for one cent for defraying the ordinary expenses of the state government or maintaining our state institutions; and I here and now pledge the people of the state of Minnesota that if they elect a house of representatives that will carry out these reforms and induce the present Republican senate to listen to the arguments of reason, justice, patriotism and duty, that, after the laws thus enacted in accordance with my recommendations have gone into effect, the taxpayers of this state will never again, under ordinary circumstances, be called upon to pay one cent of taxes for the support of the state government, or for the maintenance of state institutions.

CARE OF PUBLIC LANDS.

Another subject only second to that of taxation in importance is the care and administration of our public lands. Shortly after our admission to the Union, the general government, with a munificence that should never be forgotten, granted to the state of Minnesota all the swamp and over-flowed lands within our boundaries. This grant will probably aggregate not far from 5,500,000 acres when the survey and the segregation of the lands are completed. Had this bountiful donation been husbanded even with reasonable care it would have proven ample in time, not only to drain the large bodies of wet and untillable land in the northern part of our state, but it would have contributed much to the maintenance of our state institutions and our public schools. But former legislatures and executives, with a prodigality little less than scandalous, have succeeded in frittering away more than 3,700,000 acres of that magnificent donation by grants to railway companies for other schemes.

Upon entering into office I found litigation in progresss between the state and the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad Company to test the validity of the grant to that company embracing some 600,000 acres of land. The railroad had not been built upon the line, or between the points designated by the legislature, nor had it been completed within the time fixed by the granting act for its completion. In fact, it was clear, and so conceded on all hands, that had the state authorities taken advantage of this failure of the company to earn the grant according to its terms in time, the state would not have lost the land; but instead of that it appeared upon the trial in the circuit court of the United States, as was the fact, that, notwithstanding the failure on the part of the company to build on the line of route designated or within the time stated, the governor and the state authorities, in whom the power was vested by the granting act to pass on the performance of these conditions, waived all these conditions and accepted the road as a compliance with the law and the terms of the granting act. Under this state of facts the circuit court decided, and I think rightly, under the rule that prevails in the federal court, that the state had waived its right to insist upon a compliance with the terms of the contract, and the grant was held valid. This company, which has the right to select its grant in the counties of St. Louis, Cook and Lake, now insists that the state swamp lands in those counties shall be held open by the state indefinitely to enable the company to select its quota at its pleasure and conveyance. A most careful consideration of the questions involved, by the state auditor and myself, has led us to believe that under the law we have the power this grant now, and we propose to do so as speedily as the work involved enables us to do it with accuracy and care. In this matter and in all other matters in which the discharge of my duties has required the co-operation of the state auditor it is only fair to that officer that I should say at this time that he has co-operated with me with an efficiency and in a spirit of zeal for the public good that deserves this acknowledgment at my hands.

About one year ago application was made to me to execute a patent conveying some swamp lands in Pipestone county to the Southern Minnesota company. On investigating the claim of title to swamp lands by that company, I found that it never had a swamp land grant; that the grant under which it claimed was on account of a branch of a main line which was never constructed; that notwithstanding this fact my predecessors in office had, from time to time, certified to that company without any excuse for such action upwards of 36,000 acres of valuable land in the southern part of the state. Unfortunately this land was certified so long ago that the statute of limitation has run on most of the conveyances. Besides, I regret to say that the attorney general, after some recent reflection, has concluded not to concur in the view that I have expressed, as to the sham character of this claim. But one thing is certain, that company shall not have another acre of the state's lands so long as I am in office unless awarded by the courts, and I hope to be able to have matters settled so that none can be claimed after I am out.

In the case of the swamp land grant to the Little Falls & Dakota Railroad company, now owned by the Northern Pacific, former governors conveyed to that company over 13,000 acres of land in excess of what it had earned, and which it was not entitled to.

Suit has been instituted for the recovery of this land to the state. I feel confident of a successful outcome. With this suit settled, and within the next two years, I believe it possible to adjust and finally dispose of every state land grant claim in the state. Several have already been finally adjusted and settled. I have devoted much time and study to the question, as I believe it absolutely essential to the interests of the state that these matters should be finally and speedily adjusted, so that the state can husband and care for what little is left of its once magnificent donation.

ADMINISTRATION OF GRAIN SERVICE.

To other important branches of state administration I can only give a passing notice. Since Jan. 1 a majority of the members of the railroad and warehouse commission have been in full sympathy with my aims in the administration of the important affairs committed to the management of that board. I believe that I am justified in saying that the grain service, which was reorganized at the opening of the crop year of 1899-1900 by the appointment of Hon. E. S. Reishus as chief inspector, has been managed in a way to do full justice to all interests, protecting the farmer in his just rights by fair grades and just weights, on the one hand, and establishing the fixity and reputation of the Minnesota grade on the other. That individual cases of error have not occurred I do not claim. Such a state of facts cannot be looked for in a business so extensive as the handling of the crop contributary to the terminal markets of this state. But I am gratified to be able to say to you and to the people of the state that since the reorganization of the service there has not been a single instance of complaint, either from the East or from European markets, either as to shortage in weight or grade, of a single bushel of wheat that had passed through the Minnesota service. Prior to that time, and under the administration of Mr. Reishus' predecessor, complaints from Buffalo and from England, both in regard to grades and shortage in weight, were persistent and common. Minnesota's leading grade, No. 1 northern, Duluth, has stood on an average as compared with the four leading competitive grades in the Liverpool market, two cents higher than those grades. During the crop year closed, No. 1 northern, Minnesota inspection, has ranked one to five cents per hundred pounds higher in the Liverpool market than No. 1 northern, Chicago inspection, the average for the year being three cents in favor of Minnesota inspection. Throughout the crop year, No. 1 northern Duluth and No. 1 hard Duluth have uniformly been quoted higher than the corresponding grades, No. 1 northern Manitoba, and No. 1 hard Manitoba. This ratifying result has been effected by enforcing the same standard of excellency upon grain inspected out of the terminal elevators as is applied to the farmers' wheat when it reaches the market. As to the manner in which the farmer's interest has been protected, he is the best judge, and I shall offer no comment. I will only add that these reforms in the grain service have been accomplished without any increase of expenditure. On the contrary, the expense of the service during the crop year just closed under Mr. Reishus' administration, was $2,201.78 less than the cost of the service during the preceding year of Mr. Clausen's administration.

REGULATING RAILROAD RATES.

In the matter of the regulation of railroad rates, the commission since its reorganization has proceeded as expeditiously as possible. The first and most important question demanding the attention of the board was the grain rates in the southwestern part of the state. The rates on grain from that section of the state to Minneapolis and Duluth had always been maintained at a figure that seemed to me exorbitant and such was the judgment of the commission. Early in the year a hearing was ordered for the investigation of these rates. After full inquiry and repeated conferences with the several carriers in that part of the state, the commission promulgated a schedule which reduced the rates to 172 railway stations of the six roads which run through the 18 counties of the Second congressional district, and in four adjoining counties. The reduction per hundred pounds runs from 4½ cents down on flax seed, 3 cents down on wheat, and 2 cents down on coarse grain. The rate on wheat is reduced 1 cent at forty stations, 2 cents at 20 stations, 3 cents at 28 stations, and in fractions between and under these figures at other stations. On flax seed the reduction is 1 cent per hundred at 26 stations, 2 cents at 17 stations, 3 cents at 17 stations, 4 cents at 35 stations, and from ½ to 4½ cents at the other 70 stations. This reduction put in force by the commission is only from local points to the Minnesota terminal markets at Minneapolis and Duluth, but the railroads have now adjusted their Chicago rates to the new Minneapolis and Duluth rates, so that the rate reduction applies to both the Lake Superior and the Lake Michigan markets. A careful computation of the savings to the farmers of that part of the state by this change in the rate, indicates the amount to be in excess of $400,000 per annum, which is a sum much in excess of the state taxes collected from those counties. It would pay the $324,000 of county revenue taxes that it takes to run the county governments of the counties affected; besides, it would pay the charge of $58,000 for the care of the poor, and still leave a surplus of $18,000 for the road and bridge fund. I mention these details simply to indicate how important and how far-reaching the question of transportation rates is to a community.

ANOTHER QUESTION PENDING.

Another question relating to merchandise rates is now pending before the commission. What the outcome will be of the hearing now in progress no one can tell at this time; but of one thing I am assured, and that is, that the present commissioners will take no action that will be unjust or unfair to the legitimate claims of the interests involved. Nor will they consent to any schedule of rates that does not afford every community substantially the same rate and the same fair field as is afforded to any other community in the state engaged in the same line of business.

CONDITION OF FINANCES.

The finances of the state were never in better condition than at the present time, nor did its credit ever stand as high as it does to-day. I confess that I take some pleasure in referring to this fact, in view of the claim made by the opposition two and four years ago that my election as governor of this state would ruin its credit and destroy the business of the people. Thank God the wealth, industry and prosperity of this state, and I might say of this whole glorious country of ours, is better anchored than to be contingent on the political defeat or elevation of any individual. Providence has endowed me with enough good sense to know that it is not because of my election that the finances of the state and its credit are in their present condition. But that same sense also teaches me, and I believe that it will convince the good people of this state, that just, fair, economic and businesslike management of public affairs will never injure the credit of a commonwealth.

The last legislature provided for the issuance of short time certificates of indebtedness in anticipation of the tax levy for the erection of our new capitol. In order to secure these certificates for the school fund, I insisted on the rate of interest being fixed at 3 per cent, hoping thereby to escape foreign competition. But the credit of our state was such that, notwithstanding the short time of this paper, notwithstanding its low rate of interest, New York brokers bid a premium of $135 on the issue, and this at a time when the consols of imperialistic England, drawing the same rate of interest and heretofore recognized as the best security in the world, were selling at a discount in excess of 2 per cent.

THE LARGE SURPLUS.

The only difficulty with our finances at the present time is the large surplus in the treasury. At the end of the fiscal year, Aug. 1, the state treasurer had in his vault and on deposit in the various banks $2,169,337.52. This sum is largely in excess of the amount actually needed for the requirements of the state. And I cannot help but express my regret that the last legislature did not cut down the tax levy, as I advised in my message, notwithstanding the fact that they refused the legislation for the increase of the state's revenue as I recommended. The next legislature, even though it remains obdurate on the question of providing more revenue for the state from the sources that I have indicated, will be able to reduce the tax levy by one-third if the appropriations are kept down to the real wants and necessities of the state, economically administered.

During my administration not a cent of the state's fund has been lost or misappropriated, so far as I am advised, or have been able to ascertain. I mention this fact, not for the purpose of claiming any personal credit. For the excellent management of our state funds Mr. Koerner, the retiring treasurer, is, in a large measure entitled to the credit, and I accord it to him cheerfully. This state has never had a more prudent, painstaking or conscientious servant. I am equally certain that if the gentleman whom you have this day nominated to succeed him is elected, the same may be truly said of him two years hence, as I say it of the outgoing treasurer today.

FROM INSURANCE DEPARTMENTS.

A goodly portion of the surplus in the treasury has been contributed by the efficient work of the commissioner of insurance. Instead of the $174,000 in taxes collected by the insurance department in 1898, $208,000 was collected last year. These figures were in a large measure due to examinations made by the department of companies writing inland marine insurance and transacting business with non-resident brokers and operating through pools. As a result of these examinations $3,300 has been collected in back taxes on premiums not reported in former years—in one instance as far back as 1891. In addition to this that department has rendered the people of the state most excellent service in weeding out the numerous "fake" and speculative insurance companies that were preying upon the credulity of the people and robbing them right and left under various schemes of hail, fire and life insurance.

EFFICIENT DAIRY DEPARTMENT.

The dairy department has rendered most efficient service in executing the laws now on the statute books against the adulteration of food articles and in prosecuting the illicit sale of oleomargarine, imitation butter and manufactured lard, by the inforcement of the laws in that behalf. Of the administration of the dairy and food department I feel justified in saying that never before in the history of the state were the dairy and farming interests so efficiently defended and aided as in the last two years.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

The general progress of the state has been nowhere more marked than in the matter of education. During the year just closed, our permanent school fund grew nearly $1,000,000 substantially all of which has been carefully invested in permanent securities of the highest character. The permanent fund of the university has also been increased nearly $100,000, bringing it up almost to the million dollar mark. These matters, while gratifying to us politically, are more significant to us as citizens, and to our children after us. With a careful administration of our wealth of swamp land, on the lines that I have indicated, and by proper legislation to secure and save the mineral rights, I hope to live to see the day when the permanent school fund of this state will reach the magnificent sum of $30,000,000.

Promising as is the financial situation of our school system, the progress on the educational side has been even greater. Our university continues to advance both as to the number of its students and in the quality and character of its work. Its cultural influence and power are being felt more and more among the people of the state in every relation of life. Our normal schools are doing good work. Their standard of excellence is advancing. The same is true of our high schools. But in no department under the state's care has greater progress been made than in our common schools and for no interest committed in part to my charge have I felt greater solicitude or keener interest. The common school divides with the home the duty of building American character. As are our common schools in this, so will our homes and institutions be in the next generation. Pursuant to the recommendation of our efficient state superintendent, the last legislature amended our school law so as to require all teachers' certificates, except temporary permits to teach under special circumstances, to be issued by the state superintendent upon examinations held under his direction. I have no hesitancy in characterizing this as a most important reform, certain to advance the cause of education more than any step affecting our schools taken by the legislature within my memory. I believe that it will be the means of permanently establishing teaching in our common schools as a profession. It has already resulted in higher efficiency, in better wages for teachers, and in better work in the schools. As your teachers are, so are your schools.

Minnesota has a better school system, on the whole, than any of our sister states. This while primarily due to the public spirit of our people, has been made possible by the efficiency, zeal and splendid professional spirit of our teachers. To guard their interests and the interests of our schools, I have spared no effort and neglected no opportunity.

I have thus briefly referred to some of the work which has more especially demanded and received my attention during my term of office. To its prosecution I have devoted every energy and every power that I possess. I have been most ably assisted by those in office under my direction, and I express to them my gratitude for their earnest cooperation. For the mistakes of the administration I alone am responsible, but not culpably. Errors of judgment no man can guard against, and I know of no duty that I have knowingly neglected to perform.

With no aim but the honor of our great state and the welfare of our people, with no guide but the law and my conscience, I have administered the affairs of the office which I hold without fear and without favor. This is all that I can promise for the future.

Again I thank you for the honor conferred.

SENATOR HILL'S POSITION.

He Emphatically Endorses the Democratic Ticket and Advocates the Election of Wm. J. Bryan.

HERKIMER, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Ex-Senator Hill's appearance here this evening occasioned something of a sensation in political circles. He came ostensibly to visit his old friend, ex-Judge Earl, of that place. He was greeted by Judge Earl at the Central depot, and went with him to the Palmer house, where they had dinner together. In the evening the Fort band serenaded Mr. Hill, and a large crowd of citizens assembled. He was introduced by Judge Earl and made a speech, the chief feature of which was his reiterated declarations in support of Bryan. There was some talk that Judge Earl was to be advanced as a compromise candidate for governor, but Judge Earl said emphatically that his name was not to be considered.

Mr. Hill declared that he came on a purely social visit.

Mr. Hill spoke as follows:

"It is needless to say that I am heartily in favor of the election of Bryan and Stevenson. They are candidates of the Democratic party, duly and regularly nominated at a national convention of which I was a member, and which treated me, from beginning to end, with marked and unusual courtesy, and I am honorably bound to actively support a ticket of my party nominated under such circumstances.

"Our candidates represent the interests of the average man—the plain people of the country—the farmer, the mechanic, the laborer. The issues this year are very plain and cannot be misunderstood.

"One party favors large standing armies, immense public expenditures, a government of grandeur and magnificence, high protective tariffs, a British colonial policy, great combinations of corporate wealth and a centralized government.

"The other party favors a continuance of the plain and simple government of our fathers, public expenditures limited to the actual necessities of the government, tariff taxation for public purposes only, an army for defense and not for conquest, competition in business free from monopolistic combinations.

"An appeal is made by our opponents to our love of country. We heard the same specious appeal in 1896, and we always hear it when our opponents seek Democratic votes to aid their cause.

"It is a partisan and not a sincere and patriotic appeal. It is based upon false pretenses. The country is not in danger, except from those who are now administering its government. We will protect the flag wherever it goes, but we will see that the flag goes only where it belongs. It shall not be hauled down in disgrace, neither shall it be raised anywhere in dishonor.

"The people are opposed to this government acquiring territory which is not to be governed by the constitution. It is no more constitutionally right to set up a colonial system than it is to create a king. The foreign policy of the present administration has been weak and shifty and unpatriotic, and the best thought of the country—the best students of history—the most intelligent of Americans are against it.

"No right-minded man can defend a president who said in his annual message that it was 'our plain duty' to give free trade to Porto Rico with the United States and then within a few months thereafter signed a measure which imposed a tariff duty of 15 per cent.

"Our party has always been the true and genuine friend of labor, and aided in every opportunity the efforts of workingmen to improve their condition. For the first time in our national history a political party has incorporated in its national platform the creation of a department of labor, with a secretary thereof allowed a seat in the cabinet with the president of the republic. The Democratic party proposes this innovation in the interest of labor, and why should it not be done?

"If wise counsel shall prevail at the Saratoga convention next week and we proceed on right lines to plan for victory, instead of inviting defeat, and shall so shape our course and policies as to deserve the support of the great independent and conservative forces of this state—always an important factor in our elections—and the thousands of Republicans dissatisfied with the arbitrary machine rule of their party—we cannot only rescue the Empire state from further Republican control, but can give our electoral vote for our gallant national standard bearer, William J. Bryan.

"While disagreeing with Mr. Bryan in some matters, I need not reiterate that I earnestly desire his election.

"Our opponents are intrenched in patronage and power, and the struggle to oust them must necessarily be terrific.

"The tide, however, is with us. The skies are becoming brighter every day. Let us then all work enthusiastically for the cause and victory is within our reach."

Willing to Show 'Em.

An honest young man, who had escaped a great peril by an act of heroism, was much complimented for his bravery.

One lady said: "I wish I could have seen your feat."

Whereupon he blushed and stammered, and finally pointing to his pedal extremities, said: "Well, here they be, mum."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Don't ever try to make yourself beleive that party loyalty requires you to vote for a dishonest man. If you positively know a candidate to be dishonest do not shut your eyes and put a cross opposite his name, but put it opposite the other man's name. However always be sure your party candidate is dishonest before taking this course, and don't always take the word of somebody else for it either. Some people are so hide bound in partisianship that they will vote for a criminal if he bears the party label, but we do not go that far. A dishonest scalawag sometimes succeeds in getting on the party ticket, but fealty to party does not require one to vote for him.—Elk River Star-News.

Salt and Hogs.

Many people believe salt is injurios to hogs, but this is not true. If hogs are deprived of salt for a long time and then given access to it in large quantities they will eat it to their hurt; but this proves how badly they need salt and how ravenous they get for it. The chlorine in salt is an important part of the gastric juice that preforms such an important function in the work of digestion, and it is also found in the blood and muscles. The sodium in salt is a constituent of the bile, and is found in the blood as phospate of sodium. Salt is not essential to plant life, but is to animal life. Salt is a tonic, and also a powerful vermifuge, and stock deprived of it is almost sure to be troubled with intestinal worms of various kinds. In the hog pasture it is well to spade in a peck of salt, when the hogs will get it mixed with soil, which is often very beneficial. But if hogs have been deprived of salt give it to them in limited quantities at first.

From Farm, Stock and Home.

Let it be said again: Millions of next year's weeds can be killed now.

When a toad is killed in the garden life is given to a big lot of injurious insects.

There will not be over-much straw this season; take care of and utilize what there is.

Hatred is self-punishment; the less hate in the soul the more happiness in the heart.

This is the season when the flower garden pays for the little time and cost it too to grow it.

It looks as if farmers had the weed-fight of their lives on hand in exterminating squirrel-tail grass.

Plow early, encourage the weeds to grow, then harrow before they go to seed, unless frost kills them all first.

Do the seed selecting now. The best ears of corn, seed from the best mellons seed from the best of everything should be saved.

Avoid the risk of losing what crops you have by prairie fires by making an adequate fire-break around stacks and buildings.

When the barn owl is shot lots of mice, moles and other nocturnal rodents get the permission of the shooter to live and destroy.

To Clean Windows.

A nice way to clean windows, or the glass in bookcase doors, or cupboards, says a writer in an exchange, is to take a small bunch of cotton batting, dampen it with kerosene and wipe the glass all over carefully. After allowing it to stay on a short time, take a soft clean cloth and polish the glass. You will be surprised at its brilliancy and clearness. There are no streaks to rub off, over and over again, and it can be done in a very little while, without any muss whatever. The smell evaporates almost immediately. One can rub the glass all over well, then go about other work, leaving it for several hours and then it will polish just the same.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

Keep Off Flies.

In the midst of the fly season owners of live stock will be interested in the methods successfully pursued by Dr. A. T. Peters, veterinarian at the Nebraska Experiment Station for combating this pest. He took an ordinary oil barrel and put into it a wooded spigot, using the barrel as a storage tank. Two and a half gallons of Zenoleum, with five gallons of cotton seed oil were then placed in the barrel and enough water added to fill it. As required the mixture thus formed was drawn from the barrel and sprayed upon cattle and horses, or applied with a sponge or cloth as the occassion demanded. The control of the flies was not only quite perfect, but it had one marked advantage not possessed by most other mixtures for the purpose, in that the solution was not greasy and sticky but left the coat of the animal in fine condition. The mixture has the further advantage of being a very economical one, a barrel of it being compounded at very small cost.

Democratic Resolutions.

We, the Democrats of Red Lake county in convention assembled, assert our steadfast belief in the National Democratic platform as adopted at Kansas City on the 4th of July 1900.

We are opposed to the imperialism and militarism of the present administration, and condem the republican party for forcing upon the people of this liberty-loving country a standing army, thus creating a debt and tax that shall burden our prosperity for generations.

We farther condemn the republican administration for forcing upon the people of Cuba and Porto Rico an administration of affairs which has taught the people of these lands that the first principal of republican office holders is rapine and robbery, and that a public office under the McKinley administration is not a public trust, but a private pilfering snap.

We believe in contrary to the fundimental principals of our constitution that a government should be forced upon the Cubans, Porto Ricans, or Filippios without their consent, and that a people who for a hundred years have been struggling for independence should be granted this sacred right.

We demand the withdrawal of our troops from China, to the end that no entangeling alliance be forced upon us with the despotic powers of Europe.

We are opposed to the accumulation of capital in the form of trusts and condemn the present administration for fostering and protecting all combinations, and permitting wealth to discourage the crush the ambitions of the young business men of limited means.

We have the utmost confidence in the ability of our standard bearer and look upon our candidate as the exemplification of honesty, ability and reform and heartily commend to all independent voters the Hon. William J. Bryan.

We commend the wise and honest administration of Governor John Lind, and especially endorse his efforts to make corporations pay their just share of taxes.

We abhor centralization of power whether in national, state or county affairs, and call upon all independent voters to support the Democratic party of Red Lake county in its endeavor to crush ring rule as exemplified in the Middle of the Road convention recently held in this city.

We heartily recommend James Meehan Jr. as a candidate for this the 61st District.

Respectfully submitted
John Morgan, Chairman.

The Farm the Best Place.

Now listen my boy: the time is coming and is pretty nearly here now when the man who owns a piece of land and knows how to work it in an intelligent manner is going to have the whiprow over all the peddlers, parsons, dectors, and lawyers, clerks and genteel loafers in the land. Land ownership is the concrete foundation of European aristocracy and all that is best in foreign cultivation. Science is smiling most kindly on agriculture. Unliminated possibilities await the man who has best studied natures text book. The best intellectual developement is uniting with the hand hardened and browned by farm work. All that is best in man may now be evolved under rural conditions. Inventors have greatly modified the drudgery of farm toil, without any degress impairing agriculture independence. Suppose my boy, you now decide to be a first-class modern farmer—a man well posted on the technical as well as the practical side of your business—a raisor of the best stock an up-to-date man in profession—which you easily can do if you apply yourself to the doing of it with the same persistency and diligence which you would have to devote to any outside profession if you would make a success of it. It is absolutely true that agricultural so undertaken offers to-day far more certain reward in both a financial and man developing way than any other vocation open to the young man.—Ex.

He uses Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and says he never found anything that would give him such relief. It is for sale by The Imperial Drug Store.

-o-

St. Paul, Sept. 8.—The above is the ticket selected by the Democratic state convention held here yesterday. When Chairman Rosing of the state central committee called the convention to order every seat on the delegate floor of the Auditorium was filled. Former Congressman W. H. Harries was chosen temporary chairman and made a brief speech on taking the chair.

Committees on resolutions and conference with the Populists, who were in convention in Minneapolis, were appointed. The temporary organization was made permanent and the roll of delegates in the hands of the secretary was made the roll of the convention, doing away with a committee on credentials.

A recess was then taken until 3 o'clock.

Upon reassembling there was no business immediately at hand, neither of the committees being ready to report. Rev. S. W. Sample was called upon to fill in the time and made a short speech.

Gov. Lind Nominated.

Chairman Harries suggested that whatever might be the result of the deliberations of the conference committee, there could be no question about the governorship, and the convention might as well proceed to the selection of a candidate for that office. Senator Johnson of Nicollet was recognized and nominated Gov. Lind. P. B. Winston of Minneapolis, Dan Aberle of St. Paul and G. P. Jones of Rock county made speeches seconding the nomination. The nomination was accomplished by acclamation. The committees in the meantime had failed to put in an appearance, and the time was taken up by speechmaking.

The Platform.

Chairman Stacy reported from the committee on resolutions and the platform was unanimously adopted. The following is a brief outline of the platform:

The platform reaffirms the national platform; rejoices in the nomination and prospective victory of Bryan; condemns the national administration for lack of sympathy with the Boers in the South African war; demands an increase in the gross earnings tax, and denounces as hypocritical the Republican plank on the same subject, pointing to the fact that the chairman of the Republican convention led the fight in the senate against the gross earnings bill at the last session; heartily indorses the administration of Gov. Lind; commends the work of the grain commission; commends the work of the state departments which have been under the control of the party, and complains of the interference of Republican officers with some of the attempted reforms; points out that Gov. Lind has caused large corporate property interests to be listed for taxation, and claims that large areas of the public domain have been secured to the school fund.

The Ticket Completed.

The committee on conference with the Populists then reported, the result of their deliberations being shown in the ticket given above. The Populists were given lieutenant governor, two railroad commissioners and four presidential electors. The report of the committee was adopted and the ticket was completed as above.

In the evening, following a large parade, a ratification meeting was held in the Auditorium. Dr. A. J. Stone, candidate for congress for the Fourth district, presided and Gov. Lind made an address accepting the nomination which had been tendered him by the convention. Gov. Lind went into the issues of the campaign in a general way and devoted considerable attention to the affairs of the state.

Gov. Lind Accepts.

Gov. Lind received a tremendous ovation when he arose to speak. He commenced by expressing appreciation of the honor conferred upon him and congratulated the convention upon the work accomplished. He said in part:

"If the people of the state shall see fit to approve of your choice, and I believe that a true regard for their own best interest will prompt them to do so, the state will have an administration that will be fair, just and efficient in every department."

The governor then went into the national issues and severely arraigned the Republican party for passing legislation in favor of the privileged classes and opposed to the best interests of the masses. Jefferson was claimed as the father of the present Democratic theory of government, which was later represented by Jackson and in more recent times practically by Lincoln.

He said: "Lincoln represented the principles of Jefferson and the aspirations and conscience of the common people, as we believe that our valiant leader, W. J. Bryan, does at the present time. Our political and economic situation at this moment verifies this historical resume. Let us look at the actual conditions that confront the American people and it is easy to determine what the real issues are in this campaign. Notwithstanding the fact that ours is the greatest, the most populous, the most intelligent, the most powerful and the wealthiest civilized country in the world, its entire industry has, with the aid and through the operation of class legislation, passed into the control of comparatively a handful of men."

Continuing to a discussion of the trust question Gov. Lind argued in effect that the Republican party was in the grasp of centralized wealth which "will rapidly reduce the mass of the American people to a condition of absolute serfdom. "The dishonest paltering with the trust evil by the Republican party in state and national platforms is conclusive proof of the truth of the charge that trusts are the legitimate product of Republican policies; that they are fostered by Republican laws, and that they are protected by the Republican administration in return for campaign subscriptions and political support."

Then Gov. Lind took up "imperialism," the "paramount issued," saying: "But these interests, these privileged classes, are not content with our own country to exploit. They want more worlds to conquer. They want to control populations that have less power of resistance than the white race—lands where their dominion may be complete, and so, taking advantage of the conditions growing out of the Spanish-American war, they are now endeavoring to establish imperialism by fastening upon our institutions a colonial system and a large standing army. Our people know intuitively that there is menace and danger in this new departure." He cited Spain to show the dangers of a colonial empire and especially the cost of the Philippines. The difference between the past expansion of the United States and the acquisition of the Philippines is stated thus:

"Nations can grow and expand, as ours has, to their political and economic advantage. But such national growth always has been and always will be the occupation and acquisition of territory not already occupied by a dense population, and by planting therein its own people and its own institutions. Such was our expansion over the territory acquired from Spain in the southern part of our country, and from France in the South and to the west of us. The same is true of Alaska. But the white race never has and never can permanently occupy or inhabit land within the tropics. We can never hope to make the Philippine islands integral parts of our Union, occupied by people of our race, with our political and social ideals, like we have in Florida, Louisiana and California. Our occupation of those islands will be military and the government colonial, thus converting our own institutions from a republic, resting upon manhood suffrage governed by laws of the people's own making, in other words, governed by the consent of the governed, to a military empire. Such changes in the institutions of nations in the past have always proven destructive of the liberties of the people, and in the end of their national existence."

Gov. Lind argued against the constitutionality of governing the Philippines, and insisted that the attempt would in practice be very costly in men and treasure. He asserted that the annual profit from trade with the islands would not meet the monthly charge of the necessary military establishment there. He then declaimed at length against an increase of the standing army to 100,000; attacked the banking act of the last congress, saying that it turned over to the national banks the governmental function of issuing paper money.

Continuing, the governor said:

The same interests that prompted the formation of trusts in industry, that advocate the establishment of a colonial system and the maintenance of a large military establishment have induced the Republican party to surrender to them the country's finances. Garfield said he who controlled a country's volume of money controlled its trade and industry. By the legislation of the last congress, which finally turned over the governmental function of issuing paper money to the national banks, those favored institutions have obtained control of our finances and our business. It is in their power to suffer good times or to produce a panic. They can pursue either course as suits their caprice or interest. No other country on earth has committed such power to private hands. We believe that the issuance of money is a governmental function and should not be delegated to private corporations. We believe that the coinage of both silver and gold as standard money and as a basis for credit would insure greater stability in prices and more equal justice between borrower and lender and all interests; but the people, by their representatives, have adopted the gold standard and the complexion of the senate is such that however this election may turn there is not the remotest possibility that this can be disturbed during the next administration. Hence it is of no profit to discuss that question at this time. I repeat, as I said two years ago, the gold standard is on trial. If by reason of an increase in the output of gold or for other cause that metal alone shall prove sufficient in quantity to adequately perform the functions of standard money, and as the basis of credit, then we are all satisfied. If it fails in that regard our people will not be the only nation to discover it and the question of standard will then be adjusted in due season as other economic questions have been adjusted from time to time in the past. It is, after all, only an economic question and as such, whether settled rightly or wrongly, cannot materially affect our institutions. Economic questions in the nature of things are only relatively right or wrong. They are not like the questions that go to the very core of our institutions and to the form of our government. This is illustrated by the tariff question. During the history of our country we have had free trade and we have had extreme protection. Now, one or the other of those policies, in the nature of things, must be right or wrong. They cannot both be right in the same country under substantially the same conditions and within a short period of time; but the country has continued to increase in wealth and the people have prospered under each regime, so that the utmost that can be said of an economic question is that it is only, as I have said, relatively right or relatively wrong. A mistake of that character can be righted. If we convert our republican institutions into an imperial form of government the history of the world holds up no promise but that of national destruction.

I do not contend that the election of Mr. McKinley this fall would result in the establishment of an empire during his administration. But I do believe, and I do insist, that the victory of Hannaism, which his election would imply and lead to, would irrevocably fasten upon the country policies which would eventually, notwithstanding that our institutions for a long time continued republican in form, lead to empire as certainly as the succession of day and night.

These are the facts: this is the situation. Is it difficult, then, to determine what the issues are?

Gov. Lind then left national issues and took up the discussion of state issues, foremost among which he classed taxation, saying that when he was elected governor "the bulk of the taxes collected by the state and by the municipalities under it were levied and collected from the industries of the masses and upon the people's homes, rather than upon income bearing wealth and the special advantages and franchises enjoyed by the few." To remedy this he had made three specific recommendations; license fee on foreign corporations and a higher gross earnings tax on railroads. The only result was the Somerville law, so-called, by which $50,000 had been collected.

The second state issue was the administration of public lands, of which he charged 3,700,000 acres had been frittered away by grants to railroads and for other schemes. In relating the history of the recent Duluth & Iron Range litigation he paid the following compliment to State Auditor Dunn: "In this matter and in all other matters in which the discharge of my duties has required the co-operation of the state auditor, it is only fair to that officer that I should say at this time that he has co-operated with me with an efficiency and in a spirit of zeal for the public good, that deserves this acknowledgement at my hands."

Gov. Lind referred to the work of the railroad and warehouse commission and its record of wheat inspection. He claimed that the service had been vastly improved under Chief Inspector Reishus, who "has managed in way to do full justice to all interests, protecting the farmer in his just rights by fair grades and just weights on the one hand and establishing the fixity and reputation of the Minnesota grades on the other."

He expressed pleasure in referring to the fact that the finances of the state wwre in good condition and its credit stood high.

HOW CROWDS CONGREGATE.

One Small Boy With a Hose Almost Blockaded a Street in New York City.

The first man to halt probably had more leisure than he knew what to do with. When he laughed two other men, to whom time was no object, stopped and laughed, too. Then other men and a few women joined the crowd, and in about a minute a fair sized crowd had assembled. The gathering swelled until Mail street was blocked, and hundreds of persons pushed forward to see what was going on, while newcomers hurried from all the walks through City Hall Park.

Under the mail wagon shed in the rear of the postoffice a very small boy, the center of attraction, held the stubby section of a garden hose attached to a water plug used by the mail drivers to water their horses. The weather was warm, and the boy, clad only in a waist and tattered knickerbockers, was gravely taking a shower bath. He seemed to enjoy the notice he was receiving, and the crowd applauded each new antic he performed. The mail drivers were interested, too. A policeman hurrying up to investigate the cause of the excitement was pushing to the front before the lad saw him.

Instantly the bather dropped the hose, and, ducking under a pair of horses, scampered away. The section of the crowd in the foreground jeered at the policeman and then began to disperse. Far in the rear people who arrived late were still inquiring what had happened.—New York Times.

A Clock Full of Sparrows.

Gen. Thibaudin, a former French minister of war, lives now at Montfermeil, near Rainey, and he there finds a novel way of entertaining his numerous visitors. According to the Gaulois he takes them into an adjacent wood, where stands the house of a master mason, Delavier by name. Here they are shown the singular sight of swallows nesting in the chimney clock that ornaments the dining room, and inhabiting it to such an extent that the owner does not wind it up during that period for fear of disturbing the process of hatching. The presence of the family at meals is in no way disconcerting to the swallows. At 4 o'clock each morning they strike against the windows as a signal to the master of the house to open the casements and allow them to fly forth and seek nourishment for their young.

Swedish Superstitions.

In Sweden, youth as well as maidens test the potency of love charms by gathering nine kinds of flowers, which they place under their pillows, and the one dreamed of is the favored one.

Young men also look for fernseed at midnight, for its magical power in capturing the hearts of shy or obdurate maidens. Fernseed so procured also avails to make its possessor invisible.

Young girls get the hard root of mugwort, which is called coal, and put it under their pillows, in order to dream of their lovers.

Pluck a rose, hide it, unseen, in paper until a month hence, when, should it be found fresh as when gathered, the future husband of wife will appear.

The Longest Words.

A correspondent gives "Nonintercommunicability" as the longest word in the English language. While reading the life of the Archbishop Benson I came across the following extract from his diary for September, 1892 (page 461): "But the free kirk of the north of Scotland are strong antidisestablishmentarians"—ten syllables, twenty-six letters! The longest Italian word contains eleven syllables and twenty-six letters and forms a whole line of rhyme which is a well known proverb:

Chi troppo in allo sal, cade sovenie
Precipitevolissimevolmente.

(He who rises too high often falls
Most precipitately.)—Pall Mall Gazette.

His Assets.

"Yassir," said the colored citizen, with a wave of his hand toward the cabin. "I's done broke. I reckon I's whut dey calls a bankrup'."

"What are your assets?"

"Lemme see. Dar's me an' de three boys an'—"

"You misunderstand. Your assets are what you have hopes of realizing money on."

"Dat's what I's gettin' to. My assets ain' nuffin but fo' votes an' a mule."—Washington Evening Star.

Earmarks of the Tonsorial Artist.

"Is this a tonsorial parlor?" asked the hard-featured man, thrusting his head inside the door.

"Yes, sir," answered the man at the first chair. "Come in. You're next."

"I guess not. You'll want to know what makes my hair so harsh, and try to get me to have it singed, and you'll want to part it in the middle, and charge me 35 cents. I think I'll hunt a barber shop. Good-day."—Chicago Tribune.

Her Idea of Farming.

He—I saw that farm that was advertised and I think I will buy it.

She—Oh, then we will move away from the hateful city for good?

He—Yes. It's a fine place; fourteen acres and a pond on it.

She Won't that be nice? We can raise pond lilies and watermelons in it. —Philadelphia Press.

Defined.

Mrs. Jones—This paper speaks of a "lobbyist" as though it was a term of reproach.

Mrs. Plagore—Of course. A lobbyist, I take it, is one of those deceitful men who sneak out between the acts for a drink, claiming that they are merely going into the lobby.—Philadelphia Press.

THOUSANDS OF LIVES LOST

APPALLING DISASTER BEFALLS GALVESTON, TEX.

Immense Tidal Wave Sweeps Over the City, Blotting Out at Least 2,500 Lives and Causing Tremendous Property Damage—City Is Almost a Complete Wreck—Storm the Worst Ever Known—Galveston Cut Off From Railroad and Telegraphic Communication and Authentic Information Cannot Be Obtained—Many Other Towns in Texas Suffer Loss of Life and Damage to Property—Several Vessels Wrecked—Greatest Distress Prevails.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from San Antonio, Tex., says:

The startling news has just flashed over the wires informing Gov. J. D. Sayers that a messenger at great risk of his life has reached Virginia Point from Galveston with the report that 2,500 are probably dead as a result of the fearful storm. An urgent appeal to all Texas for help was made. The messenger said that the grain elevators at the water front are wrecked and hundreds of buildings have collapsed or were carried out to sea. The greatest distress is said to prevail.

Wrought Awful Havoc.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 11.—The West Indian storm which reached the gulf coast yesterday morning wrought awful havoc in Texas. Reports are conflicting, but it is known that an appalling disaster has befallen the city of Galveston, where, it is reported two thousand or more lives have been blotted out and a tremendous property damage incurred. Meager reports from Sabine Pass and many other points also indicate a heavy loss of life but these reports cannot be confirmed at this hour. The first news to reach this city from of Galveston was received yesterday. James C. Timmins, who resides in Houston and who is the general superintendent of the National Compress company, arrived in the city at 8 o'clock last night from Galverton. He was one of the first to reach here with tidings of the great disaster which has befallen that city, and the magnitude of that disaster remains to be told because of his endeavors to reach home. After remaining through the hurricane on Saturday he departed from Galveston on a schooner and came across the bay to Morgan's Point, where he caught a train for Houston.

The Hurricane,

Mr. Timmins said, was the worst ever known. The estimates made by citizens of Galveston were that 4,000 houses, most of them residences, have been destroyed and that at least 2,500 people have been drowned, killed or missing. Some business houses were also destroyed, but most of them stood, though badly damaged. The city, Mr. Timmins avers, is a complete wreck, so far as he could see from the water front and from the Tremont hotel. Water was blown over the island by the hurricane,

The Wind Blowing

at the rate of eighty miles an hour straight from the gulf and forcing the sea water before it in big waves. The gale was a steady one, the heart of it striking the city about 5 o'clock Saturday evening, and continued without intermission until midnight, when it abated somewhat, although it continued to blow all night. Of his own knowledge Mr. Timmins knew of only one house succumbing with fatal results, though he heard of many residences being carried away with inmates. The house that he saw destroyed was Ritter's saloon and restaurant at 259 Strand street, a principal business street of the city. This three-story building and nine men, prominent citizens, were killed. It is reported that the orphan asylum and both the hospitals were destroyed, and if this proves true the loss of life will be great, as these institutions were generally crowded and as they were substantial buildings the chances are that many had taken refuge in them. The water extended across the island. Mr. Timmins said it was three feet deep in Market street. Small craft are floating bottom up in the bay. Along the water front the

Was Blown Down

Damage Was Very Great

The roofs had been blown from all the elevators and all along the water front the buildings had lost their sides and were no protection to their contents. There is a small steamship ashore three miles north of Pelican island, but Mr. Timmins could not distinguish her name. She is flying a British flag. Another big vessel had been driven ashore at Virginia Point, and still another is aground on the island. A short distance from Pelican Point another vessel is ashore. The lightship that marks Galveston bar is hard and fast aground at Bolivar Point.

Vessels Wrecked.

Mr. Timmins and the others with him on the schooner rescued two sailors in the Middle bay who had been many hours in the water. These men were foreigners and he could gain no information from them. A wrecked vessel looking like a large steam tug was seen in the bay just before landing. The carcasses of nearly 200 horses and mules were seen, but no human bodies were visible. The scenes during the storm, Mr. Timmins said, could not be described. Women and children were crowded into the Tremont house, where he

Had Sought Shelter

At night they were bemoaning their losses and completely filled the hotel. What was going on in other portions of the city could not be described. He says the city of Galveston is entirely cut off from communication. The bridges are gone and railway trains cannot enter. Even if any of the bridges was standing people could not walk across on account of the water being so high. The waterworks is flooded and is threatened, all the wells being spoiled on account of the overflow of salt water. This, Mr. Timmins says, is the most serious phase of the situation. The electric plant is ruined by the inundation. The residence portion is practically wiped out of existence. On the west end, which faces the gulf on another portion of the island, great havoc was wrought. The beach is swept clean, bath houses destroyed and many houses demolished.

STORM'S AWFUL EFFECTS.

Succeeding Advices Add Fresh Horror to the Story.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 11.—A special to the Commercial Appeal from New Orleans says: Advices regarding the awful effects of the storm that has been raging along the gulf coast of Texas are just beginning to arrive and the story they tell is fraught with horror. First of importance is the news that Galveston was struck by a tidal wave and the loss of life there was between 2,500 and 3,000. The water is fifteen feet over Virginia Point. Every effort is being made out of New Orleans to get telegraphic or cable communication with the wrecked city, but to little avail. One message was received last evening fixing the loss of life at 2,600. It came by cable from Vera Cruz and was later confirmed in a general way. Great damage and considerable loss of life is reported along the line of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway. There is much anxiety about Sabine Pass an dPort Arthur. The latest news received from Sabine Pass was Saturday at noon, and at that hour the town was surrounded by water. The storm had not then reached its height nor had the tidal wave come which is reported to have swept over Galveston. However, at the time the last report was sent out the people were fleeing to the highlands for safety, and it is hoped they may have found refuge in time.

Gov. Sayers Says 3,000.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 11.—Information has just reached me that about 3,000 lives have been lost at Galveston, with enormous destruction of property. No information from other points.

Joseph D. Sayers, Governor.

WITHDRAW TROOPS.

Chaffee Ordered to Prepare to Leave Pekin.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Orders have been cabled to Gen. Chaffee to prepare his forces for withdrawal from Pekin. Further than that the war department has taken steps to have Taku a sufficient number of United States transports to remove the troops to the Philippines as soon as they reach the port. These orders are preparatory and do not necessarily indicate that our government has decided finally upon an immediate withdrawal from China. It is simply placing itself in a position to carry out the pledge conveyed in the Russian note in this language: "The result of these considerations is that, unless there is such a general expression by the powers in favor of continued occupation as to modify the views expressed by the government of Russia and lead to a general agreement for continued occupation, we shall give instructions to the American generals in China to withdraw our troops from Pekin after due conference with the other commanders as to the time and manner of withdrawal."

Send Representative to Pekin.

Acting Secretary Hill of the state department said last night that there were no developments in the Chinese situation yesterday. Dr. Hill was at the state department for a time during the morning, but not much of importance had come during the night and there was nothing to make public. The naval office was also without information from the East during the day, nor were any dispatches from Gen. Chaffee posted at the war department. The Japanese legation furnished a news paragraph of considerable interest and importance, indicating that the Chinese imperial family are alive to the necessity of having a duly authenticated representative at Pekin to meet the foreigners with a view to the arrangement of affairs there. This news is the return of Prince Ching to Peking, to which place he was escorted by a company of Japanese several days ago. Prince Ching is one of the best known pro-foreigners in China, has occupied important positions in the government of that country, and his return by the direction of the emperor is to the officials here a good augury for the opening of negotiations for peace.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES.

Impossible to Get Definite News From Pekin.

London, Sept. 11. — The deadlock in Pekin apparently continues. It begins to look as if no solution would be attained at any rate before the arrival of Count von Waldersee at Tien-tsin. Germany seems to have introduced a new complication by endeavoring to organize some kind of offensive movement in the province of Chili. From the plentiful crop of conflicting rumors, both as regards the actual position of affairs in China and the diplomatic aspects in Europe, it is next to impossible to extract any definite fact. A Washington special talks of a movement amonk the powers to appoint Sir Robert Hart as the European representative in negotiations with China. According to the Shanghai correspondent of the Times, Li Hung Chang is awaiting the imperial edict appointing additional negotiators. In the apportionment of the city to the control of the different nations the Americans, in ignorance of what was being done, permitted a rectification of the French quarter, adjoining the American, which transferred from American to French possession Prince Li's palace, the richest in Peking, stocked with treasures worth millions of Dollars.

To Rescue the Emperor.

The Standard publishes the following, dated Sept. 8, from its Shanghai correspondent: "Sang Fau, the Manchu viceroy of the provinces of Yun Nan and Kwei Chau, started northward Sept. 5, at the head of a large force to rescue the emperor. An imperial decree has been issued aiming to prove the innocence of the empress dowager in connection with the attacks upon foreigners. Li Hung Chang intends to go north next Tuesday, Sept. 11."

Fooled Uncle John.

"Uncle John," said little Emily, "do you know that a baby that was fed on elephant's milk gained twenty pounds in a week?"

"Nonsense! Impossible!" exclaimed Uncle John, and then asked: "Whose baby was it?"

"It was the elephant's baby," replied little Emily.

Lying Low.

"Nope," said Farmer Corntossel, "I didn't go to nary convention this year. I have points of sympathy with all of 'em, but I kep' away."

"Too busy?"

"No, I wasn't so busy jes' then. I was skeered. There ain't no tellin nowadays who them delegates is agoin' to pick on fur vice presidential nominee." —Washington Star.

Found in a Cuban Paper.

La Nation, a paper published in Havana, gives voice to the lack of gratitude which too many Cubans feel toward the United States by the following little sarcasm:

"Come Over—We advise all the fools and idiots of our neighboring great sister—of the future and our nurse of the present—to come over to Cuba. This is a happy land and a wonderful climate for them. For us it is most treacherous and cruel. It makes idiots and fools of us all; but for those who immigrate it is most generous and beneficent. They leave their homes fools and idiots, and as soon as they land upon our shores they become intelligent and wise. A miraculous transformation, but not a new one. When old Spain was our mamma the same thing happened. Every dunce fathered there and sent over became a Solomon here. The influence of the climate—the wonderful influence! Come over and enjoy it!"

An Irresistible Plea.

A little girl in describing the big storm of the other night said she thought it beautiful—it wa so like the storm she saw when she was taken to the theater. A little boy, while the storm was "on," took a stand by a window that he might not miss a bit of it. His mother had hard work to get him to leave the window and fetch her something from upstairs. "All right," sighed the little boy, at last consenting, "but, please, God, don't do anything more until I get back again."—New York Evening Sun.

The Lady Interfered.

Senator Spooner of Wisconsin is one of the most eloquent men in the upper house, inimitable on the stump and credited with being able to do about as he pleases with his audiences. A friend and admirer who has known the senator from boyhood is authority for the following story:

Some years ago, when taking part in a symposium in the northern part of the state Senator Spooner was making an impassioned appeal to his audience in the midst of which the master of ceremonies touched him on the shoulder, and, pointing to the clock, indicated that his time had expired.

Quick as a flash a woman rose from her seat, and, mounting a chair in front of the clock, threw her shawl over its face amid the laughter and cheers of the audience and to the dismay of the master of ceremonies. It is doubtful if Senator Spooner ever received a prettier compliment.—Washington Letter.

ORDER OUT OF CHAOS

CLEANING-UP PROCESS CONTINUES AT GALVESTON.

More Bodies Found and Quickly Burned Without Any Attempt at Identification—Less Looting and Desecration of Corpses—Destitute Wishing to Leave Are Being Sent Out of the City as Rapidly as Possible—Sanitary Conditions of the Down-Town Portion of the City Greatly Improved.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 17.—It was a dreary Sabbath in Galveston. Services were held in the few churches made fit for use since the great storm. All day men and boys were at work clearing away the debris. Only a few dead were found during the day and they were quickly burned, no attempt being made to identify them.

The military and civil authorities are now co-operating harmoniously in Galveston and consequently there is less looting and desecration of corpses. Sheriff Thomas is in charge of the isolated district and is directing interment and the recovery of property there. United States Marshal Grant has been given full authority by Gen. Scurry and is directing affairs on the mainland, aided by a troops of rangers who are ordered to make and arrest all suspicious characters. The rangers and the militia and civil guards stationed at Texas City and Virginia Point are under the direction of Marshal Grant. They are the two points of ingress into the city. He also has control over the railways running into this city and all craft plying between Virginia Point and Texas City, and no one can embark or disembark at these places without his permission unless having authority so to do from his superior officers. The destitute, wishing to go to friends in the country, are given free transportation and are being sent out of the city as rapidly as the limited transportation will permit. The owner of any water craft or railway found guilty of charging more than the regulation fare and severely dealt with. The cleaning up and disinfecting of streets, stores and buildings is being diligently carried on, and the sanitary condition of the down-town portion of the city has been greatly improved. Mayor Jones stated there would be no abatement in the work until the entire city is cleansed and disinfected. Dry goods stores and clothing houses resemble great laundries and every available space is occupied with goods hung up to dry. Fortunately, the weather is clear, hot and dry for this purpose. Those merchants whose stocks were but slightly damaged have done a rushing business and so have the restaurants, but their stocks are very limited, and fresh meat difficult to obtain.

Will Be Arrested

Railroads Pushing Work.

Since all the railways terminating here have united upon one bridge, and are pushing the work night and day with a large force, reconstructing it, while the tracks are being restored on the island and mainland by large forces, it is confidently asserted that Galvaston will have rail communication by Wednesday next. If this is done it will relieve the existing situation wonderfully as all supplies are now brought by boat. The injured and sick under the thorough system inaugurated by the board of health and local physicians, aided by volunteers from the outside are receiving every care and attention and are doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances, which are being improved daily.

DAVIS CLAIMANT DEAD.

End of a Life Made Miserable by Fruitless Quest for Wealth.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Death came to Edward A. Davis in a ward at the county hospital yesterday, and ended a life made miserable by a fruitless quest of wealth that many times was all but in his grasp. Years of struggling for the fortune that he claimed unbalanced his mind, and his wife and family were parted from him by a decree of the courts. Edward Davis was one of several sons of John A. Davis of Chicago. The latter was a brother of Judge Andrew J. Davis of Montana, whose death precipitated one of the most bitter law contests for his millions ever fought in Western courts. John A. Davis was chosen administrator of the estate, which was valued at $3,000,000, but died shortly after the appointment. It was then that Edward Davis, the son, began the fight in his own behalf, which ended so disastrously.

FIGHTING NOT OVER

BRITISH MAY SEND MORE TROOPS TO CHINA.

Troops Will Be Sent From South Africa to India So to Be Near at Hand—Li Hung Chang Must Submit His Credentials to the German Ambassador and Await the Kaiser's Decision—Prominent Officials Are Impeached by Li Hung Chang — Rupture With Woo Chang's Influential Party.

London, Sept. 17.—In connection with the prediction by Sir Robert Hart that there will be further hostilities in China in November the Associated Press understands that the British government is already considering the transportation of troops from South Africa to India in order to make it practicable to send more British troops to China. The military authorities consider the war in South Africa so far ended that troops may now be safely moved. It is probable that the Russian legation has already been removed from Pekin to Tien-tsin, but there is no definite news as yet as to whether Li Hung Chang will after all go to Peking. Gen. Dorward is going to the capital, leaving the British troops at Tien-tsin under command of Brig. Gen. Horno Campbell.

Von Ketteler's Assassin Shot.

Vice Admiral Alexieff has returned to Taku. The Americans have begun at Ho Si Wu a permanent telegraph line between Pekin and Tien-tsin. The Pekin correspondent of the Daily News says that the assailant of Baron von Ketteler has been shot. Shanghai advices say that a house has been engaged there for Count von Waldersee, who is expected to arrive next Saturday. Chinese officials estimate that 20,000 disbanded Chinese soldiers, by the simple expedient of turning their coats, managed to remain behind in Pekin. Other dispatches confirm the report that in addition to Hsu Tung, guardian of the heir apparent, Yu Lu, viceroy of Chili, and Wang Lung, president of the imperial academy, with 200 members of officials' families when the allies entered Pekin. The Shanghai correspondent of the Times, wiring yesterday, says: "Li Hung Chang has been notified from Berlin that he must submit his credentials to the German minister at Shanghai, who will then communicate with Emperor William and await the result. Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, in an interview with Shang, expressed the opinion that although the powers were averse to the partition of China, any delay in negotiation was calculated to produce that result, and that Germany was prepared to remain in occupation indefinitely pending a satisfactory settlement. Earl Li accordingly telegraphed Gen. Yung Lu to use every effort to persuade the empress dowager and emperor to return to Pekin and to

Committed Suicide

Remove Prince Tuan

and his entourage. I learn on trustworthy authority that before his departure, Li Hung Chang, having been convinced by his interviews with Mr. Rockhill and Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, that it would be useless to discuss any settlement excluding the punishment of the empress dowager and her chief advisers, sent a telegraphic memorial to the throne, impeaching Prince Tuan, Prince Ching and Tsailan, Prince Tuan's brother, as well as Kang Yi, president of and Chao Shu Chiao, commissioner of the railway and mining bureau and president of the border, punishment. Earl Li, being unable to consult the viceroys of Nankin and Woo Chang, inscribed their names to the memorial, taking their consent for granted, but it appears that Woo Chang's viceroy disapproves of the use of his name. This means a rupture with a large and influential party. It is reported that the Russians have seized valuable railway property at Tien-tsin in spite of protests of the British commander.

ROCKHILL GOES TO PEKIN.

Pursuing His Investigations Into the Chinese Situation.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Special Commissioner William W. Rockhill, who was sent to China by President McKinley to make a special report on matters incident to the existing complications in that country, is now on his way to Pekin. Mr. Rockhill has been at Shanghai for some days pursuing his line of inquiry in that section of the empire, but, according to a dispatch received at the navy department from Admiral Remey, the commissioner left that place yesterday for Taku and Pekin. If he goes direct to Pekin he should reach there about the same time as Li Hung Chang, who also has just left Shanghai for the capital city. Aside from this dispatch from the admiral there was no news of consequence from the representatives of the government in China. Mr. Adee, the acting secretary of state, was at the department for some time during the day, but said he had nothing to make public. Condolences from several foreign governments expressing their regret over the Galveston disaster were received, but they were not given but pending the president's reply to them. Nothing came from Gen. Chaffee during the day and the situation regarding the question of the withdrawal of the troops from Pekin, it was stated, was unchanged.

His injury is not serious. Conklin's assailants disappeared and could not be found by the police.

FROST AND HIGH WATER.

MINERS' BIG STRIKE

BOTH SIDES CONTINUE TO STUBBORNLY HOLD OUT.

Strike Seems Certain to Be One of Considerable Magnitude—Operators Will Attempt to Run Their Collieries but There Is Little Hope of Their Being Able to Start—Leaders Spend a Busy Day Addressing Meetings — Archbishop Ryan Attempting to Patch Up the Difficulty.

Philadelphia, Sept. 17. — That the strike of the mine workers in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania, which President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America has officially ordered to begin this morning, will be one of considerable magnitude, seems certain from reports received from the region yesterday. It seems also certain that a number of operators will make efforts to run their collieries, even though they be short-handed, but whether they will be successful can only be detrmined when the breaker whistles sound the call to work. The operators generally will have their collieries in condition to begin operations, and the whistles will blow as usual, but a large number of the employers admit that there is but little hope of being able to start. Yesterday was one of quiet throughout the entire coal district. The mine workers were orderly and their leaders were busy addressing meetings to encourage and enthuse the members of the union and to win over such of the non-union men as they could. Many of these latter, although not favoring a strike, will, it is the general opinion, remain away from the mines rather than bear the criticism and reproaches of their fellow workmen. An effort is being made to have Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia act as arbitrator. Father Phillips of Hazelton, who has been laboring hard to effect a peaceful settlement of the labor troubles, was in conference at a late hour with President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, urging him to delay the strike until Archbishop Ryan shall have exhausted his efforts.

DRIVEN AWAY BY A MOB.

Mansfield, Ohio, People Won't Stand for Zionists.

Mansfield, Ohio, Sept. 17.—A mob yesterday drove Zion Elder Ephraim Bassinger of Bluffton, Ind., and two of the Dowies out of the city and thus broke the monotony of usual routine followed for the past four Sundays. Elder Bassinger was in the city Saturday and held several meetings without molestation and had a number of consultations with his attorney, A. A. Douglass. He left in the evening, but returned again yesterday and was holding a meeting at the home of E. H. Leiby when the officers went there and took him to the depot, followed by a jeering mob of several hundred. He was a target for apples, tobacco cuds, missiles and kicks as he was escorted to the depot, and when he arrived there he was a pitiable sight. The passenger train was missed by about two minutes, and while they were waiting for the next train the mob went to the home of E. H. Lieby and took him and Frank Calver, both Zion followers, and marched them to the depot. When an express train arrived all three were put on it and hustled out of the city.

RUSSIA WANTS OUR LUMBER.

Sounding Lumber Firms Regarding the Quick Delivery of 30,000,000 Feet.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 17. — A well founded rumor has been going the rounds of the large lumber firms operating on the sound lately that a representative of the Russian government was interviewing the coast, and probabilities of quick delivery of 30,000,000 feet of lumber at Vladivostock. The first inquiry was received by a large mill in Tacoma a few weeks ago, and early in the month came a telegraphic notification from San Francisco to another large sound mill that the Russians had come to this section to investigate the facilities of the mills for turning out the product. It is said that all inquiries have been based on the requirement of speedy delivery, which will probably be taken as having a most important bearing on the war operations in the Orient. It is even reported by one informant that the grade of lumber asked for implies that it is to be used for the military encampments, as though extensive military operations were in contemplation.

Trusts Rob You on Every Hand.

The Democratic Congressional committee gave out the following:

"Here are a few of the reasons why the "plain people" are not inclined to meekly adopt the inspired statements of the trust organs and speakers showing what a natural, necessary and beneficent institution the trust is:

It requires 50 per cent more wheat to buy a stove than it did in 1896.

It requires twenty bushels more corn to buy a wagon than it did in 1896.

It requires 100 per cent more corn or wheat to buy a copper kettle than in 1896.

It requires twice as much corn to buy a coil of rope as in 1896.

It requires 40 per cent more grain to buy a plow than in 1896;

It requires 75 per cent more grain to buy a hoe, a rake or a shovel than in 1896.

A set of common wheels that cost $7 in 1896 now costs $12.

The price of cultivators and other farm implements has gone up proportionately.

Galvanized barbed wire costs from $4 to $4.50 per hundred more than in 1896.

It requires 40 per cent more corn or cotton to buy a pound of sugar than in 1896.

You have to pay 40 per cent more for glass than in 1896.

Freight rates have climbed back to the exorbitant prices which caused a popular revolt in legislation a few years ago.

The prices of oil, coal, lumber, tools and hardware have gone up from 40 to 100 per cent.

And all these things have been done by the trusts!

Bargains.

A Test of Accuracy.

Drawing from memory is one of the most difficult things in the world to do. Even professional artists find that they must rely largely upon hasty jottings made upon the spot as suggestions for their pictures. Those who are not artists need to look keenly and closely at what they wish to recollect, for they must depend upon their memory to bring details back to them. It is an excellent corrective of superficial observation to sketch a scene as we think we saw it and afterward return to the scene and take another view. It is a training both in accuracy and humility, for we learn how easy it is to deceive ourselves as to what we have remarked.—Florence Hull Winterburn in Woman's Home Companion.

She Got a New Pair.

Sarcasticus and his wife were going to the theater.

"Will you please go in and get my goats off the dressing table?" said Mrs. S.

"Your goats?" queried the puzzled Sarcasticus. "What fangle have you women got now?"

"I'll show you!" snapped the wife, and she sailed away and soon returned putting on her gloves.

"Are those what you mean? Why, I call those kids."

"I used to," replied Mrs. Sarcasticus, "but they are getting so old I am ashamed to any longer."

He took the hint.—Pearson's Weekly.

Economy.

"What's this?" exclaimed the young husband, referring to the memorandum she had given him. "One dozen eggs, one pound of raisins, a bottle of lemon extract, a tin of ground cinnamon and half a pound of sugar—what do you want with all these things, Belinda?"

"I've got a stale loaf," replied the young wife, "that I'm going to save by working it up into a bread pudding. I never let anything go to waste, Henry."—London Fun.

Dress Well.

It is not enough that people shall be clad; they must be dressed. "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy," was the advice of Polonius to his son; "rich, but not gaudy, for the apparel oft proclaims the man," and the advice is just as good today as it was 300 years ago.

PLEASANT PRISONS.

THE SPECIAL ONES IN THE ENGLISH PARLIAMENT.

They Are Intended Particularly For Members and Other Persons Who Violate Parliament's Own Dignity, Rules and Customs.

Few persons are aware that England's parliament has its own special prisons within its own precincts which are intended particularly for its own members and persons who violate its own dignity, rules and customs. Of course these prisons seldom are used now, but they have been in the past, and not so very long ago, and may be again. The house of commons has one set and the house of lords another.

The commons prison is a little way up in the Clock Tower. Here are two sets of prisons, intended only for the accommodation of one prisoner each, one set being a little higher up in the tower than the other. Each set consists of a sitting room and two bedrooms, the former being a nice, comfortable room about three by five yards, with a neat carpet and chairs good enough for anybody. The extra bedroom is not intended for the prisoner or for any friends whom he might desire to put up for the night, but is the sleeping apartment of the official who looks after him during his incarceration. This man is usually the supervisor of badge messengers, and, besides looking after his man, he is also his servant for the time being, and waits upon him just like any other. He never need worry himself much upon the question of the possibilities of the prisoner's escape, for the sergeant-at-arms is responsible, and inasmuch as the only way of getting to and from the prison is by way of this sergeant's house and through it, the risk of such a thing ever happening is practically prohibitive.

While he is there the prisoner really has a good time. No restrictions as to hours are placed upon him, and he may rouse himself from his slumbers just when he feels most inclined and return to them in the same way. Practically the only thing he cannot do is to walk about outside just as he pleases, but he is permitted to take an hour and a half's exercise each morning and an hour in the afternoon on the terrace of the house, and the terrace, broad and long and with its splendid outlook upon the river, is by no means a bad place to take exercise. If he were left entirely unguarded, the prisoner might dive into the river and swim away, or, what would be simpler, hail a passing boat. So, just for precaution's sake, a couple of officers accompany him while he takes these breaths of fresh air.

He goes on Sunday to the church in Vincent square, and on these occasions also he has a couple of innocent looking attendants.

Moreover, there is no question of so many ounces of bread and meat, but if he has the money to pay for it he may feed himself upon the choicest viands that the most cultured palate could suggest. The house of commons has a first class restaurant, where the hungry M. P. may dine as well as he could anywhere in London. Each day the dishes which the kitchen has prepared are indicated on a menu which is brought up to the prisoner, and he ticks off anything for which he feels a fancy, and it is brought to him. The only drawback from his point of view is that the bill is presented to him just as it would be anywhere else, and in the event of his refusing to pay up he would eventually be served with a court summons.

Among the occupants of the Clock Tower have been the late Charles Bradlaugh, who found himself consigned thither on account of a little difference with Mr. Speaker on the subject of the parliamentary oath. When Northampton returned Mr. Bradlaugh to parliament, he was not allowed to take the oath nor the substituted process known as affirmation. Mr. Bradlaugh, however, secured a New Testament and took a self administered oath, after which he proceeded to the next step of signing the roll. He refused to withdraw when the speaker requested him to do so, and consequently the sergeant-at-arms took charge of him, and to the Clock Tower prison he went.

When the erection of the Tower bridge was being considered, a statement was made that the Tower bridge bill committee was subject to bribery and corruption—a serious charge. Two men responsible for it were pronounced to have committed a breach of privilege, for the house is very sensitive upon such matters, and the speaker issued a summons for their appearance. One of them, Mr. Ward, gave himself up without delay, and he got seven days in the Clock Tower prison. The other offender, after a little delay, was captured and was for a brief period housed at Newgate.

The first M. P. imprisoned in the present house of commons was W. Smith O'Brien. One day in 1846 he committed contempt of the house by declining to sit upon a certain committee. Consequently he was sent to prison during the few weeks that the committee deliberated. This time, however, he was not sent to the Clock Tower prison, which was not finished, but did his durance in the cellar of the house.

A Scotch Custom.

In many parts of Scotland it used to be the custom to place on a man's tombstone the symbols of his trade. Thus a sugar cane would decorate the grave of a grocer; an ax and saw, with hammer and nails, would be found on that of a carpenter, an awl and a hammer on a shoemaker's grave, and so on.

The sorrow of yesterday is as nothing; that of today is bearable; but that of tomorrow is gigantic, because indistinct.—Euripides.

TIME AND SPACE are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church will give a social at the Hotel St. Hilaire Thursday evening Sept. 20th. The "long and short" of it is that each one shall pay five cents per foot according to their height and one cent for every extra inch.

The Thief River Falls Press says the republican candidates are to make a tour of the county in a body during the campaign, being a necessary precaution to insure a quorum at meetings—one to take the platform while the others organize themselves into an audience.

The National-Watchman says: President, candidate, McKinley was so absorbed in preparing his defense of his conduct in the Philippines that in the eighty-three days he spent on his letter of acceptance he forgot to mention anything about the gift of two thousand square miles of valuable gold land in Alaska to his guide, philosopher and friend, John Bull.

The Fertile Journal reports ten births in last weeks issue for that town and winds up as follows: "The above shows what republican prosperity is doing for Fertile and, for a wonder none of the populists blame Mark Hanna for it. The only thing about it to worry a new-comer like the writer is whether it is contagious, infectious or merely epidemic."

The democratic gain in Maine was 23 per cent and the republican loss 12 per cent, based on the vote of 1896. Similar results obtained in other states now claimed by the republicans would insure Bryan's election without New York.

The election in Maine has proved a most significant straw and indicates that William J. Bryan will be the next president of the United States.

Congressman Frank M. Eddy expounded the principles of republicanism at the village hall Monday evening to a large audience. A great many were compelled to remain on the outside who could not find seats and standing room was at a premium. Several ladies were present and listened attentively to the address—or perhaps to take a good look at who is widely known "as the homeliest man in Congress." He is an entertaining speaker and so far as in his power tries to entertain an audience.

Congressman Eddy has come and gone. Although making two speeches here he said nothing about his vote on the Porto Rico tariff bill. He did say something about driving fifty miles across the country and on reaching Thief River Falls was "hungry enough to give 50 cents for a slice of dog steak." Let's see, the trip he speaks of must be from Warren to Thief River—a well traveled road—well-to-do farmers living less than a mile a part the entire route. Must be looking for a bid for sympathy or has a passion for dog meat.

When a newspaper man meets a person and asks "what do you know?" it is not a nonmeaning phrase. He is interested in what is going on in the world. However nine times out of every ten he will be answered, "nothing." The condition should be reversed, for if the party would think for a moment he would no doubt scratch up an item that would be of interest to hundreds of people, and the newspaper man would be glad to tell it.—The Eye.

A new fakir is abroad in the rural regions. He drives through the country and sells soap $5 a box, which sum includes the price of forty yards of carpet selected from sample which he has in his wagon. He takes the $5, leaves the box of soap, promises to deliver the carpet of the selected sample within a week, and drives away. The soap is probably worth 50 cents. It stays with the purchaser. The carpet is probably worth $15 and stays with the fakir and has not yet been delivered to a single victim. Farm families should be on guard against this new fakir, and against all other fakirs.—Crookston Times.

Thursday evening the members of our local Odd Fellow Lodge were agreably surprised to learn that a few of the prominent followers of the fraternity from Red Lake Falls were to honor us with their presence. To make the occasion worthy of their coming and also to try and make them as useful as possible the visitors were invited to exemplify the work by giving Dr. Blomburgh the initiatory degree. It is needless to say the Doctor got the full benefit of everything in the degree. At the close, after being invited to call again and extending a return visit to the St. Hilaire lodge they were invited to partake of lunch at the Ideal Restaurant. The visitors were L. Jenson, O. Thoman, F. Jeffers, D. Linnehan, O. Sandstrom, A. Zeh, S. A. Swanson, F. A. Grady and F. Borchers.

A. H. Weagant, the hardware man has the honor of selling the first Corn Harvester ever sold in St. Hilaire or perhaps in Red Lake county. The expert is here to-day setting it up and it will be put to use this afternoon on the farm of one of the Iowa boys that came here last spring.

Two Hundred Hens.

Two hundred hens will make a former as much clear money during the coming winter as five good cows. And it will not take half as much food to keep them as will be required for the cows. This does not mean that any farmer can receive these returns at the start without having given any thought to modern methods of poultry keeping. But a farmer who will give himself the necessary schooling can safely figure on getting such returns from two hundred hens as we have named every winter. It is a sure thing. We are acquainted with a good many farmers who it seems to us could make use of this money, and it strikes us as one of the strangest things in the world why they don't reach out for it and put it in their pockets.

Putting the American flag where it ought not to be is a McKinley specialty which has brought the country trouble and humilation in big chunks. But that did not prevent his ordering the flag to be raised in the wrong place again this week. It was by McKinley's order to be raised over the notorious Li Hung Chang, who is to be taken from Shanghai to Pekin under its protection, and on board an American war ship if he wishes, and when he gets to Pekin, Gen. Chaffee and his brave American soldiers are to be his body guard. What a use to make of the American flag and American soldiers! This old rascal has been afraid to leave Shanghai—afraid alike of his own countrymen and the powers, with the exception of Russia which is said to own him body and soul. And now Mr. McKinley rushes into the breach and raises the American flag over him and takes him to Pekin, regardless of whether the other powers consider such action an affront or not, and he goes even further. He has promised Li Hung Chang that he would use his good offices to persuade the powers to enter into negotiations with him, although several of them have already refused to do so, Mr. McKinley's friendship for Li Hung Chang is really suspicious.

Removing Old Wall Paper.

One of the best ways in which to remove old wall paper is to dip a large and clean whitewash brush in warm water and apply in evenly to the wall before scraping with a kitchen knife. Holes in the plaster should be filled with plaster of paris mixed with morter.

Slighting Providence.

The Kansas City Star, a paper that don't support Bryan, observes a McKinley peculiarity, which it thus notes:

> Mr. McKinley is much prone to attribute to his administration the prosperity in this country, which arises to natural causes. The president ought to give Providence a show, too.

This is just criticism, one that applies not only to the president, but to all the out and out republican newspapers and McKinley shouters in the country.

Last year the crops were good all over the land. It took an army of men to harvest and move them and this gave employment to labor and to the railroads. The returns for his grain helped the farmer who was able to buy more at the stores, and the result was an era of moderate plenty.

Who was deserving of thanks? Why Providence, of course, but republican newspapers did not seem to think so for they all cried as with one voice, "This is McKinley Prosperity." They refused to give Providence a show.

This year there is a crop failure in North Dakota and hard times are the result, but no republican newspaper is blaming the McKinley administration for it. They say Providence did it.

Note the inconsistency of the McKinley shouters. They give him credit for the good times that resulted from good crops, and throw on Providence the responsiblity of the hard times that result from crop failure and trust manipulation of prices.

If this is not refusing to give Providence a show, what is it?

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

What Bryan Would Not Have.

The McKinley organs are busy constructing a cabinet for Bryan. No one knows exactly who Mr. Bryan would call into his cabinet but everyone knows the kind of cabinet he would not have.

He would not have a secretary of state who would lick the boots of royalty.

He would not have a secretary of the treasury who would give to a coterie of national bankers control of the public finances and free use of the public moneys.

He would not have an attorney general owned by the trusts.

He would not have a secretary of the interior dominated by land-grabbing corporations.

He would not have a postmaster general who would conceal frauds like those perpetrated by Rathbone and Neely.

He would not have a secretary of the navy controlled by the armor plate trust.

He would not have a secretary of war controlled by the beef trust.—Chicago American.

Young man, you who are idle day after day, week after week and month after month, listen: If you could hear what the people say about you it would hurt your feelings. The fact is, the people are tired of your loafing around the stores and business places. Every business man in town is heartly tired of you and you ought to go to work at something. If you can live along without work by means of your brains or hands or muscles. Thousands and thousands of men have endeavored to attain success by loafing, but all have failed. Your parents may be able to keep you in food and raiment for a long long time, but the time will surely come when you can no longer have them provide for your wants. Men who are successful in life these times have learned some trade or business. This earth may be growing, as geologists say it is, but it is yet entirely too small for the loafer, and the business man would much prefer you would get off or go to rooting like the rest of us?—Ex.

Climate and Crop Bulletin.

For the week ending Sept. 17, 1900.

Four days of the week were without rain, except in small areas. There were heavy rains on the 10th in the Minnesota valley and the southwest, and in nearly all parts of the state on the 14th. The temperatures of the 9th and 10th were rather high for the season, but the rest of the week they were moderate till the 15th. Frosts occured an the morning of the 16th in northern portions—the first of the season. On the morning of the 17th frosts were general in all parts of the state, those in the northern half probably being severe enough to kill vegetation not already ripe; the only crop of importance liable to injury being the late flax. A little thrashing has been attempted in Kittson county, and possibly in a few other counties, but this work was practically at a standstill during the whole week. Wheat still in shock is in bad condition, and that in stack is said to be damp and sprouting. Some of the late flax has been cut, but unless dry weather comes on it, may be injured. Corn cutting is nearing completion, but in some places the ground is so soft that corn binders cannot be used. Plowing has been made much easier in southeastern counties; elsewhere it is going on well except where the ground is too wet. Potatoes are being dug where the soil is dry enough. The second crop of wild grass is better than the earlier crop, but rains have made it difficult to secure. Pastures are good.

LINCOLN TO HANNA.

REPUBLICAN PARTY OF TODAY AND YESTERDAY.

Charles A. Towne Shows How Each Interpreted the Declaration of Independence—Contrast Shows Decadence—A Sorry Contrast, Indeed.

Historically, as all the world knows, the Declaration of Independence is the document in which the American colonies in 1776 proclaimed their independence and nationality and in which are recited the reasons and justification for that step.

Considered as a contribution to the literature of the science of government, it is a formulation of the general principles of liberal institutions. Its spirit has been for 124 years the greatest force in the political world. It has shaped the policy and formed the ideals of the American people. It has made our example more potent on the institutions of Europe than all other influences combined. It is today more powerful than all our fleets and armies. Parliaments, representative governments, liberty of the press, religious toleration, increasing guarantees of personal freedom bear witness to in the uttermost parts of the earth.

Source of Information.

To it are largely due the humanities of modren art and literature and the subjugation of science to the practical utilities of everyday life. The promulgation of it and the defense and exemplification of it have given us our peculiar place in human history. The Christian gospel has forever sanctified a small Roman province. The art and philosophy of Greece have dedicated a petty European peninsula to the immortal regard of all mankind. Future ages will cherish endlessly the bequest by the United States of the principles that all men are created equal and that just government can exist only by the consent of the governed.

Twice only in our history has the doctrine of this great instrument been openly assailed. It was the duty and glory of Abraham Lincoln to defend the Declaration of Independence from the charge that it did not apply to black men.

Today the party that he founded is engaged in attempting to prove that it does not apply to brown men. But by its language it applies to all men, and to admit an exception is to deprive it of its place in the history of liberty and to remit the world to the old doctrine of force as the basis of government, justifying the divine right of kings, the institution of slavery and wars of mere conquest and subjugation.

A Sorry Contrast.

When the first national convention of the Republican party met, in June, 1856, in the city of Philadelphia, it adopted a platform, of which the very first resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That the maintenance of the principles promulgated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Federal Constitution is essential to the preservation of our republican institutions, and that the Federal Constitution, the rights of the states and the union of the states shall be preserved." When the last Republican national convention met, in June, 1900, in the same historic city, it adopted a platform wherein there occurs not one syllable of reference to the Declaration of Independence. How can this be accounted for?

No American citizen can go to Philadelphia without feeling the holy influence of the place. The immortal Declaration lives in every nook and corner of the old colonial capital. The convention of 1856 was in harmony with this sacred association. That of 1900 was insensible to it. The reason was that the party between 1856 and 1900 had changed character completely.

From being the champion of freedom it had become the defender of oppression. Its high ideals had given place to sordid ones.

From Lincoln to Hanna.

It had measured the awful distance from Abraham Lincoln to Marcus A. Hanna.

Forty-four years ago it reaffirmed the Declaration of Independence. This year it not only fails to reaffirn that great instrument; it actually repeals it. Note the following language of its platform on the subject of the government of the islands taken from Spain: "The largest measure of self-government consistent with their welfare and our duties shall be assured to them by law."

This makes the Republican party the source and origin of whatever "measure of self-government" these people may secure. The Declaration of Independence says that liberty is an inalienable attribute of manhood. The Republican party declares that McKinley may give liberty to some men. The Declaration of Independence maintains that God gives it to all men.

The Tyrant's Excuse.

This complacent announcement of benevolent guardianship over inferior races is in the very spirit of despotism. No tyrant in the world ever confessed that his own glory and advantage were the objects of his sway. Always and everywhere the plea of absolutism has been that it aimed at the welfare of its victims, which they themselves were powerless to achieve or to achieve in equal measure. This was the claim of George III. with reference to the revolted colonies when he said: "I am desirous of restoring to them the blessings of law, which they have fatally and desperately exchanged for the calamities of war and the arbitrary tyranny of their chiefs."

It was of such presumptions as these of George III. and William McKinley that Abraham Lincoln said:

What Lincoln Said.

"Those arguments that are made that the inferior races are to be treated with as much allowance as they are capable of enjoying; that as much is to be done for them as their condition will allow—what are these arguments? They are the arguments that kings have made for enslaving the people in all ages of the world. You will note that all the arguments of kingscraft were always of this class. They always bestrode the necks of the people, not that they wanted to do it, but because the people were better off for being ridden. Turn it every way you will, whether it comes from the mouth of a king as an excuse for enslaving the people of his country or from the mouth of one race as a reason for enslaving the men of another race, it is all the same old serpent."

Some of the present day critics of the Declaration of Independence think they have discredited its authority when they trace its inspiration to Rousseau and the French philosophy of the eighteenth century. But they wholly misconceive the nature and purpose of the instrument. It does not aim to state historic fact, but civic justice; not so much what has been as what ought to be and will be.

Lincoln has somewhere said that the framers of the Declaration aimed to set up for mankind an ideal standard and maxim of government, toward which by ceaseless effort and struggle we should constantly more and more approximate. When that goal shall have been reached indeed, then shall we behold that halcyon era of the world of which poets have dreamed and philosophers have theorized, and for which all history is a preparation.

To the glory of advancing that consummation under Lincoln can it be possible that the Republican party is to add the infamy of retarding or defeating it under Hanna?

All the traditions of our history, all the aspirations of our people cry out against this madness.

The patriotism of America is today the hope of the world.

BRYAN'S SPEECH.

(Chicago Letter.)

Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance is without doubt the political event of paramount importance in the present campaign. Mr. Bryan received at the hands of the Democratic party the nomination for the presidency. A partisan utterance upon this occasion would have been pardoned, nay more, was even expected by the country at large. Tradition and precedent exist to justify a candidate in such a course. He of Canton—Mark Hanna's man—who was recently notified of a nomination, took occasion to plead for the principles of a party and in the cause of an administration. In multifarious terms he told what "we" had done, and fairly reveled in the deeds of "us." The Republican party was defended—even apologized for. And Wm. McKinley accepted at the hands of those who bore the stamp of the Republican party, the nomination for the presidency of the United States. Mr. McKinley's speech of acceptance will go down in history as the statement of a party chief to his party followers. But how different the tone and tenor of Mr. Bryan's Indianapolis address. McKinley spoke to a party—Bryan to a nation; McKinley plead the cause of an administration—Bryan the cause of a people. McKinley defended the principles of a party—Bryan spoke in defense of the principles that are at the foundation of free government; McKinley spoke as a candidate, but Mr. Bryan spoke as an American citizen.

In the face of existing circumstances it is a fact of peculiar significance that Mr. Bryan could reply to the notification committee in a speech bearing as little trace of partisan politics as the constitution of the United States or the Declaration of Independence. This does not indicate that Mr. Bryan is not a good Democrat, but rather that the Democratic party is contending not so much for certain theories of administration in a free government as for free government itself. Hence it is that, fighting for the very existence of the republic, the position of the patriotic citizen who stands for free government and the position of the Democratic party became identical. Mr. Bryan was great enough to recognize this. Mr. Bryan's speech was remarkable enough on account of the things he said. Mr. McKinley's Canton speech was chiefly remarkable on account of the things he did not say. The Canton speech abounds in vague intimations and promises. It does not hold out to the Filipinos the faintest hope either of independence on the one hand or of the freedom and rights of American citizenship on the other.

The voter has only to read so much of Mr. McKinley's speech as relates to this subject in order to find this statement to be correct. He will find something about giving the Filipinos as much self-government as they are fit for—as though the right of people 10,000 miles away to self-government was not a God-given right, but a right to be granted by some authority in Washington. But he will find not the faintest whisper of such a thing as independence for a people over whom we have no authority except such as Spain somehow is supposed to have had a right to give us. In Mr. Bryan's speech, however, the voter may find a pledge that if he is elected he will convene congress at the earliest moment to declare the nation's purposes.

"First, to establish a stable form of government in the Philippine islands, just as we are now establishing a stable form of government in Cuba. Second, to give independence to the Filipinos, just as we have promised to give independence to the Cubans. Third, to protect the Filipinos from outside interference while they work out their own destiny, just as we have protected the republics of Central and South America and are by the Monroe doctrine pledged to protect Cuba."

This is a sufficiently clear and succinct statement of the Democratic position. Of its correctness, of course there can be no doubt. This, with what McKinley says, and with what he significantly omits to say, sufficiently defines the issue as to the Philippines. The broader issue of imperialism, which includes that of the Philippines, may be stated thus:

Mr. Bryan stands upon the doctrine of the Declaration of Independence, that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Mr. McKinley stands for the utter repudiation of that doctrine and for "the doctrine of thrones, that man is too ignorant to govern himself," and must be subject to those who rule by superior might and divine right."

Mr. Bryan upon leaving Indianapolis came to Chicago, where he has been in conference with the leaders of the party here at headquarters. To say that the outlook for the Democratic party at the present time is hopeful would be putting it mildly. Mr. Bryan's speech seems to have put a new aspect upon the campaign. Telegrams of congratulation from Republicans and gold Democrats have been literally pouring in upon Mr. Bryan and the executive committee. Influential papers that have been hesitating as to their policy, upon receiving Mr. Bryan's speech, openly endorse the candidacy. The converts of the week would fill a column. When such conservative papers as the Springfield Republican become enthusiastic for the success of the party; when such papers as the Boston Post, the New York World and the Baltimore Sun, all of which supported McKinley in '96, openly indorse Bryan, the outlook must be considered bright.

But these papers have not been the only additions to the force of the militant Democracy. Wherever large bodies of men have gathered during the past month the events have been productive of much encouragement to the Democracy. The dissolution of the Gold Democracy at a regular meeting and the quick assimilation of all its influential members by the regular party marked the end of the truancy of 1896. When the Ohio Bar association met in yearly convention a few weeks later and the president, Judge A. P. Laubie, a life long Republican, denounced McKinley's policy of imperialism, he found no dissenters, though fully half the members were Republicans.

Quickly following this Dr. Silas C. Swallow, candidate for president of the United Christian party, addressing his followers in a convention, said: "If we must choose between the two candidates of the old parties, I must say that I shall support a man who clings to principles and adheres to what he believes to be right rather than the man whom the people never know where to find on any vital issue."

According to press reports, this statement was received with remarkable expressions of approval. During the same week Father Heldman, a prominent Catholic clergyman of Chicago, in an address before the German Veterans' League, brought the entire audience to its feet in a spontaneous expression of approval when he scored the administration's policy in the Philippines and Porto Rico.

In Ohio the defection from Republican ranks has been especially marked. The Germans who gave McKinley such strong support in 1896 are coming over in droves to Bryan. Besides this Frank S. Monnett and Cleveland's former Mayor, Robert McKisson, men with enormous personal followings are fighting Mark Hanna tooth and nail. Then, too, that most independent element headed by Jones of Toledo are practically a unit for Bryan this year. It will be remembered that Jones polled 120,000 votes when he ran for governor last year.

HAWTHORNE.

COCHRAN ON IMPERIALISM.

Hon. Bourke Cochran, the distinguished Democrat, who four years ago opposed the election of W. J. Bryan, now thinks that the hope of the country lies in the Democratic nominee's election. He says:

"Imperialism must always rest on a standing army. Its vital principle and essential element is the thirst of a mercenary soldiery for opportunities of plunder and promotion.

"Republican government must always rest on the virtue, patriotism, self-sacrifice and self-control of the citizen soldier. We anti-imperialists have no fear for the security of our country while it is guarded by the valor of the American Democracy. We don't sit up nights for fear that China, Japan, Germany or any other power might undertake to injure us or to seize part of our territory. We would be perfectly satisfied to trust the security of American soil to American laborers, organized as citizen soldiers, even if they were armed with no better weapons than paving stones.

"The opponents of militarism have often been called cowards by its supporters. Who are the cowards? The men who believe in the resistless strength of the greatest citizenship that this world has ever seen, and who are willing to trust the safety of their lives and property to it, or those hysterical, vociferous patriots who call frantically for other men to take up arms and go into the four quarters of the globe seeking pillage and spreading destruction?

"We have been told that after we have acquired these islands and established a standing army over them they will all be happy. Well, they may. An imperial system might result in benefit to those islanders. I won't dispute that. But I do insist that this would be absolutely ruinous to this country, and it is in defense of this country that I write. It has been asked, What have you anti-imperialists to propose? I answer. It is not for us to propose while McKinley alone has the right to dispose. But I will venture to say that whatever may be the outcome of this crisis, it will be the very best solution of which human virtue is capable.

"I know that the imperialistic policy is the very worst that could be suggested, and therefore I am confident it will be rejected. I can prophesy what will not happen, from the whole history of the American people. I can prophesy what will happen, because they have always surpassed the expectation of the wisest in the splendor of their actual achievements.

"The issue before the American people is the vindication of the declaration of independence. Can there be a doubt as to how it will be decided? There is but one, and that springs from a doubt as to whether the people will be able to vote upon it directly. It is self evident that opposition to imperialism must be made through the organization of the Democratic party."

Too Tame for Him.

"No," said the St. Louis man, "I didn't enjoy the street car ride you gave me. The scenery was all right and the roadbed good, but it was too tame."

"Tame?"

"Yes. At home I'm used to being blown up at every street corner."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Depreciation of Money.

In 1873 a silver dollar was worth one dollar and six-tenths in gold, and in 1896 forty-five cents. Money may depreciate but there is one standard medicine, which has not changed in half a century, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It always has been the one remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia or kidney troubles.

Selfish Advice.

"I suppose they never have any, then?"

"Oh, yes, they do; and she eats his share."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WEDS A WHITE GIRL.

The Bridegroom Was an Aged Negro Who Loved the Bride When She Was a Child.

"Boss, we wants to be married."

Justice Colding of Camden looked up from his desk and before him was an old negro, bent with age, with hair as white as snow and face as black as charcoal.

By his side was a young white woman, well dressed, not over thirty years of age. She would not be called pretty, but her features were clear cut and refined. Her voice, too, was soft and well modulated as she asked.

"We don't have to have a license, do we?"

Justice Colding is a negro, but, surprised at this unusual match, he asked the woman why she wanted to marry a colored man.

"Because I learned to love him when I was a little girl," she said. "He worked on my father's farm."

The man said his name was Burrell Bland and his intended wife was Elizabeth Haines of Philadelphia. He lived on his own farm, near Woodbury. Neither had ever been married.

Justice Colding performed the ceremony, at the conclusion of which the old negro took her face between his wrinkled hands and said, fervently:

"De Lord bless you, honey."

The woman began to cry and in response to her aged husband's anxious inquiry, said:

"I don't care what they say, I love you, Uncle Rell."

Justice Colding received a fair-sized fee from the groom, who left the office with his face covered with smiles. The bride was softly weeping.—Philadelphia North American.

Honored His Uniform.

The capitol police wear natty uniforms of blue cloth adorned with brass buttons, and, taken all together, are an attractive body of men. One of these public servants, a rather young and good-looking man, was greatly embarrassed the other day by a handsome young creature from Virginia, who, tripping gaily up to him, pinned a handsome rose to the lappel of his coat.

"Take that, with my gratitude," she said, theatrically, "my country's defender."

"Country's defender, miss?" echoed the astonished man.

"Yes," replied the enthusiastic young woman. "You've got a new uniform on, but, for all that, you look brave, and I know you were in the thick of the fight at Santiago."

It was useless to attempt an explanation with so determined a hero-worshiper, and the member of the capitol police force beat a hasty retreat, still wearing his rose.—New York Tribune.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—Miss Pearl Good, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Miss Pearl Good, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

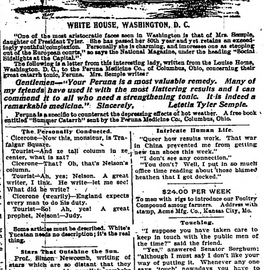
PRESIDENT TYLER'S DAUGHTER,

A Venerable Lady of Noble Lineage Speaks a Timely Word.



WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

"One of the most aristocratic faces seen in Washington is that of Mrs. Semple, daughter of President Tyler. She has passed her 80th year and yet retains an exceedingly youthful complexion. Personally she is charming, and impresses one as stepping out of the European courts," so says the National Magazine, under the heading "Social Sidelights at the Capital."

The following is a letter from this interesting lady, written from the Louise Home, Washington, D. C., to the Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, concerning their great catarrh tonic, Peruna. Mrs. Semple writes:

Stars That Outshine the Sun.

Prof. Simon Newcomb, writing of stars which are so distant that they have no measurable parallax, remarks that one of these, the brilliant Canopus, can be said, with confidence, to be thousands of times brighter than the sun. "Whether we should say 20,000, 10,000 or 5,000 no one can decide." The first magnitude stars, Rigel and Spica, also are at an immeasurable distance, and must, in view of their actual brightness, enormously outshine the sun.—Youth's Companion.

Aaron Burr as a Father.

Aaron Burr was himself an ornament to many a drawing room, and no man ever had better opportunities for estimating the deficiencies in the system of educating the women of his day. Theodosia he brought up like a young Spartan, with few or none of the feminine affectations then in vogue. Courage and fortitude were his darling virtues, and so instilled into her from her infancy that they formed almost the groundwork of her character. "No apologies or explanations—I hate them," he said, reproving her for some fault of omission when she was a little child. "I beg and expect it of you," he wrote to her from Richmond, where he was awaiting trial for treason, and whither she was hastening to him, "that you will conduct yourself as becomes my daughter, and that you manifest no signs of weakness nor alarm."—Lippincott.

To illustrate the fogginess of phrase with which some people are afflicted, Dr. Crichton Browne told a story recently. At the annual meeting of a charitable institution a subscriber claimed that the work was unsatisfactory, and naturally annoyed the committee. Well, as a matter of fact, you are wrong. The reverse is the case."—London Chronicle.

BRYAN'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE

FAVORS FREE COINAGE AT THE RATIO OF 16 TO 1.

Col. W. J. Bryan in His Official Letter of Acceptance Hits the Trusts—Is no Enemy to Corporations—Calls Imperialism the Paramount Issue.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—The letter of W. J. Bryan accepting the Democratic nomination for president was given out to-day and is as follows:

Hon. James D. Richardson, Chairman, and Others of the Notification Committee of the Democratic National Convention—Gentlemen: In accepting the nomination tendered by you on behalf of the Democratic party, I beg to assure you of my appreciation of the great honor conferred upon me by the delegates in convention assembled, and by the voters who gave instruction to the delegates.

I am sensible of the responsibilities which rest upon the chief magistrate of so great a nation, and realize the far-reaching effect of the questions involved in the present contest.

Wants Only One Term.

In my letter of acceptance of 1896, I made the following pledge:

"So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the Constitution in the chief executive of the nation and with the enormous influence which he can yield for the benefit or injury of the people, that I wish to enter the office, if elected, free from any personal desire, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my countrymen. Human judgment is fallible enough when unbiased by selfish considerations, and, in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of the office to advance any personal ambition, I hereby announce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for re-election, in case this campaign results in my election."

Further reflection and observation constrain me to renew this pledge.

With the Chicago Platform Added.

The platform adopted at Kansas City commands my cordial and unqualified approval. It courageously meets the issues now before the country, and states clearly and without ambiguity the party's position on every question considered. Adopted by a convention which assembled on the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, it breathes the spirit of candor, independence and patriotism which characterizes those who, at Philadelphia in 1776, promulgated the creed of the republic.

Having in my notification speech, discussed somewhat at length the paramount issue, imperialism, and added some observations on militarism and the Boer war, it is sufficient at this time to review the remaining planks of the platform.

As to Trusts.

The platform very properly gives prominence to the trust question. The appalling growth of combinations in restraint of trade during the present administration, proves conclusively that the Republican party lacks either the desire or ability to deal with the question effectively. If, as may be fairly assumed from the speeches and conduct of the Republican leaders, that party does not intend to take the people's side against these organizations, then the weak and qualified condemnation of trusts to be found in the Republican platform is designed to distract attention while industrial despotism is completing its work. A private monopoly has always been an outlaw. No defense can be made of an industrial system in which one, or a few men, can control for their own profit the output or price of any article of merchandise. Under such a system the consumer suffers extortion, the producer of raw material has but one purchaser, and must sell at the arbitrary fixed price; the laborer has but one employer, and is powerless to protest against injustice, either in wages or conditions of labor; the small stockholder is at the mercy of the speculator, while the traveling salesman contributes his salary to the overgrown profits of the trust. Since but a small proportion of the people can share in the advantages secured by private monopoly, it follows that the remainder of the people are not only excluded from the benefits, but are the helpless victims of every monopoly organized. It is difficult to overestimate the immediate injustice that may be done or to calculate the ultimate effect of this injustice upon the social and political welfare of the people. Our platform, after suggesting certain specific remedies, pledges the party to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in nation, state and city. I heartily approve of this promise. If elected, it shall be my earnest and constant endeavor to fulfill the promise in letter and in spirit. I shall select an attorney general who will, without fear or favor, enforce existing laws. I shall recommend such additional legislation as may be necessary to dissolve every private monopoly which does business outside the state of its origin; and, if contrary to my belief and hope, a constitutional amendment is found to be necessary, I shall recommend such an amendment as will, without impairing any of the existing rights of the states, empower congress to protect the people of all the states from injury at the hands of individuals or corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

Protection Denounced.

The platform accurately describes the Dingley tariff law when it condemns it as a "trust breeding measure, skillfully devised to give to the few favors which they do not deserve, and to place upon the many burdens which they should not bear." Under its operation trusts can plunder the people of the United States, while they successfully compete in foreign markets with manufacturers of other countries. Even those who justify the general policy of protection will find it difficult to defend a tariff which enables a trust to exact an exorbitant toll from the citizen.

The Democratic party makes no war upon honestly acquired wealth; neither does it seek to embarrass corporations engaged in legitimate business, but it does protest against corporations entering politics, and attempting to assume control of the instrumentalities of government. A corporation is not organized for political purposes, and should be compelled to confine itself to the business described in its charter. Honest corporations, engaged in an honest business, will find it to their advantage to aid in the enactment of such legislation as will protect them from the undeserved odium which will be brought upon them by those corporations which enter the political arena.

Interstate Commerce.

The Republican party has persistently refused to comply with the urgent request of the interstate commerce commission, for such an enlargement of the scope of the interstate commerce law as will enable the commission to realize the hopes aroused by its creation. The Democratic party is pledged to legislation which will empower the commission to protect individuals and communities from discrimination, and the public at large from unjust and unfair transportation rates.

For Free Silver.

The platform reiterates the demand contained in the Chicago platform for an American financial system made by the American people for themselves.

The purpose of such a system is to restore and maintain a bimetallic level of prices, and in order that there may be no uncertainty as to the method of restoring bimetallism, the specific declaration in favor of free and unlimited coinage at the existing ratio of 16 to 1, independent of the action of other nations, is repeated.

In 1896 the Republican party recognized the necessity for bimetallism by pledging the party to an earnest effort to secure an international agreement for the free coinage of silver, and the president, immediately after his inauguration, by authority of congress, appointed a commission composed of distinguished citizens to visit Europe and solicit foreign aid. Secretary Hay, in a letter written to Lord Aldenham in November, 1898, and afterwards published in England, declared that at that time the president and a majority of his cabinet still believed in the great desirability of an international agreement for the restoration of the double standard, but that it did not seem opportune to reopen the negotiations just then. The financial law enacted less than a year ago contains a concluding section declaring that the measure was not intended to stand in the way of the restoration of bimetallism, whenever it could be done by cooperation with other nations. The platform submitted to the last Republican convention, with the indorsement of the administration, again suggested the possibility of securing foreign aid in restoring silver.

Now the Republican party, for the first time, openly abandons its advocacy of the double standard, and indorses the monetary system which it has so often and so emphatically condemned. The Democratic party, on the contrary, remains the steadfast advocate of the gold and silver coinage of the Constitution, and is not willing that other nations shall determine for us the time and manner of restoring silver to its ancient place as a standard money. The ratio of 16 to 1 is not only the ratio now existing between all the gold and silver dollars in circulation in this country, a ratio which even the Republican administration has not attempted to change, but it is the only ratio advocated by those who are seeking to re-open the mints.

Whether the senate, now hostile to bimetallism, can be changed during this campaign or the campaign of 1902 can only be determined after the votes are counted, but neither the present nor the future political complexion of congress has prevented or should prevent an announcement of the party's position upon this subject in unequivocal terms.

The currency bill, which received the sanction of the executive and the Republican members of the house and senate, justifies the warning given by the Democratic party in 1896. It was then predicted that the Republican party would attempt to retire the greenbacks although the party and its leaders studiously concealed their intentions. That purpose is now plain and the people must choose between the retention of the greenbacks, issued and controlled in volume by the government, and a national bank note currency issued by banks and controlled in their own interests. If the national bank notes are to be secured by bonds, the currency system now supported by the Republican party involves a permanent and increasing debt, and, so long as this system stands, the financial classes will be tempted to throw their powerful influence upon the side of any measure which will contribute to the size and permanency of a national debt. It is hardly conceivable that the American people will deliberately turn from the debt paying policy of the past, to the dangerous doctrine of perpetual bonds.

Election of Senators.

The demand for a constitutional amendment providing for the election of senators by direct vote of the people, appears for the first time in a Democratic national platform, but a resolution proposing such an amendment, has three times passed the house of representatives, and that, too, practically without opposition. Whatever may have been the reasons which secured the adoption of the present plan; a century ago, new conditions have made it imperative that the people be permitted to speak directly in the selection of their representatives in the senate. A senator is no less the representative of the state because he receives his commission from the people themselves, rather than from the members of the state legislature. If a voter is competent to vote for a member of congress, for state officers and for president, he is competent to choose his representative in the senate. A system which makes the senator responsible for his election to the people, as a whole, and amenable to them if he misrepresents them, must commend itself to those who have confidence in the intelligence, and patriotism of the masses.

Direct Legislation.

The platform indorses the principle of direct legislation. This is already applied to the more important questions in nation, state and city. It rests upon the sound theory that the people can be trusted, and that the more responsive the government is to the will of the people, the more free it will be from misuse and abuse.

As to Labor.

Several planks of the labor platform are devoted to questions in which the laboring classes have an immediate interest, but which more remotely affect our entire population. While what is generally known as government by injunction is at present directed chiefly against the employes of corporations, when there is a disagreement between them and their employer, it involves a principle which concerns every one. The purpose of the injunction in such cases is to substitute trial by judge for trial by jury, and is a covert blow at the jury system. The abolition of government by injunction is as necessary for the protection of the reputation of the court, as it is for the security of the citizen. Blackstone in defending trial by jury, says:

"The impartial administration of justice, which secures both our persons and our properties, is the great end of civil society, but if that be intrusted entirely to the magistracy, a select body of men, and those selected by the prince, such as enjoy the highest offices of the state, their decisions in spite of their natural integrity will have frequently an involuntary bias toward those of their own rank and dignity. It is not to be expected from human nature that the few should be always attentive to the interests and good of the many."

If the criminal laws are not sufficient for the protection of property they can be made more severe, but a citizen charged with crime must have his case tried before a jury of his peers.

The blacklist as now employed in some places enables the employer to place the employe under practical duress, for the skilled laborer loses his independence when the employers can not only discharge him but prevent his securing any similar employment. The blacklist enables employers to secure, by mutual agreement, that control over the wage-earners which a private monopoly exercises without contract.

The writer favored arbitration, the establishment of a department of labor and exclusion of the Chinese. He advocated a liberal policy in the pension bureau and the control of the Nicaraguan canal by the United States. He strongly objected to any foreign alliances, and realized that the Monroe doctrine was essential to the welfare of the United States. He charged the Republican party with extravagance, and favored the income tax.

Continuing, he said:

The subjects, however, treated in this letter, important as each may seem in itself, do not press so imperatively for solution as the question which the platform declares to be the paramount issue in this campaign. Whether we shall adhere to, or abandon those ideas of government which have distinguished this nation from other nations and given to its history its peculiar charm and value, is a question the settlement of which cannot be delayed. No other question can approach it in importance; no other question demands such immediate consideration. It is easier to lose a reputation than to establish one, and this nation would find it a long and laborious task to regain its proud position among the nations, if, under the stress of temptation, it should repudiate the self-evident truths proclaimed by our heroic ancestors and sacredly treasured during a career unparalleled in the annals of time. When the doctrine that the people are the only source of power is made secure from further attack we can safely proceed to the settlement of the numerous questions which involve the domestic and economic welfare of our citizens. Very truly yours,

—W. J. Bryan.

Last of England's Rustics.

Here is a readable lament (with a lesson in it) from English Country Life: In the only heart of the country left to the home counties, so far from the appurtenances of town life that the rattle of railway trains can only be heard faintly when the wind is in a certain quarter, or the night very still, you may find, even yet, genuine rustics. They are old folk, full of old wisdom and old civility, and they dwell among a younger folk full of new information, and infinitely less civil. It is strange and unreasonable that after a few years' study of the primers of the board school, harmless enough little books, a man should find it derogatory to give you a civil "good evening" as you pass, but he does.

A Story of Matthew Arnold.

Matthew Arnold, next to Whistler, was perhaps the most colossal egotist of his time.

After his return to London from his first lecturing tour in America, he visited old Mrs. Proctor, widow of the poet, "Barry Cornwall," and mother of Adelaide Proctor. Mrs. Proctor, who was then eighty years old, in giving Mr. Arnold a cup of tea, asked him:

"And what did they say about you in America?"

"Well," said, the literary autocrat "they said I was conceited, and they said my clothes did not fit me."

"Well, now," said the old lady, "I think they were mistaken as to the clothes."—New York World.

Great Minds.

"Another bungling job of hanging, yesterday," remarked the lop-eared fanatic.

The other boarders looked interested.

But the freckled idiot looked up from his plate long enough to say:

"Do not work yourself into a frenzy. There has probably been another bung- There has probably been another bungling job of paper-hanging some place."

Thus we see that great minds run in the same channel, as, in all probability, the lop-eared fanatic was thinking of the same as the freckled idiot, while the other boarders—poor fools—thought that a real execution had taken place.—Indianapolis Sun.

Queer River.

Mr. Cadbury and Mr. Rounsbury, two gentlemen of London, were discussing their recent American tour.

"I saw a queer river in the States, donceher know," said Mr. Cadbury.

"What river was that?" Mr. Rounsbury asked.

"The Ohio."

"I saw that river, too, but did not notice anything queer about it."

"Well, when that river goes down coal goes up, and when the river is up coal is down."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Where Women Are Pilots.

In Norway, Sweden and Finland women are frequently employed as sailors, and do their work excellently, and in Denmark several women are employed afloat as state officials, generally in the pilot service. They go far out to sea in their boats and meet the vessels coming into port, and having nimbly climbed on board and shown their official diploma, they calmly and coolly steer the newcomer into harbor.

His Hanging-Out Place.

"What did Scummins say when you told him of our scheme to make him alderman?" asked the political leader.

"It took him clean off his legs," said the faithful henchman. "He wants time to think about it."

"In a quandary, was he?"

"No; he was in a saloon."—Chicago Tribune.

TUAN IS HONORED

ANTI-FOREIGNERS PROMOTED BY THE EMPRESS.

How Li Hung Chang's Denunciation of Prince Tuan Is Answered—Edict Deals Leniently With Boxers and Declares No Executions Can Be Sanctioned Until a Settlement Is Made—Cannot Distinguish Between Good and Bad Boxers—Chinese Say Emperor and Empress Cannot Return to the Imperial Palace.

London, Sept. 24.—According to the Pekin correspondent of the Daily News, wiring Sept. 16, the Chinese declare most positively that the empress dowager and the emperor will in no case return to the imperial palace in Pekin, as they hold that it has been desecrated by the intrusion of babrians. This irreconcilable attitude receives confirmation in many reports emanating from Shanghai. One of these is that, as a reply to the denunciation of Prince Tuan and others by the viceroys an imperial edict, dated Sept. 17, deals most leniently with the Boxer movement, and reminds the people that both the Boxers and Chinese Christians are Chinamen, who shall receive imperial protection if

to their homes. The edict points out that it is impossible for the imperial government to distinguish between good and bad Boxers. It says, however, if the rebels still continue together they will be dealt with summarily. Another report says that the edict frankly declares that no executions can be sanctioned until a settlement has been made. Further indications that Prince Tuan has resumed his former ascendancy are found in the Shanghai reports of his promotion and in the further statement that Gen. Tung Fuh Siang has been appointed generalissimo of the Northern Chinese armies, and Prince Chuang, deputy commander-in-chief of the Boxers, has been Made a Grand Councillor.

It is also reported that Loh, former governor of Kiang Su province, a Manchu and bitterly anti-foreign, has been appointed to succeed Li Hung Chang at Canton. According to various accounts of the Pei Tang affair the Chinese had anticipated that the allies would attack in force. The British and others who had left Tien-tsin with the intention of cutting off the retreat of the Pei Tang garrison arrived too late. They were only half-way to their destination when the forces were captured. The Tien-tsin correspondent of the Standard explains that the Russians refused to provide trains for this force, but gave the Germans and Austrians ample notice and railway accommodations.

Allies Lose Three Hundred.

Advices to the Standard from Shanghai place the losses of the allies before Pei Tang at 300, principally due to the explosion of mines, one of which, 200 yards long, exploded like an earthquake, killing and wounding large number and literally blowing two mounted officers to pieces. The Standard publishes a belated account from Tien-tsin giving an illustration of the international difficulties. It appears that the British at Fong Tai guaranteed safety to the natives if the railway property was restored. Accordingly the men returned, but a few days later the Russians arrived and killed them all just outside the British lines.

Will Weaken Allies' Influence.

The morning papers are too fully occupied with the general election campaign to bestow much attention upon the Chinese problem. The Standard, which discusses editorially the replies of the United States government, says: "The policy thus laid down implies the existence at Washington of a very exaggerated estimate of the good will of the Chinese viceroys. It is to be feared that the action of the United States will tend to weaken the moral influence of the allies, and for this reason is to be greatly regretted."

A WAITING ATTITUDE.

General Relaxation of Anxiety at Washington Apparent.

Washington, Sept. 24.—With the three pending diplomatic notes bearing on the Chinese situation disposed of by answers to the respective powers, the attitude of the United States now is a waiting one. There was a general relaxation of anxiety apparent yesterday, and the day passed without any developments in the way of important dispatches. Now that the notes are acted upon, the question of the commission to negotiate peace is again revived. Among others whose names were suggested last night as one of the commissioners was Judge William R. Day of Canton, the former secretary of state. Judge Day served with the American-Spanish peace commission, and in all probability will be persona grata to China. His ill health, however, is a serious consideration, which might lead him to decline if offered a commissionership.

TEACHER CHOKES TO DEATH.

Young Woman Ruptured a Blood Vessel While Coughing.

Sycamore, Ill., Sept. 24.—Miss Mary Redmond, a teacher, met a sudden death here. She had been suffering a few days with a severe cold, but not sufficient to interfere with her school work. An attack of coughing occurred, and a blood vessel was ruptured, which caused her death in a few moments. She was twenty years of age and successful in her profession.

Frontier Entertainment.

Pierre, S. D., Sept. 24.—The immense excursion party brought here by the Northwestern road was taken to the west side of the river where a typical frontier entertainment had been provided. Roping and riding contests were the principal features, and a herd of six buffalo attracted attention from all.

Many Buildings Burned.

Constantinople, Sept. 24.—Fire in the Khas Kol district has destroyed 150 residences, forty shops and synagogues.

FILIPINO ACTIVITY

Was More Extended Than First Reported.

Manila, Sept. 24.—The insurgent demonstrations last week prove to have been more extended than was at first reported. From Cagayan and Isabela provinces and the northwestern districts of Luzon, come accounts of insurgent operations and American precautionary measures. Merchants in the province of Albay are getting their hemp to manila as rapidly as possible, fearing that otherwise it will be burned by the insurgents.

At Iloilo there was considerable anxiety lest an uprising should occur; but the insurgents there are ceasing their activity and returning in white clothing to the garrisoned towns of the district. As a resumption of insurgent operations is considered quite probable, the Americans there are taking the necessary steps. The American casualties in killed and wounded or missing during the last ten days, approach 100, including that at Siniloan at the east end of Laguna de Bay, where the insurgents, delivered ten bodies of our dead. Documents captured in Manila show that the insurgent activity in this vicinity was ordered by rebels here following instructions from the Hongkong junta.

After the Engagement,

Senor Buencamino has received from Aguinaldo an answer regarding his peace proposals. Aguinaldo declines to consider them and declares that he is unwilling to agree to a compromise. The amnesty expired Sept. 21, and the conditions that existed previously have been resumed. An insurgent proclamation signed last month by Aguinaldo directing that American prisoners be set at liberty; that good treatment be accorded to captives, and that $40 be paid to each American surrendering, has reached Manila. Few prisoners were released under the proclamation. Two who have just arrived from the Calles district report that the insurgents in that locality are "in better spirits than they have displayed at any time before since April." The insurgents recently murdered ruthlessly three persons in the Lukban district.

WORK OF A MOB.

Zionist Elders Stripped and Decorated With Varnish.

Mansfield, Ohio, Sept. 24.—Another mob broke loose here yesterday morning and Elder Ephraim Bassinger of Bluffton and Silas Moot of Lima were its victims. The two elders got off an Erie train early yesterday morning unknown to the authorities. They were recognized by a small crowd at the depot which refused to let them enter a cab, then followed them up the street and surrounded them near the center of the city. They were then taken by the mob to the Richland buggy works where Bassinger disrobed, but the crowd tore Moot's clothing from his body as he refused to disrobe himself. A paint bucket and a brush were then secured and a smokestack varnish, a tar-like substance, was daubed over them from head to foot. It was matted into their hair and no part of their bodies escaped but their faces. Their bodies were then partially covered with their clothing and the elders were marched to the home of E. H. Leiby, a Zion follower here, who was driven out of the city last Sunday. There they promised not to return to Mansfield, but later they said that they agreed not to return unless Overseer Piper ordered them to come. They were then marched to the city prison and imprisoned. By applications of lard and benzine the black varnish was cut and after new outfits of clothing was furnished they deported on a Pennsylvania train at noon.

CORBETT IS RETURNING.

Comes Back to Vindicate His Name—Fall Out With Considine.

London, Sept. 24.—James J. Corbebtt, who is a passenger on the Cunard line steamer Campania, which left Liverpool yesterday for New York, is traveling under an assumed name. The saloon registry shows the names of "Mr. and Mrs. Martin," but it is impossible to discover whether there is any connection between "Mr. Martin" and the pugilist. The Sportsman publishes an interview had with Corbett on the deck of the Campania in which he admitted that he was traveling alone and under an assumed name. He said he had parted company with George Considine, with whom he had had an altercation. "Mr. Considine spoke slightingly of my wife," exclaimed Corbett, "and I am done with him. I intend to tell my wife that Mlle. Cornellie was nothing to me on the voyage and never has been. My principal object in returning to New York in hot haste is to bring action against the newspapers that have published misstatements about me and to vindicate my name."

A Fireman Killed.

San Francisco, Sept. 24.—A Santa Fe passenger engine crashed through a wharf at Point Richmond yesterday and sank in fifty feet of water, carrying with it Engineer Henry A. Allen, Telegrapher Mulcahey and Fireman P. S. Adams. The body of Adams is pinned beneath a hundred tons of steel at the bottom of the bay. The other men were injured, but not fatally. The wharf which sank beneath the engine has been in place only a year.

Epidemic of Suicide.

New York, Sept. 24.—An epidemic of suicide seemed to strike New York yesterday. A number of such cases was considered by the police as being extraordinary in that the cold weather of last week has superseded the period when suicides were more frequent. Besides the successful attempts the police handled a number of cases where the persons failed to accomplish their purpose.

Dentist Shot.

Aberdeen, S. D., Sept. 24.—D. Hurd of Oakes, N. D., shot J. E. Ellsworth, a dentist of that city. Ellsworth was charged by Hurd with breaking up the latter's family, and public sympathy is entirely with Hurd, who was not arrested. Ellsworth will probably recover.

Marshal Campos Dead.

Madrid, Sept. 24.—Marshal Arsenio Martinez De Campos died yesterday afternoon at Zarauz, near San-Sebastian.

IS STRICKEN AGAIN

TEXAS VISITED BY A TERRIFIC FLOOD WITH LOSS OF LIFE.

Cloudburst Results in a Flood and a Large Amount of Property Is Destroyed—Forty Italians Are Drowned in One Place and All the Ranches Swamped—Wire Communication Is Cut Off and Authentic Information Cannot Be Obtained—One Town Surrounded by Water.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 24.—A cloudburst in the Neuces river country, ninety miles west of the Southern Pacific road, resulting in a terrific flood and much loss of life is reported. Meager details have been received, but it is claimed that from thirty to forty Italians employed on the sheep ranches were drowned andd all the ranches were swamped. Many flocks of sheep have been lost and a large amount of property destroyed. From the most reliable information obtainable last night extensive storm damage has been inflicted on the upper Colorado and the Choneo river valleys, particularly at and near Brownwood, Blanket and San Angelo. Wire communication with all these places are cut off and the railroad lines damaged so that no trains can reach them. Reports indicate that the heaviest damage is at San Angelo, although many bridges in Brownwood have been Wrecked or Injured.

It is also feared many lives have been lost. The last telegram sent out from Brownwood was at about 10 a. m. yesterday, and stated that the town was flooded and entirely surrounded by water and that people and goods were being removed to places of safety in rowboats and rafts. Bulletins from Temple state that the tracks of the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe railroad are under water to the depth of fifteen feet south of Brownwood, and that nothing can be heard from places up the line. The rain is pouring down and streams still rising. The country districts cannot be heard from. It is raining hard for approximately 100 miles in all directions from Brownwood, and as the streams in that part of Texas are now very treacherous in the matter of sudden rises, a disaster is feared.

SEVERAL LIVES LOST.

Cloudburst Causes Great Damage and Results in Loss of Life.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 24.—A cloudburst in the valley of the Neuces river Saturday night did much damage to property and also, according to reports received here, resulted in loss of life on the ranches in that vicinity. The Neuces at Uvalde rose twenty-five feet in two hours' time and broke telegraph communication. A number of ranches were inundated and one English sheepman, Ethelbert McDonald, together with some Mexican sheep herders, are said to have lost their lives on a ranch in the mountains near Brackett. From reports of a colony of nomadic Italians it is thought that two lost their lives in the flood that went down the Neuces.

JAIL DELIVERY.

Five Prisoners at Lisbon, N. D., Make Their Escape.

Lisbon, N. D., Sept. 24.—Early yesterday morning five men confined in the county jail here awaiting trial for blindpigging, indecent assault and burglary, escaped. One of them, who was sick, had the privilege of the corridor and opened the steel cell doors. The iron-grated door of the sheriff's office was then pried open, and confederates with a conveyance are thought to have aided them, making good their escape. The prisoners are still at large. One prisoner remained, claiming to have been locked in by his companions.

Drowned While Fishing.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 24.—While a party of three, consisting of John Czaplewski and wife and brother, Michael, were out in a rowboat fishing yesterday afternoon the backwash from a passing steamer caused one of the boat's occupants to lose their bablance, capsizing it. The two men were drowned, but after a hard struggle the woman was saved by a party in a passing rowboat. Another drowning here yesterday was that of George Steiger, watchman of the government boat Cyclone, who fell between the boat and its barge. All of the bodies have been recovered.

Walsch Convicted.

Le Sueur Center, Minn., Sept. 24.—Talfer Walsch was convicted of assault with attempt to commit rape. The other prisoners will be tried at the October term, at which time Welsch will ask for a new trial. The charge on which Walsch was tried was an assault on Edith Watson early in August. She went from Minneapolis to Mankato by appointment, was taken to the country in a hack and assaulted.

Elected by Doctors.

Aberdeen, S. D., Sept. 24.—The Aberdeen District Medical society has elected the following officers for the coming year: President, William Edwards; vice president, Frank Miller; secretary and treasurer, G. E. Countryman; board of ethics, Doctors Fowler, Kennedy and Mallery; board of censors, Doctors Jones, McNutt and Coyne.

He Took Morphine and Died.

Butte, Mont., Sept. 24.—Melville L. Wines, prosecuting attorney for Silver Bow county for two terms, and a prominent criminal lawyer, committed suicide by taking morphine while temporarily insane.

Early Settler Dead.

Lisbon, N. D., Sept. 24.—Peter P. Goodman, an early settler in the Northwest, and a man of much prominence, was buried in Sheldon, this county, yesterday afternoon. He leaves a wife and three children.

Incendiary Fire at Deadwood.

Deadwood, S. D., Sept. 24.—The Grace Frawley establishment, the most notorious resort in the Black Hills, was destroyed by fire. Loss on furniture, $2,000; on building, $4,000. The fire was incendiary.

INSANE NEGRO KILLED.

He Gives the Police a Lively Time for an Hour.

New Orleans, Sept. 24.—Edward Gurley, an insane negro giant, was killed yesterday morning in Algiers after a thrilling hour. He woke up his black roommate and cut his throat, saying he was going to die and wanted to take his roommate along. Gurley was pursued by Corporal Coman and the police, but he took the officers' clubs away from them and made a furious onslaught, nearly killing the corporal. The police fired but missed. With the aid of other men they finally beat the negro with clubs and other weapons until he was pounded to death. The negro victim and Corporal Coman will recover.

Secretary Charged With Spreading False Alarms.

HIS MOTIVE PURELY POLITICAL.

Under Cloak of Protecting Creditors He Misuses His High Office—Mr. Schurz Points Out That the Republican Party Can Remedy Defects in Present Monetary Laws.

Carl Schurz has issued an open letter to Lyman J. Gage, secretary of the treasury, in which he takes the latter to question in regard to his reported interview of Aug. 26. In this interview, Mr. Gage sought to alarm business interests by suggesting that William J. Bryan, if elected, could direct his secretary of the treasury to pay off in silver all government obligations payable in "coin." Mr. Schurz practically charges Mr. Secretary Gage with having given out his interview for a political purpose under cloak of protecting creditors of the government.

Mr. Schurz's letter is as follows:

Dear Sir—The newspapers of Aug. 26 published an interview with you in which you were quoted as saying that "there is no doubt Mr. Bryan, if elected president, could order his secretary of the treasury to make payment in silver of all the public debt payable in coin and for all current disbursements of the government as well, which amount to from $1,500,000 to $1,750,000 per day, and that he would give such an order, too, is very certain, if he is in the same mind that he was in 1896." You went on to say that, although Mr. Bryan "would have great difficulty in doing that at once," owing to the small silver resources of the government, yet he might accomplish it in time, as the mere announcement of such a purpose "would stop the inflow of gold and correspondingly increase payments into the treasury of silver and silver certificates;" that this would practically put the government on a silver basis, ruin its credit and bring incalculable disaster upon the business interests of the country.

Having for a great many years taken a deep and somewhat active interest in the establishment of a sound monetary system in the United States, I may without impropriety address to you a few remarks in reply to your public statement. I emphatically deny, Mr. Secretary, that the danger set forth by you in your interview really exists and that any president will be able to do what you say might be done unless the Republican party in control of the government in both its legislative and executive branches proves itself utterly dishonest in its professed purpose to maintain the gold standard.

This denial is not based upon the reasoning of those of your critics who seek to show by figures that a president desiring ever so much to put the country upon a silver basis would lack the means for doing so. On the contrary, for argument's sake, I will accept all you say on that point, but you omit to mention a fact of decisive importance.

If the executive, as you say, professes the discretion of "paying silver in settlement of all interest on the public debt not specifically payable in gold and of making its daily disbursements to its creditors in silver," it is owing to a flaw in the currency law passed at the last session of congress, a law which, as the spokesman of the Republican party promised, was to put the gold standard upon an impregnable basis. It was suggested at the time by some of its critics that this law was purposely so manipulated by Republican politicians in the senate as to leave the possibility of the subversion of the gold standard by executive action open in order to enable the Republicans in the present presidential campaign to say that the election of a Republican president was absolutely necessary to save the gold standard and to prevent dreadful economic disaster.

Whether any such scheme entered into that legislation I do not assume to determine. Certain it is, however, that this feature of the law is now so used, and that you, Mr. Secretary, actually do so use it for the evident purpose of alarming the business community and the possessing classes generally.

I hardly need to say to you that the spreading of false alarms of this kind is a very questionable and responsible thing for anybody, and especially for a secretary of the treasury. And I call your prediction of the possibilities specified by you and of the disasters sure to follow a false alarm for a very simple reason. Whoever may be elected president on Nov. 6, there will be another session of congress before he will take office on March 4, 1901. The Republicans will have strong majorities in both houses of that congress. The executive, too, will be in their hands. They will, therefore, be able to make such laws as they please. They will then have full power and ample opportunity to pass any legislation required to make it utterly impossible to any president to break down the gold standard in the way you, Mr. Secretary, describe in your interview.

A simple enactment in two or three lines substantially providing that it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury to pay in gold or silver, at the option of the creditor, all kinds of indebtedness of the United States now payable in coin may be sufficient.

And if there should be another flaw in the present law dangerous to the gold standard in any other way, you, Mr. Secretary, able financier as you are, will surely detect it and find a legislative remedy and have it ready in the shape of a well matured bill to be submitted to congress at the opening of the session. In short, the Republicans, controlling both the legislative and the executive branches of the government, will next winter have ample power and opportunity to do what they ought to have done at the last session—to put the currency law in such a shape that the gold standard cannot possibly be shaken by executive action, no matter who may occupy the presidential chair—and thus remove, to that extent at least, the basis of our monetary system from the changeable game of party politics.

Do you see any reason for doubting that congress at its next session will do this? It is quite evident that, if there is any substance at all in your predictions of disaster, the Republicans in congress cannot refuse to do it without proving that the professed solicitude of the Republican party for the maintenance of the gold standard is arrant hypocrisy. But if there be any wavering I am convinced public opinion will, in case of necessity, compel them to take the necessary steps.

You will thus have to admit, Mr. Secretary, that when you sounded your note of alarm you had overlooked the most important fact, that you and your party friends—that is, the Republican majority in congress, led by the administration of which you form so influential a part—will be able easily and promptly to remedy the defects of the law which you have described as a source of terrible danger, and therefore your note of alarm was, to say the least, a mistaken one. It may suggest itself to you as a matter worthy of grave consideration whether you should not retract what you have said in fairness to the business community, which should not be unnecessarily disquieted, especially not by those in authority. I am sure many of your fellow citizens are anxious to know what you have to say on this aspect of the situation. Very respectfully yours,

C. SCHURZ.

Bolton Landing, Lake George, N. Y., Sept. 1.

The Republicans say we want a 50 cent dollar; they have given us an 85 per cent citizen in Porto Rico. —W. J. Bryan.

Teddy's Unruly Member.

Teddy's throat is naturally a matter of serious concern to the Republicans, for Teddy's tongue is a thing which not even Dr. Hanna himself can control when it once gets to wagging. Teddy is a fine man for a spectacle in a rough riding campaign, but when it comes to talking in public he is as dangerous as dynamite.—Richmond Times.

PEOPLE UNFIT TO GOVERN.

That Is the Hamiltonian Idea, and Mark Hanna Is of a Like Opinion.

Every once in awhile a Republican spellbinder lays aside the cloak of pretense with which the real principles of the Republican party have been covered. When he does so, he says some very startling and alarming things—that is, startling to any one not committed to a runaway policy of imperialism and despotism. William Dudley Foulke, who comes from Indiana, the state in which the administration finds its Neelys, has come out in "scare heads" for the policy of the present administration both abroad and at home. Mr. Foulke swells out his chest and declares in a public speech that the statement found in the Declaration of Independence that "all men are created equal" is not true. The statement that "all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed" is not true and never has been. Sentiments like these are, however, now so frequently used in defense of the administration that they no longer create any sensation, and yet there are some people who say that imperialism is a bogy and that there are no issues involving the very foundation of free government at stake in this campaign.

Those who attempt to decry the stand of the anti-imperialists base their ideas upon the Hamiltonian idea of government, which is this—"that the people are unfit to govern." Such is Mark Hanna's idea, and it is only necessary for the people to sanction that idea to prove the claim.

ROOSEVELT'S FALL.

Surrenders Unconditionally to the Rule of Boss Platt.

At the New York Republican state convention at Saratoga, held on Sept. 4, Mr. Roosevelt surrendered the last vestige of his pretensions to individual honesty and independence. Three months ago his dearest wish was to be the candidate of that convention for governor of New York on a platform indorsing all his acts as governor and asserting all the principles for which his administration stood. Chief among these were resistance to the Ramapo water steal (Boss Platt's), resistance to boss rule (Platt's) and championship of the franchise tax bill (opposed by Platt and all monopoly trusts).

At Saratoga, Sept. 4, Mr. Roosevelt was made to appear in public as the indorser of Platt's candidate. Odell, who has been the chief lobbyist at Albany against the franchise tax for the Ramapo water steal and everlastingly for Boss Platt.

What a fall there was, my countrymen!

> I have determined to do what I believe to be for the best interests of my country. I will try to do my whole duty, and in the performance of that duty I find it necessary not only to oppose the re-election of President McKinley, but to emphasize that position by supporting his antagonist, who, in this election, stands for free government according to the constitution.—Senator Wellington.

The Sorrows of Hanna.

Mark Hanna is fast becoming a man "acquainted with grief." His greatest source of discomfiture is found in the campaign fund, or, rather, in the lack of it. The trusts are acting with some degree of independence this year. Mark Hanna at first went to them and, demanding money, assured them that the election of McKinley was absolutely certain. "Very well," responded the trust magnates; "you have no need of money then." And Hanna went off in a dark room and sat down and thought. After a brief retirement he emerged and, going to the trust magnates, said: "The situation is desperate. We need money and lots of it. We fear defeat." "Ah, is that so?" replied the trust magnates. "In that case we must refuse to place our money upon a losing game." And Hanna again retired to a dark room and sat down and thought.

The attempt to use the injunction of a court to deprive the laboring man of trial by jury should alarm all our people, for, while the wage earner is the first to feel its effects, the principle which underlies government by injunction is so far-reaching that no one can hope to escape ultimately. The thing forbidden by an injunction would without the injunction be either legal or illegal. If it would be legal, the judge usurps the function of the legislature when he forbids it. If it would be illegal, the injunction of the court is unnecessary, for any one who violates the law can, upon conviction, be made to suffer the penalties prescribed for such violation. The meanest thief and the most brutal murderer are entitled to trial by jury; why should this right be denied the laboring man? Those who oppose government by injunction are not in favor of lawlessness. They are, on the contrary, the best friends of law and order.—W. J. Bryan.

Read and Ponder.

What are you going to do with the Philippines, Major McKinley?

"Well, that depends. You see, Providence, destiny, Christian civilization, plain duty, fundamental safeguards, gratitude to England, benevolent assimilation, 16 to 1 and royal Spanish land grants all have to be considered. Wait till after the election, won't you?"

What are you going to do, Mr. Bryan?

"Keep our hands off and allow them to work out their own salvation on the land that God Almighty made for them."—Johnstown Democrat.

McKinleyism Dissected.

Richard Olney's letter sounds like that bugle blast that was worth a thousand men. In dissecting McKinleyism the chocolate eclair backbone was laid bare with a scalpel and not with a sword, as happened when Roosevelt tried his hand at it.

W. J. BRYAN'S ANTI-TRUST SPEECH, DELIVERED AT ST. LOUIS, SEPTEMBER 15, 1900.

The lament of David over Absalom is one of the most pathetic passages of the Old Testament. The fact that the son was in rebellion against civil as well as parental authority did not shake the father's affection, and the anxious query, "Is the young man, Absalom, safe?" lingers in the memory of all who study the life of the great Hebrew King. And, yet, the interest which David felt in his son, Absalom, has its parallel in the more than 10,000,000 families which make up the American people.

No language can describe a mother's love, or overstate the abiding interest which the father feels in the welfare of his child. From the time when the mother's life hangs in the balance at the boy's birth until the death of the parents there is scarcely a waking hour when the son is not present in their thoughts and plans. It is to this parental devotion, so universally recognized, that I desire to appeal on this occasion.

Appeal to Parental Dev

I would call the attention of every father and mother to present political and industrial conditions. I would ask them to analyze these conditions, investigate their causes and their tendencies. I would press upon them this question: "Is the young man, Absalom, safe?" Are you satisfied with the possibilities and the probabilities which now open before your son?

Is he safe when foreign or domestic financiers are allowed to determine the monetary system under which he lives?

Is he safe when national banks control the volume of money with which he does business?

Is he safe when the bond holding class determines the size of the national debt upon which he must help to pay interest?

Is he safe when by means of taxes laid almost entirely upon consumption he is compelled to contribute according to his wants rather than according to his possessions?

Is he safe when corporate interests influence as they do today the selection of those who are to represent him in the Senate of the United States?

If he is a wage-earner, and you do not know how soon he may be, even if he is not now, is he safe when he is liable to be deprived of trial by jury, through the system known as government by injunction?

Is he safe, if a laboring man, when he is denied the protection of arbitration and compelled to submit to such hours and terms as a corporate employer may propose?

The Reign of Monopoly.

But, I desire to call special attention to the growth of the trusts, and to ask you whether your son is safe under the reign of private monopoly? If you cannot leave him a fortune, you can leave him something more valuable than money, viz: the freedom to employ his own brain and his own hands for the advancement of his own welfare. When there is industrial independence, each citizen is stimulated to earnest endeavor by the hope of being able to profit by his own genius, his own energy, his own industry and his own virtue. But when private monopoly reaches its full development each branch of industry will be controlled by one, or a few men, and the fruits of monopoly, like the divine right of rule, will be kept within the possession of a few from generation to generation, while the real producers of wealth will be condemned to perpetual clerkship or servitude. When private monopoly reaches its full development, your son will buy the finished product at the price which monopoly fixes; he will sell raw material at the price which monopoly fixes; and, if he works for wages, he will work for such compensation and upon such conditions as monopoly may determine.

Charles R. Flint of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Co. in a speech delivered in Boston on the 25th of May, 1899, outlined the trust program with great frankness. In speaking of the advantages to be derived from the trust system he said:

Outline of Trust Program.

"Raw material bought in large quantities is secured at lower prices." When, for instance, one man buys all the wool, the price of wool will be lowered and all who produce wool will sell at the price fixed by the trust. A large proportion of our people are engaged in the production of various kinds of raw material, and they are thus placed at the mercy of the combinations.

The second advantage is that "those plants which are best equipped and most advantageously situated are run continuously and in preference to those less favored."

This means that factories can be closed in the smaller towns and business concentrated in the large centers. It means, also, that whenever there is a surplus on hand, part of the factories can be closed, and the burden of maintaining prices thrown upon the wage workers. There are already scattered throughout the land idle plants, which stand as silent monuments to the evils of the trust system.

The next advantage mentioned is that "In case of local strikes and fires, the work goes on elsewhere, thus preventing serious loss."

This means that a monopoly can absolutely control its workingmen, for if a strike occurs in a factory in one state, the factory can be closed down indefinitely while the employes are starved into submission, and, as the trust can do the work in some other factory without serious loss, it is quite independent of the employes, and can absolutely prescribe the terms and conditions upon which they shall live. The more complete the monopoly the more opposed the managers will be to arbitration, because, in case of any contest between the trust and its employes, the trust will have every advantage and the employes will be perfectly powerless.

Another advantage cited by Mr. Flint is that "There is no multiplication of the means of distribution and a better force of salesmen will take the place of a large number."

Drummers Dispensed With.

This is an intimation that under the trust system the traveling salesman will not be needed. When every retail merchant must buy all goods of one class from a single company, the work can be done by samples, and no traveling men will be needed. There will be no competition between different factories because all are under one management. The first man to feel this will be the salesman, who will lose his occupation. The next man to feel it will be the hotel man, who will miss the trade of the traveling salesman. The railroad will lose the mileage paid by the traveling man; the liverymen will lose their best patrons, and the newspapers will lose the advertising, because it will not be necessary to advertise when there is no competition. All this might be tolerable if the saving thus made went to the consumer, but as a matter of fact it goes to the mononoply. My attention has been called to a prospectus issued by the International Steam Pump Company, organized March, 1899, under the laws of New Jersey, and capitalized at $27,500,000, of which nearly half is preferred stock, and the remainder common stock. I call attention to this prospectus, because it sets forth the plans of the trusts, and show who are to be the beneficiaries.

The International Steam Pump Company was organized for the purpose of manufacturing steam pumps, and according to the prospectus, "acquired control of the business of the following corporations, either through the conveyance of the title to the properties, and businesses of such companies, or by the ownership of not less than two-thirds of their stock, as may be found practicable." Then follow the names of five pump companies, accompanied by the statement that these companies are estimated to transact ninety per cent of the steam pump business of the United States, exclusive of high-duty engines. The majority of the companies also manufacture such engines.

Sample Case of Trusts.

One of the companies, taken into the combination had assets estimated at a little more than six million dollars; another company had assets estimated at a little more than three millions; the third company had assets estimated at a little more than one million. The fourth company had assets estimated at eight hundred thousand dollars, and the fifth company had assets estimated at seven hundred thousand dollars. The good will was not estimated in the above figures. The total assets, therefore, of the five companies, not including the good will, were less than twelve million dollars, and the prospectus states that the combined net profits of the five concerns for the year 1898, estimated on the business of ten months of the year, would amount to twelve hundred thousand dollars. Under the head of "Estimated additional earnings from consolidation" I find the following:

"Each of the five companies now maintains agencies in the principal cities of the United States. The Worthington and Blake companies have stores, and carry stock in London, Hamburg, Vienna, and other cities. Some of them have expensive salaried managers. All these agencies in this and other countries will be consolidated. The stores and agencies maintained in the cities of this country, and the forces of clerks, salesmen, etc., necessary to conduct them, will be united and decreased, involving an estimated saving of at least $500,000 a year. The expenses of each company for its draughting department, incident to the elaborate drawings, and specifications for estimating of work, will bring about a further reduction. The standardizing of the patterns for farm and domestic work, which is now under way in the Worthington factory, when applied to the entire business of the new company, will result in an estimated saving of at least $200,000 per year."

And then follows in black type this significant statement:

Advantages of Consolidation.

"A conservative estimate of the advantages derived from consolidation is believed to be $1,300,000 over the present earnings, which would make a total of future net earnings, with the estimated earnings based on ten months of the year's business of $2,500,000, of 6 per cent on the preferred stock, and over eleven per cent on the common stock of the new company."

It will thus be seen from the prospectus that the advantages secured by the cutting down of expenses, will double the income, and not a word is said about giving the advantages of this reduction to the consumer. The money taken from the traveling men, from the hotel keepers, from the railroads, from the liverymen, from the newspapers, and from others who suffer by the discharge of traveling salesmen, clerks, etc., will all be added to the profits of the monopoly. The stock was to be watered, and prices maintained to pay dividends upon fictitious capital.

To give a further guarantee that the monopoly, the prospectus says that the principal men connected with the various companies would become identified with the company and would contract not to engage in a like business for ten years. But what about the public? What guarantee has the public that this monopoly will not raise prices? Is it not human nature to make all the profit possible out of a monopoly? Is it not reasonable to expect that the monopoly, after eliminating the salesmen, and adding their salaries, and expenses to the profit account, will seek a further profit by raising prices, and lowering wages? Is it not reasonable also to expect that there will be deterioration in quality when the spur of competition no longer compels the manufacturer to furnish the best goods for the lowest possible price?

In a little book described as an "Investment Guide" and issued in 1900, by Henry Clews & Co., bankers, I find a list of large corporations, together with a brief description of the business done and advantages secured by consolidation. In some instances an estimate is given of the output of the company as compared with the total product in the United States. Let me call your attention to a few of the corporations organized since the last Presidential election:

Trusts Formed Under McKinley.

The American Agricultural Chemical Company incorporated under the laws of Connecticut, in May, 1899, has an authorized capital of $40,000,000, half common stock, and half preferred. It acquired tweny-two of the largest fertilizing concerns in the country.

The American Bicycle Company, incorporated in May, 1899, in New Jersey, with $20,000,000 of common stock and $10,000,000 preferred, consolidated forty-four of the largest bicycle concerns in the United States.

The American Hide and Leather Company, incorporated in New Jersey in May, 1899, with an authorized capital of $35,000,000, half common stock and half preferred, controls about seveny-five per cent of the upper leather output of the country.

The American Linseed Oil Company, incorporated in New Jersey in December, 1898, with a capital stock of $33,500,000, half common stock and half preferred, consolidated eleven large linseed oil companies, and controls over eighty-five per cent of the linseed oil properties in the United States.

The American Steel Hoop Company, incorporated in New Jersey in April, 1899, consolidated nine large steel and iron companies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, capital stock $19,000,000 common, and $14,000,000 preferred.

The American Ship Building Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with an authorized capital of $30,000,000, half common stock, and half preferred, consolidated "all ship building, and kindred interests on the great lakes."

American Steel and Wire Company, incorporated in New Jersey in January, 1899, with $50,000,000, common stock, and $40,000,000 preferred, controls about eighty per cent of the nail and wire product of the United States.

The American Thread Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1898, with a capital stock of $12,000,000, half common and half preferred, consolidated fourteen large thread companies in New York and New England.

American Tin Plate Company, incorporated in New Jersey in December, 1898, with $30,000,000 common stock, and $20,000,000 preferred, consolidated about ninty-five per cent of the tin plate mills in the United States.

The American Window Glass Company, incorporated in Pennsylvania, September, 1899, with $13,000,000 common stock and $4,000,000 preferred, consolidated window glass plants in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Indiana, controlling about eighty-five per cent of the output of the United States.

American Woolen Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with nearly $30,000,000 common stock and $20,000,000 preferred, consolidated a number of mills in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and other places.

The American Writing Paper Company, incorporated in New Jersey June, 1899, with $25,000,000 capital, half common stock and half preferred, consolidated numerous mills, producing over seventy-six per cent of the output of the United States.

The Continental Tobacco Company, incorporated in New Jersey in November, 1898, with a capital of $100,000,000 half common stock and half preferred, "Acquired all the leading plug tobacco companies in the United States, and also purchased the plug tobacco business of the American Tobacco Company, in whose interest it was formed."

Giant Federal Steel Trusts.

The Federal Steel Company, incorporated in New Jersey in September, 1898, with an authorized capital of $200,000,000 capital, half common stock and half preferred, consolidated the Illinois Steel Company, the Minnesota Iron Company, the Duluth & Iron Range Ry., the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry., and several other companies. It owns five docks on the great lakes, and a majority of the steamers and barges used for transporting ores.

The International Paper Company, incorporated in January, 1898, (state not given) with an authorized capital of $20,000,000 common and $25,000,000 preferred stock, consolidated twenty-five pulp and paper mills, manufacturing about eighty per cent newspaper.

Every newspaper has suffered from the paper trust, the magazine, for instance, published by the Locomotive Firemen's organization, and supported by a fixed appropriation, has been compelled to lessen its reading space because of the rise in the price of paper.

The National Biscuit Company, incorporated in New Jersey in February, 1898, with $30,000,000 common stock and $25,000,000 preferred, consolidated the leading cracker companies, and controls in all one hundred and sixteen plants.

The National Salt Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with $7,000,000 of common stock authorized, and $5,000,000 preferred, produces about ninety-five per cent of the total output of the country.

The National Tube Company, incorporated in New Jersey, in June, 1899, has a capital stock of $80,000,000 half common and half preferred, and controls about ninety per cent of the output of the United States.

The Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company, incorporated in New Jersey in January, 1899, owns practically all the capital stock of the Mechanical Rubber Company, the Peerless Rubber Company and the India Rubber Company, as well as seventy-five per cent of the stock of Morgan & Wright. It also acquired the tire-making plants of the concern known as the American Bicycle Company, and the American Dunlop Tire Company. Authorized capital stock $50,000,000, half common and half preferred.

The Standard Rope & Twine Company, incorporated in New Jersey November 8, 1896, with a capital stock of $12,000,000, consolidated twenty-two large cordage mills.

The Union Bag and Paper Company, incorporated in New Jersey in February, 1899, with $16,000,000 common stock and $11,000,000 preferred, consolidated various plants, doing ninety per cent of the paper bag business of the United States.

United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with an authorized capital of $30,000,000, half common sock and half preferred, consolidated the principal cast iron pipe companies of the United States.

United States Envelope Company, incorporated in Maine in 1898, with an authorized capital of $1,000,000 and $4,000,000 preferred, consolidated ten companies, and controls ninety per cent of the output of commercial envelopes in the United States.

The book mentioned also gives statistics in regard to several trusts organized prior to 1896 among which are the American Cotton Oil Co., the American Sugar Refining Company, the American Tobacco Company, the Diamond Match Company, the National Lead Company, and the Standard Oil Company.

No Hope from Republicans.

During the present administration no honest effort has been made to protect the people from these monopolies. The Republican party controls the executive and the legislative departments of the federal government. It can enforce the laws which now exist; it can propose and enact new laws, but it does neither. No persons can watch the conduct of the Republican party and read the speeches of Republican leaders, and still believe the Republican party sincere in its declarations against the trusts.

The Republican platform on this question and the President's letter of acceptance, taken in connection with the party's record, prove conclusively that no relief can be hoped for from that party. Instead of pointing out the evils of trusts the Republican leaders spend their time in exulting over present conditions. The trust is a part of present conditions, and Mr. Flint, from which I have already quoted, declared that the formation of large corporations was one of the important features of what he described as the present business activity. If Republican leaders really regarded private monopoly as an evil; if they really intended to apply an effective remedy, they would not hesitate to denounce trusts and suggest means for their extermination, but they express far more solicitude for the corporation than for the people at large. One is reminded of the picture which a mother once showed to her boy to impress upon his youthful mind the sufferings of the Christian Martyrs, who were being thrown into the arena and torn to pieces by the lions. The boy looked at the picture for a moment, and then his face brightened up as he thought he caught the idea. Pointing down into one point of the picture, he said, "Why, mamma, there is one poor little lion that isn't getting a bit." It is even so with the Republican leaders. Their sympathy goes out freely to any corporation, which in their opinion is not getting its share, but they are not moved by the hardships imposed by monopolies upon all who are outside of the charmed circle. Three sessions of Congress have convened and adjourned since the President's inauguration, and yet he has never recommended a specific measure looking toward the overthrow of monopolies.

Paper Money Trust.

At the opening of the last session of Congress the Republican leaders pressed through the House and Senate a bill creating a paper money trust and surrendered into the hands of the national banks complete control of the national currency. Just as Congress was closing a farcical and hypocritical attempt was made to deceive the public by the introduction of an anti-trust amendment, and an anti-trust bill. The amendment was not necessary and was intended to deprive the states of the power which they now possess, rather than to confer upon Congress new authority. This vicious amendment was defeated in the House by the Democrats. The Republican leaders then confessed the amendment unnecessary by introducing an anti-trust bill, which was supported by the Democrats, but which died in the Senate, just as it was expected to die. The Republican majority in the Senate referred the bill to the judiciary committee against the protests of the Democrats, who urged its immediate passage. The Republican party draws its contributions from the trusts during the campaign, and pays back its obligations by leaving the people at the mercy of the trusts between campaigns.

Let us note briefly the effect of the trusts upon various classes. Reference has already been made to the commercial traveler, the hotel keeper, the railroad, the liveryman and the newspaper.

The Effect of Trusts.

The lawyers are finding that with the growth of trusts the business is gravitating toward the offices of the big corporation attorneys, while less fortunate practitioners are becoming law clerks.

The actors suffer from the theatrical trust.

The small manufacturer is constantly menaced by the trusts.

He does not know at what moment some large corporation will attempt to monopolize the business in which he is engaged, and give him his choice between bankruptcy and particulation in an industrial conspiracy against the rest of the country. Many have been driven into the trust organization by the larger corporations engaged in the same business, or by trusts formed to control iron, steel, tin plate, or some other product used as a basis for further manufacture. In what business can your son safely invest a small amount of capital today? If he starts into any independent business he will find it difficult, if not impossible, to compete with a large organization if it attempts to undersell him in his territory, because it can sustain itself, by collecting high prices in other parts of the country. If he suppresses his moral objections and takes stock in a monopoly, he does not know how soon those in charge may attempt to "freeze out" the smaller stockholders.

The merchant is losing his independence. The trust fixes the terms upon which he shall sell, and often binds him by contract not to sell a competing article. When the monopoly is complete credit will be shortened, and the merchant will be compelled to bear all the risks of trade. When the trust raises prices, the merchant usually has to divide the advance with his customers, so far as stock on hand is concerned, but when the trust overstocks the market and then lets the price fall, the merchant must bear the loss on accumulated stock. When, for instance, the American Steel & Wire Company closed several of its factories a few months ago and threw some six thousand employes out of work, it dropped the price of nails and barbed wire in order to work off a surplus stock which had accumulated because the high prices had lessened the demand. Every merchant lost money on the nails and wire on hand.

There is already overproduction in many lines. The supply of common chairs is now considerably in excess of the demand, but lest the Republicans may try to explain this upon the theory that the people are too busy to sit down, I may add that there is also dullness in the shoe trade. The Iron Age in a recent issue pointed out that the production of iron was falling off, the decrease then amounting to more than 50,000 tons per month. Dun's report of July 21st stated that the woolen mills were running at less than half their capacity; and even recently the cotton manufacturers have been threatening to either reduce wages or shut down temporarily. According to Dun's report, the business failures have been greater during each month of 1900 than they were during the same months of last year, and this occurs in the midst of good crops, and when two wars are in progress.

Trusts and Arbitrary Fluctuations.

The contractor can figure with some accuracy so long as natural laws control, but he cannot protect himself against the arbitrary fluctuations, which are not only possible but probable when a monopoly controls the market.

The farmer is one of the most important factors in our national life. Some one has said to him, "The hand that guides the plowshare feeds the world." He is not a stockholder in any of the trusts, but he feels the extortion practiced by them all. I am not farming on a large scale, but the misleading reports which have been circulated concerning my oat crop justify me in making reference to my own experience. The New York Tribune recently printed a dispatch from Nebraska to the effect that I had just sold forty-eight hundred bushels of oats at 20 cents per bushel (supposed to be the yield of 120 acres), and that the amount received for the oats was more than double the price paid for the land. The Tribune article then proceeded to dilate upon the prosperity of the farmer, using my experience as an illustration, and asserted that the farmers of Nebraska were becoming so opulent that they were joining the Republican party. The facts are, first: That I had five acres of oats instead of one hundred and twenty acres; second, That the oats have not yet been threshed, so that the yield is not known; third, That oats are selling for less than 22 cents in Chicago, instead of 20 cents in Nebraska, and fourth, That the land upon which the oats were raised cost me over $100 an acre instead of $6. If, when threshed, my oats yield 40 bushels to the acre, and I sell them in Nebraska for 20 cents per bushel, the total income from the five acres will be $40, or less than eight per cent on the investment. After taking out the cost of plowing, sowing, harvesting and threshing, the net income from that five acre tract, will not exceed four per cent on the money invested. I do not mean to judge others by my own experience, but I mention the facts in this case to show how the Republican papers exaggerate the farmers' prosperity, and credit a Republican administration with good crops, making no allowance for the crop failures which occur from time to time.

Decline of Farm Products.

But while on the oat question let me call attention to the statistics given in the Investment guide already referred to. According to Henry Clews & Co., the average prices received by farmers for oats, during the seven years beginning with 1893, and ending with 1899, were as follows: 1893, 29.4; 1894, 32.4; 1895, 19.6; 1896, 18.7; 1897, 21.2; 1898, 25.5; 1899, 21.9. According to these figures oats averaged 25 cents a bushel during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration, and only 24 cents per bushel during the three years of Mr. McKinley's administration—the present year is not yet complete, but oats are at the present time below the average.

According to the same authority the average prices received by the farmers for corn, were as follows: 1893, 36.5; 1894, 45.7; 1895, 26.4; 1896, 21.5; 1897, 26.3; 1898, 28.7; 1899, 30.3, making an average of about 30.5 during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration, and 28.1 during the three years of Mr. McKinley's administration—the fourth year is not yet complete, but corn is at this time above the average.

Wheat, according to the same authority brought to the farmers the following prices: 1893, 53.8; 1894, 49.1; 1895, 50.9; 1896, 72.6; 1897, 80.8; 1898, 58.2; 1899, 58.4, showing a higher average during the last three years than during the four preceding—the fourth year is not complete, but wheat is now above the average.

According to the same authority cotton planters received the following prices: 1893, 6.99; 1894, 4.6; 1895, 7.59; 1896, 6.6; 1897, 5.0; 1898, 4.75; 1899, 7.5, showing a higher average during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration than during the three years of Mr. McKinley's administration—the fourth year is not yet complete, but cotton is now above the average price.

Taking these four staples of agriculture it will be seen that three out of four have not on the average brought as much return to the farmer, under the present administration, as under the previous administration, and the fourth product, wheat, is more influenced than any other farm product by foreign conditions.

Advance in Merchandise.

When, however, the farmer attempts to use his income in the purchase of the necessaries of life he finds that the trusts have raised prices. He must pay more for lumber, nails, wire, harness, hardware, stoves and agricultural implements. More, also for oil, sugar, clothing, furniture, etc., and in addition to these drains upon his income he must meet an increase in federal taxation.

Let the parent calculate how long it will take a farmer to become independent under present conditions; let him contrast the lot of the farmer with the lot of the man who profits by governmental favoritism and grows rich by the exploitation of his countrymen through the instrumentality of monopoly, and then let him answer the question, "Is the young man, Absalom, safe? Has the farmer's son, or the farmer himself any reason for giving support to the Republican party?

Next to the farmer in point of numbers and importance come the wage-earners. What is the trust doing to increase the wages, shorten the hours, improve the condition, or protect the rights of the laboring man? Is his present prospect an inviting one? Is he receiving a fair share of the proceeds of his toil? And, if not, why not? Republicans assert that the working man has a "Full Dinner pail." I ask, in the first place, whether a full dinner pail is all that a laboring man needs? It is an insult to the wage-earner to say that his thoughts are entirely centered upon his physical wants. Republican speakers and editors assume that the laboring man is all stomach. They act upon the theory that he complains only when he is hungry, and is happy whenever his hunger is appeased.

The Full Dinner Pail.

If a full dinner pail were the only thing desired, and if every laboring man had plenty to eat, it would still be necessary for the Republican party to show some connection between Republican policies and the laboring man's food supply. If bountiful crops come to the farmer he does not thank a Republican administration. If a famine abroad raises the price of farm products here the farmer does not thank the Republican party for bringing the famine. If an unexpected and an unpromised increase in the gold supply gives any respite from financial stringency can the Republican party claim credit? The question is not whether the laboring man is able to exist under present conditions, but whether he is enjoying his share of the blessings of the country and of the protection of the government. Compare the laboring man with the trust magnate, and see which fares the best at the hands of the Republican party. Enquire also whether the laboring man's income has increased as rapidly as his living expenses.

But even if every laboring man was prosperous, and even if that prosperity could be traced to Republican legislation, still the laboring man is a citizen, and must look at political questions from the citizen's standpoint. He cannot afford to barter away future security; he cannot afford to sleep while his industrial independence is being destroyed. Neither can he be enticed into an imperialistic trap, no matter how well the trap may be baited with food.

During the last campaign laboring men were threatened with idleness by employers who desired to coerce them into the support of the Republican ticket. Many of them were told not to return to work unless the Republicans were successful at the polls. After the election some of these employers closed down their shops and others reduced wages. If advances have been made in any branch of industry since 1896 remember that some advance was necessary to compensate for the reductions which occurred after the last election.

Coercion in 1896.

A firm in the City of Washington announced shortly before the election in 1896 that it would not be able to continue in business if I was elected. It went into bankruptcy immediately after election notwithstanding the fact that its candidate was successful at the polls. There are indications that this attempt at intimidation may be resorted to again this fall. If a business man feels justified in holding out the prospect of his own bankruptcy in order to influence voters he cannot complain if his creditors take steps to collect their accounts before the election in order to avoid a possible loss.

The Chicago-Times Herald of September 8 contained a special dispatch from Indianapolis setting forth the complaint made by the anthracite coal miners. In the dispatch I read the following statement made by one of the miners: "It is merely a question whether the men would starve to death at work or starve in idleness." The dispatch also contains the following figures in regard to wages, said to have been furnished by a member of the national board of the United Mine Workers of America, viz: "Average daily wages received by miners, $1.35; average wage of day men at mines, 90 cents." And in the statement to the public giving his reasons for calling out the miners, President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers says: "The average wages of the anthracite miners for many years has been less than $250 annually." Let the parent calculate the annual income of a miner, and figure out, if he can, how the miner is going to keep himself, and support his family under present conditions; and then let the parent ask himself whether he is willing to have his son take his chances with the miners. Is it due to natural or to human laws that the producer of wealth fares so poorly, while the man at the head of a monopoly secures so much.

All Monopolies Are Bad.

Those who attempt to divide private monopolies into good monopolies and bad monopolies will never make any progress toward the overthrow of the trusts. There is no good monopoly in private hands; there never was, and never will be. With all the advancement in civilization man is still too selfish to be trusted with the absolute control with that which his fellows must have. The Republican party has no remedy for the trusts. Publicity is good, but publicity alone is not sufficient. The practices of the trusts must not only be made known, they must be prevented. The Democratic platform contains a demand for legislation which will place trust made articles on the free list. There is no doubt that such a law would protect the people from much of the extortion which is practiced under cover of high tariff laws. If a tariff duty excludes the foreign product, while domestic manufacturers combine to raise the price of home product, the American citizen may be plundered here, while the trust sells abroad in competition with the world. It may not be out of place to suggest that I introduced a bill eight years ago providing for this remedy, but we are not willing to stop at one remedy, we desire to apply every remedy within the power of the state and federal governments. Congressional action is not necessary to destroy a trust which confines its operations to a single city, or a single state. Such a trust can be exterminated by state legislation. It is within the power of the state to prescribe the conditions upon which corporations shall be organized, and these conditions should be such as to make a private monopoly place limitations upon outside corporations doing business within the state. This, however, is not sufficient. Congress must co-operate with the state in preventing the organization of any inter-state monopoly. Without impairing the present authority of the state, Congress can provide that corporations organized in any state shall not do business outside of the state until certain necessary conditions are complied with. If the people of any state are willing to create and continue a monopoly, the people of other states need feel no concern, so long as the monopoly is confined to the state in which the corporation originates. But the moment a monopoly crosses the state line and invades other states, Congress has a right to, and must, interfere for the protection of the public at large. If a corporation organized in New Jersey, or any other state, were prohibited from engaging in inter-state commerce until it produced evidence to show that there was no water in its stock, and that it had not attempted, and was not attempting to monopolize any branch of industry, its power to do harm would at once be destroyed. An honest corporation engaged in legitimate business, ought to join in the enactment of laws, which will protect them and the public from the industrial highwaymen who commit larceny upon a grand scale. Those who desire the annihilation of the trusts are not hostile to property rights, but they protest against allowing the fictitious person, created by law and called a corporation, to trample upon the rights of the natural man of flesh and blood. If the man-made corporation supports the Republican party, we ought to be able to appeal for support to the God-made man.

As to Railroad Discriminations.

The railroads have by discriminations and rebates materially aided in building up monopolies. At one time the Standard Oil Company had a contract with a railroad whereby it not only enjoyed lower rates than its competitors, but received a part of the freight paid by its competitors. The inter-state commerce commission has repeatedly asked for legislation which would empower the commission to protect the public, but the Republican party has turned a deaf ear to these appeals.

It is generally assumed that the bankers will co-operate with the trusts in preventing remedial legislation, but the banker himself is apt to fall a victim of this policy of concentration. Some are already urging the establishment of branch banks, and when the branch bank is established it will be able to run all the other banks out of business. Even now the association of several great financial institutions in New York, under the influence of one group of financiers, is embarrassing other and smaller banks.

But why muultiply illustrations of the evil of monopoly? No matter how tempting the present advantage; no matter how alluring the immediate prospect every citizen will find it to his permanent advantage to aid in the overthrow of the monopolistic principle, and in the re-establishment of the industrial system upon a basis of justice. Give the boy a chance, and let success be the reward of merit.

The attempt of the Republican party to largely increase our military establishment suggests another inquiry: Is your son safe when new ideals are substituted for the ideals cherished during the past century, and when the doctrine of force is accepted as an American doctrine. Up to this time we have encouraged science and the arts; we have proclaimed the advantages of peace, and have preached the gospel of love. What will be the effect upon the character of future generations if we encourage the professional soldier at the expense of the civilian, and teach the creed that might can create right.

Dangers of Militarism.

Is your son safe when a large military establishment is being built up to protect syndicates organized to develop distant lands? When Mr. McKinley was inaugurated there were only 25,000 soldiers in the regular army. In December, 1898, the President recommended that the standing army be increased to 100,000 men. A Republican House of Representatives, prompt to do his bidding, passed a bill—and this was done after the treaty of peace was signed and before hostilities broke out in Manila. Why did we need such an army? Possibly the prospectus issued by the Philippine Lumber and Development Company will explain. The company has an office in the Merchants' Loan & Trust building, 135 Adams street, Chicago. The prospectus says, "Negotiations are pending for timber rights, and some valuable timber rights have already been secured, and negotiations for others are rapidly approaching completion. No other company can compete with this one in getting a first foothold in the islands, and for several years at least this company will be ahead of all competitors." It also quotes from an article in the American Lumberman in which appears the following: "Unlike most tropical countries the labor problem is easily solved by the Chinese labor, which is plentiful and fairly good." The capitalist may see an advantage in militarism and imperialism, but where is the laboring man's share? He will furnish sons for the army and will help to pay the expenses of war, but he has no part on the profits. As some one has expressed it his lot is to "Die for the dividends of Dives."

Is your son safe when the doctrine of equality before the law is repudiated, and when the arguments which have ever been used in support of kingcraft are called into justify taxation without representation, and government without the consent of the governed. Many have given their support to an imperialistic policy without fully realizing what imperialism means. Mr. Gompers, President of the Federation of Labor, in his report made to the organization last December, warns the laboring man to beware of the dangers of imperialism and says: "But beneath it all there is the purpose of those who have lost faith in the principles of our republic, those who have no confidence in, or reliance upon the honor, honesty and stability of our people and our form of government, and who aim to erect a throne of despotism upon the tomb of freedom, whose initiatory step is a large standing army, and who, with militarism rampant, hope to crush out the memory of, and the aspiration for, true liberty and freedom for all our people."

Appeal to Freemen.

Whether this nation shall be looked upon as a Lafayette, aiding others to obtain their freedom and enjoying their gratitude, or as a Lord Clive, fastening a hateful sovereignty upon a weaker people and receiving hatred in return, is a question which you must help to decide. Let me borrow a story which has already been applied to the present situation. A man passed along a street of a great city, unmindful of the merchandise piled on either side; he sought out a bird store, and purchasing a number of birds opened their cages and allowed them to fly away. When asked why he thus wasted his money he replied: "I was once a captive myself, and it gives me joy to be the means of setting any captive free."

This nation has been a liberator. It first secured the freedom of its own people, and from that day on has furnished the example which has lead to the overthrow of monachical rule in many nations. Let it not falter now. It is probable that the $20,000,000 paid to Spain can be secured from the Filipinos, but even if it cannot, it is better to consider that sum as a contribution to be spread on the doctrine of self-government than to regard it as part payment upon the purchase price of people or their lands. Citizens, countrymen, you stand by the side of the cage: you cannot avoid responsibility: will you open the door or shut it?

SUPPLEMENT TO ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR, ST. HILAIRE, MINN., SEPT. 26, 1900.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE

Gentlemen:—In accepting the nomination tendered by you on behalf of the Democratic party, I beg to assure you of my appreciation of the great honor conferred upon me by the delegates in convention assembled, and by the voters who gave instruction to the delegates.

I am sensible of the responsibilities which rest upon the chief magistrate of so great a nation, and realize the far-reaching effect of the questions involved in the present contest.

In my letter of acceptance of 1896, I made the following pledge:

"So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the Constitution in the chief executive of the nation and with the enormous influence which he can yield for the benefit or injury of the people, that I wish to enter the office, if elected, free from any personal desire, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my countrymen. Human judgment is fallible enough when unbiased by selfish considerations, and, in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of the office to advance any personal ambition, I hereby announce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for re-election, in case this campaign results in my election."

Further reflection and observation constrain me to renew this pledge.

The platform adopted at Kansas City commands my cordial and unqualified approval. It courageously meets the issues now before the country, and states clearly and without ambiguity the party's position on every question considered. Adopted by a convention which assembled on the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, it breathes the spirit of candor, independence and patriotism which characterizes those who, at Philadelphia in 1776, promulgated the creed of the Republic.

Having in my notification speech, discussed somewhat at length the paramount issue, imperialism, and added some observations on militarism and the Boer war, it is sufficient at this time to review the remaining planks of the platform.

Trusts.

The platform very properly gives prominence to the trust question. The appalling growth of combinations in restraint of trade during the present administration, proves conclusively that the Republican party lacks either the desire or the ability to deal with the question effectively. If as may be fairly assumed from the speeches and conduct of the Republican leaders, that party does not intend to take the people's side against these organizations, then the weak and qualified condemnation of trusts to be found in the Republican platform is designed to distract attention while industrial despotism is completing its work. A private monopoly has always been an outlaw. No defense can be made of an industrial system in which one, or a few men, can control for their own profit, the output or price of any article of merchandise. Under such a system the consumer suffers extortion, the producer of raw material has but one purchaser, and must sell at the arbitrary price fixed; the laborer has but one employer, and is powerless to protest against injustice, either in wages or in conditions of labor; the small stockholder is at the mercy of the speculator; while the traveling salesman contributes his salary to the overgrown profits of the trust. Since but a small proportion of the people can share in the advantages secured by private monopoly, it follows that the remainder of the people are not only excluded from the benefits, but are the helpless victims of every monopoly organized. It is difficult to overestimate the immediate injustice that may be done, or to calculate the ultimate effect of this injustice upon the social and political welfare of the people. Our platform, after suggesting certain specific remedies; pledges the party to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in nation, state and city. I heartily approve of this promise; if elected, it shall be my earnest and constant endeavor to fulfill the promise in letter and spirit. I shall select an attorney-general who will, without fear or favor, enforce existing laws; I shall recommend such additional legislation as may be necessary to dissolve every private monopoly which does business outside of the state of its origin; and, if contrary to my belief and hope, a constitutional amendment is found to be necessary, I shall recommend such an amendment as will, without impairing any of the existing rights of the states, empower Congress to protect the people of all the states from injury at the hands of individuals or corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

The platform accurately describes the Dingley tariff law, when it condemns it as a "trust breeding measure, skilfully devised to give to the few favors which they do not deserve, and to place upon the many burdens which they should not bear." Under its operation trusts can plunder the people of the United States, while they successfully compete in foreign markets with manufacturers of other countries. Even those who justify the general policy of protection will find it difficult to defend a tariff which enables a trust to exact an exorbitant toll from the citizen.

Corporations in Politics.

The Democratic party makes no war upon honestly acquired wealth; neither does it seek to embarrass corporations engaged in legitimate business, but it does protest against corporations entering politics, and attempting to assume control of the instrumentalities of government. A corporation is not organized for political purposes, and should be compelled to confine itself to the business described in its charter. Honest corporations, engaged in an honest business, will find it to their advantage to aid in the enactment of such legislation as will protect them from the undeserved odium which will be brought upon them by those corporations which enter the political arena.

Interstate Commerce.

The Republican party has persistently refused to comply with the urgent request of the Interstate Commerce commission, for such an enlargement of the scope of the interstate commerce law as will enable the commission to realize the hopes aroused by its creation. The Democratic party is pledged to legislation which will empower the commission to protect individuals and communities from discrimination, and the public at large from unjust and unfair transportation rates.

The Financial Plank.

The platform reiterates the demand contained in the Chicago platform for an American financial system made by the American people for themselves. The purpose of such a system is to restore and maintain a bimetallic level of prices, and in order that there may be no uncertainty as to the method of restoring bimetallism, the specific declaration in favor of free and unlimited coinage at the existing ratio of 16 to 1, independent of the action of other nations, is repeated. In 1896 the Republican party recognized the necessity for bimetallism by pledging the party to an earnest effort to secure an international agreement for the free coinage of silver, and the president, immediately after his inauguration, by authority of congress, appointed a commission composed of distinguished citizens to visit Europe and solicit foreign aid. Secretary Hay, in a letter written to Lord Aldenham in November, 1898, and afterwards published in England, declared that at that time the president and a majority of his cabinet still believed in the great desirability of an international agreement for the restoration of the double standard, but that it did not seem opportune to re-open the negotiations just then. The financial law enacated less than a year ago contains a concluding section declaring that the measure was not intended to stand in the way of the restoration of bimetallism, whenever it could be done by co-operation with other nations. The platform submitted to the last Republican convention with the indorsement of the administration again suggested the possibility of securing foreign aid in restoring silver.

Now the Republican party, for the first time, openly abandons its advocacy of the double standard, and indorses the monetary system which it has so often and so emphatically condemned. The Democratic party, on the contrary, remains the steadfast advocate of the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, and is not willing that other nations shall determine for us the time and manner of restoring silver to its ancient place as a standard money. The ratio of 16 to 1 is not only the ratio now existing between all the gold and silver dollars in circulation in this country, a ratio which even the Republican administration has not attempted to change, but it is the only ratio advocated by those who are seeking to re-open the mints. Whether the senate, now hostile to bimetallism, can be changed during this campaign or the campaign of 1902 can only be determined after the votes are counted, but neither the present nor the future political complexion of congress has prevented or should prevent an announcement of the party's position upon this subject in unequivocal terms.

The currency bill, which received the sanction of the Executive and the Republican members of the House and Senate, justifies the warning given by the Democratic party in 1896. It was then predicted that the Republican party would attempt to retire the greenbacks although the party and its leaders studiously concealed their intentions. That purpose is now plain and the people must choose between the retention of the greenbacks, issued and controlled in volume by the government, and a national bank note currency issued by banks and controlled in their own interests. If the national bank notes are to be secured by bonds, the currency system now supported by the Republican party involves a permanent and increasing debt, and, so long as this system stands, the financial classes will be tempted to throw their powerful influence upon the side of any measure which will contribute to the size and permanency of a national debt. It is hardly conceivable that the American people will deliberately turn from the debt-paying policy of the past, to the dangerous doctrine of perpetual bonds.

Election of Senators by the People.

The demand for a constitutional amendment providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people, appears for the first time in a Democratic National platform, but a resolution proposing such an amendment, has three times passed the House of Representatives, and that, too, practically without opposition. Whatever may have been the reasons which secured the adoption of the present plan, a century ago, new conditions have made it imperative that the people be permitted to speak directly in the selection of their representatives in the Senate. A Senator is no less the representative of the State because he receives his commission from the people themselves, rather than from the members of the State legislature. If a voter is competent to vote for a member of Congress, for State officers and for President, he is competent to choose his representative in the Senate. A system which makes the Senator responsible for his election to the people, as a whole, and amenable to them if he misrepresents them, must commend itself to those who have confidence in the intelligence, and patriotism of the masses.

Direct Legislation.

The platform indorses the principle of direct legislation. This is already applied to the more important questions in nation, state and city. It rests upon the sound theory that the people can be trusted, and that the more responsive the government is to the will of the people, the more free it will be from misuse and abuse.

Labor Question.

Several planks of the labor platform are devoted to questions in which the laboring classes have an immediate interest, but which more remotely effect our entire population. While what is generally known as government by injunction is at present directed chiefly against the employes of corporations, when there is a disagreement between them and their employer, it involves a principle which concerns every one. The purpose of the injunction in such cases is to substitute trial by judge for trial by jury, and is a covert blow at the jury system. The abolition of government by injunction is as necessary for the protection of the reputation of the court, as it is for the security of the citizen. Blackstone in defending trial by jury, says:

"The impartial administration of justice, which secures both our persons, and our properties is the great end of civil society, but if that be entrusted entirely to the magistracy, a select body of men, and those selected by the prince such as enjoy the highest offices of the state their decisions in spite of their natural integrity, will have frequently an involuntary bias toward those of their own rank, and dignity. It is not to be expected from human nature that the few should be always attentive to the interests and good of the many."

If the criminal laws are not sufficient for the protection of property, they can be made more severe, but a citizen charged with crime must have his case tried before a jury of his peers.

The Blacklist.

The blacklist as now employed in some places enables the employer to place the employe under practical duress, for the skilled laborer loses his independence when the employers can not only discharge him, but prevent his securing any similar employment. The blacklist enables employers to secure, by mutual agreement, that control over the wage earners which a private monopoly exercises without contract.

Arbitration.

The platform renews the demand for arbitration between corporations and their employes. No one who has observed the friction which arises between great corporations and their numerous employes can doubt the wisdom of establishing an impartial court for the just and equitable settlement of disputes. The demand for arbitration ought to be supported as heartily by the public, which suffers inconvenience because of strikes and lockouts, and by the employers themselves, as by the employes. The establishment of arbitration will insure friendly relations between labor and capital, and render obsolete the growing practice of calling in the army to settle labor troubles.

Department of Labor.

I cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of the platform recommendation of the establishment of a department of labor, with a member of the cabinet at its head. When we remember how important a position the laborer fills in our economic, social and political fabric, it is hard to conceive of a valid objection being made to this recognition of his services. Agriculture is already represented in the president's official household; the army and navy have their representatives there; the state department, with its consular service, and the treasury department, with its close connection with fiscal affairs, keep the executive in touch with the business and commercial interests. A cabinet officer truly representative of the wage earning class would be of invaluable aid, not only to the toilers, but to the president.

Chinese Exclusion.

The Chinese exclusion act has proven an advantage to the country, and its continuance and strict enforcement, as well as its extension to other similar races, are imperatively necessary. The Asiatic is so essentially different from the American that he cannot be assimilated with our population, and is, therefore, not desirable as a permanent citizen. His presence as a temporary laborer, preserving his national identity, and maintaining a foreign scale of wages and living, must ever prove an injustice to American producers, as well as a perpetual source of irritation.

Pensions.

The party expresses its pride in the soldiers and sailors of all our wars, and declares its purpose to deal generously with them and their dependents. A liberal policy is natural and necessary in a government which depends upon a citizen soldiery, instead of a large standing army. Self-interest, as well as gratitude, compels the government to make bountiful provision for those who, in the hour of danger, and at great sacrifice of business, health and life, tender their services to their country.

The pension laws should be construed according to the generous spirit which prompted their passage. The platform very properly reiterates the position taken in 1896, that the fact of enlistment shall be deemed conclusive evidence that the soldier was sound when the government accepted him. A certificate given now to the health of a person 40 years ago, even if easily obtainable, should not have as much weight as the certificate of the medical officer who examined the volunteer with a view of ascertaining his fitness for army service.

Nicaragua.

The Democratic party is in favor of the immediate construction, ownership and control of the Nicaragua canal by the United States. The failure of the Republican party to make any progress in carrying out a pledge contained in its platform four years ago, together with the substitution in its latest platform of a plank favoring an isthmian canal for a specific declaration in favor of the Nicaraguan canal, would indicate that the Republican leaders either do not appreciate the importance of this great waterway to the maritime strength and commercial interests of the country, or that they give too much consideration to the interested opposition of transcontinental lines. The Hays-Pauncefote treaty, now before the senate, would, if ratified, greatly lessen the value of the canal, if it would not indeed convert it into a positive menace in time of war. The paramount interests of the United States in the western hemisphere, together with the obligations to defend the republics to the south of us, makes it necessary that our government shall be able to close the canal against any hostile power.

Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma have long been ready to assume the responsibilities and enjoy the privileges of statehood, and it will be a pleasure, as well as a duty, to carry out the platform pledge concerning them.

Alaska and Porto Rico.

There will be a popular acquiescence in the demand for home rule, and a territorial form of government in Alaska and Porto Rico. Both are entitled to local self-government and representation in Congress.

Cuba.

The recognition contained in both the Democratic and Republican platforms of the right of the Cubans to independence, removes the general principle involved from the domain of partisan politics. It is proper, however, to consider whether the accomplishment of this purpose can be safely entrusted to the Republican party after it has yielded to the allurements of the Colonial idea, and abandoned its earlier faith in the natural and inalienable rights of man.

Reclamation of Arid Lands.

The time is ripe for a systematic and extended effort to reclaim the arid lands and fit them for actual settlers. The last agricultural report estimates that homes can thus be provided for many millions of people. The impounding and use of the waters which are wasted in the spring would people the western states with thrifty, intelligent, and industrious citizens, and these would furnish a valuable market for all the products of the factories. A small percentage of the money spent in a war of conquest would provide occupation and habitation for more people than would ever seek a residence in colonies within the tropics.

Foreign Alliances.

The reasons given by Washington, Jefferson, and the other statesmen of the early days in support of the doctrine that we should maintain friendly relations with all nations, but enter into entangling alliances with none, are even stronger to-day than they were a hundred years ago. Our commerce is rapidly increasing, and we are brought into constant communication with all parts of the world. Even if we desired to do so, we could not afford to alienate many nations by cultivating unnecessary intimacy with a few. Our strength and standing are such that it is less necessary than ever before to lean for aid upon the friendliness of a foreign power.

We cannot connect ourselves with European nations, and share in their jealousies and ambitions without losing the peculiar advantage, which our location, our character and our institutions give us in the world's affairs.

Monroe Doctrine.

The doctrine enunciated by Monroe, and approved by succeeding presidents, is essential to the welfare of the United States. The continents of North and South America are dedicated to the development of free government. One republic after another has been established, until to-day monarchial idea has barely a foothold in the new world.

While it is not the policy of this country to interfere where amicable relations exist between European countries and their dependencies in America, our people would look with disfavor upon any attempt on the part of European governments to maintain an unwilling or forcible sovereignty over the people living on this side of the Atlantic.

The position taken by the Republican leaders, and more recently set forth by the Republican candidate for the Presidency, viz: That we cannot protect a nation from outside interference without exercising sovereignty over its people, is an assault upon the Monroe doctrine, for while this argument is at this time directed against the proposition to give to the Filipinos both independence and protection, it is equally applicable to the Republics of Central and South America. If this government cannot lend its strength to another Republic without making subjects of its people, then we must either withdraw our protection from the Republics to the south of us or absorb them. Under the same plea, that the guardian nation must exert an authority equal to its responsibility, European nations have for centuries exploited their wards, and it is a significant fact that the Republican party should accept the European idea of a protectorate, at the same time that it adopts a European colonial policy. There is no excuse for this abandonment of the American idea. We have maintained the Monroe doctrine for three-quarters of a century. The expense to us has been practically nothing, but the protection has been beyond value to our sister Republics. If a Filipino Republic is erected upon the ruins of Spanish tyranny, its protection by us will be neither difficult nor expensive. No European nation would be willing for any other European nation to have the islands, neither would any European nation be willing to provoke a war with us in order to obtain possession of the islands. If we assert sovereignty over the Filipinos we will have to defend that sovereignty by force, and the Filipinos will be our enemies; if we protect them from outside interference, they will defend themselves and will be our friends. If they show as much determination in opposing the sovereignty of other nations as they have shown in opposing our sovereignty, they will not require much assistance from us.

Extravagance.

The Republican party, drawing as it does enormous campaign funds from those who enjoy special privileges at the hands of the government, is powerless to protect the tax payers from the attack of those who profit by large appropriations. A surplus in the treasury offers constant temptation to extravagance, and extravagance, in turn, compels a resort to new means of taxation, which, is being kept in the background until the campaign is over, is a fair illustration of the imposition which will be attempted when there is a considerable amount of money idle in the treasury. The rehabilitation of the merchant marine, laudable in itself, is made the pretext for expenditure of public money for the benefit of large ship owners, and in the interests of a transportation monopoly. The government being only the agent of the people, has no right to collect from the people taxes beyond the legitimate needs of a government honestly and effectively administered, and public servants should exercise the same degree of care in the use of the people's money that private individuals do in the use of their own money. With a restoration of a foreign policy consistent with American ideas there can be an immediate and large reduction in the burdens now borne by the people.

Income Tax.

By inadvertence the Income Tax plank agreed upon by the Resolutions committee, was omitted from the platform as read and adopted. The subject, however, is covered by the reaffirmation of the Chicago platform, and I take this occasion to reassert my belief in the principle which underlies the income tax. Congress should have authority to levy and collect an income tax whenever necessary, and an amendment to the federal constitution specifically conferring such authority ought to be supported by even those who may think the tax unnecessary at this time. In the hour of danger the government can draft the citizen; it ought to be able to draft the pocketbook as well. Unless money is more precious than blood, we cannot afford to give greater protection to the incomes of the rich than to the lives of the poor.

Imperialism.

The subjects, however, treated in this letter, important as each may seem in itself, do not press so imperatively for solution as the question which the platform declares to be the paramount issue in this campaign. Whether we shall adhere to, or abandon those ideas of government which have distinguished this nation from other nations and given to its history its peculiar charm and value, is a question the settlement of which cannot be delayed. No other question can approach it in importance; no other question demands such immediate consideration. It is easier to lose a reputation than to establish one, and this nation would find it a long and laborious task to regain its proud position among the nations, if, under the stress of temptation, it should repudiate the self-evident truths proclaimed by our heroic ancestors and sacredly treasured during a career unparalleled in the annals of time. When the doctrine that the people are the only source of power is made secure from further attack we can safely proceed to the settlement of the numerous questions which involve the domestic and economic welfare of our citizens.

Very truly yours,
W. J. BRYAN.

Sayings of Lincoln

Following are taken from a recently published work, edited by Dr. H. S. Taylor and D. M. Fulwiler, entitled "Lincoln's Words on Living Issues." Trusty Publishing Co., 418 Roanoke building, Chicago.

Letter to H. L. Pierce, April 6, 1859, —Irelan 16—263. All honor to Jefferson—to the man who, in the concrete pressure of a struggle for national independence by a single people, had the coolness, forecast and capacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document an abstract truth, applicable to all men and all times, and so to embalm it there that today, and in all coming days, it shall be a rebuke and a stumbling block to the very harbingers of reappearing tyranny and oppression.

(March 4, 1865, Second Inaugural—Hapgood, p. 403.) It may seem strange that any men should dare to ask a just God's assistance in wringing bread from the sweat of other men's faces.

(August 26, 1863, Letter to James C. Conkling—Herndon, p. 555.) For the great republic—for the principle it lives by and keeps alive—for man's vast future—thanks to all.

(September 30, 1859, Speech at Milwaukee, Wis.—Complete Works, Vol. I, p. 577.) Farmers being the most numerous class, it follows that their interest is the largest interest. It also follows that that interest is most worthy of all to be cherished and cultivated—that if there be inevitable conflict between that interest and any other, that other should yield.

(July 5, 1861, Annual Message—Raymond, p. 186.) This relative matter of National power and state rights, as a principle, is no other than the principle of generality and locality. Whatever concerns the whole should be confided to the whole—to the general government; while whatever concerns only the state should be left exclusively to the state.

July 16, 1852, Speech at Springfield, Ill.—Complete Works, I, p. 171.) A free people in times of peace and quiet—when pressed by no common danger—naturally divide into parties. At such times the man who is of neither party is not, cannot be of any consequence.

(September 17, 1859, Speech at Cincinnati, O.—Debates, p. 268.) The people of the United States are the rightful masters of both congresses and courts, not to overthrow the Constitution, but to overthrow the men who pervert the Constitution.

(October 16, 1854, Speech at Peoria, Ill.—Howells, p. 279.) Well I doubt not that the people of Nebraska are and will continue to be as good as the average of people elsewhere. I do not say the contrary. What I do say is that no man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent. I say this is the leading principle.

(March 4, 1861, First Inaugural—Raymond, p. 167.) I do not forget the position assumed by some, that constitutional questions are to be decided by the superior court. * * * At the same time the candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the government, upon vital questions affecting the whole people, is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the supreme court, the instant they are made in ordinary litigation, between parties in personal actions, the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their government into the hands of that eminent tribunal.

(May 17, 1859, Letter to Dr. Theodore Canisius concerning law of naturalization, etc.—Howells, p. 85.) As I understand the spirit of our institutions, it is designed to promote the elevation of men. I am therefore hostile to anything that tends to their debasement.

(February 12, 1861, Speech at Cincinnati, O. Complete Works, Vol. I, p. 676.) The workingmen are the basis of all governments for the plain reason that they are the more numerous.

Daly Was Here.

Are the populists and democrats all dead? Well, it does not look that way! The Daly meetings here Friday Sept. 21st were a great success from every standpoint. There was enthusiasm on all sides from start to finish. They were the most enthusiastic meetings held here for years and the populist and democratic camp fires in Red Lake county are now burning full blaze. Hon. M. J. Daly candidate for congress in the seventh district is a powerful speaker and held his audience from start to finish and was frequently applauded by those who were not too narrow minded to appreciate a joke, we regret that the hall was not larger as only about half of those seeking admittance were accomodated. Mr. Daly did not evade the issue of this campaign by flaunting the bloody rag of the rebellion in the face of his audience as the republican orators do but found material enough in the last republican administration to speak about which he demonstrated in an undisputable manner. The senator is a genial good hearted fellow who makes friends from all parties whereever he goes so we predict that when the ballots are counted on Nov. 6th St. Hilaire will roll up a majority for him that will surprise the natives.

William McKinley, the syndicated president by the grace of Mark Hanna says that "the Republican party doesn't have to assert its devotion to the Declaration of Independence." If it did assert its devotion, nobody of good sense would believe in its sincerity. Actions speak louder than words.

The Democratic legislative convention met in St. Hilaire Monday and on the first ballot nominated James Meehan, Jr., of Thief River Falls. It was a harmonious meeting from beginning to end, and we advise you all to take no stock in what a person says when he tells you the Democrats are all dead.

Our losses in the Philippines have now passed the 5,000 mark. The total deaths among our soldiers since August 6, 1898, were 2,678 and wounded 2,356—5,034 in all. This with the money expenditure of nearly $200,000,000 makes Mr. McKinley's Asiatic adventure a very costly one for the American people.

The very best curfew ordinance is that adopted in the family where the old man acts as mayor, city council, night watch and calaboose keeper and where fine and punishment go together and the hickory gad may be used occasionally and fines are not suspended, but promptly executed where they do not bother as much about passing a lot of orninances as they do enforcing those already on record.

Gossip has made many a home a hell on earth; gossip has blackened and sullied the reputation of many. Gossip has parted lovers who would have been very happy if it had not been for gossip. One little misstep or one little indiscretion will cause gossip to arise with new strength and start on its mission. Don't Gossip. A gossiper is about the lowest and meanest thing on earth. Gossip has but one limit—it cannot sully any one's character.—Ex.

Somebody very aptly rises to remark what a howl would go up if the newspapers were to criticize the individuals as freely as many people criticize the newspapers. Every issue of a live and reputable paper is a mantle of charity, and the matter left out—truth, not gossip for dames,—would often more than equal the matter published. If an editor should get out some time a cold feet edition and get up a tree and watch the results—whew! What a panic there would be.—Ex.

This paper is for Billy Bryan and it doesn't have to be greased to run like some policy sheets that just now appear in our mind's eye. Every paper in this state which is for Bryan and the Constitution should come out unequivocally and let the people know where they stand. If the papers are half-hearted and cowardly the people will be the same. If you are for Bryan and the republic, just rear up on your pastern joints and say so. God Almighty must despise a wabbling policy truckling political huckster who goes about trying to back water on both shoulders with sweet wind for everybody, says the Oregon Independent.

Special Trains and Half Fare on All Lines Including St. Hilaire Line.

A. R. Holston returned Thursday morning from St. Paul, whither he went to perfect arrangements for special trains and rates for the Bryan meeting on Saturday, Sept. 29. He informs the Press that all the roads running into Crookston have made a rate of one fare for the round trip, for that day, and that special trains will be run as follows:

On the N. P., from Ulen to Crookston, arriving at 2 p. m.

On the Moorhead Northern, from all points on the line, arriving at 2 p. m.

On the St. Vincent line, arriving from the north at 2:15 p. m.

On the Red Lake Falls line, arriving at 2:30 p. m.

While in St. Paul, Mr. Holston also induced Gov. Lind and P. M. Ringdal to cancel previously arranged dates and come to Crookston on the 29th, and they will both be heard from the platform in the afternoon.

M. J. Daly has also signified his intention of being with us, and will probably speak.

The Dinner Pail Plea.

The full dinner pail plea is the most nonsensical one the opposition has thus far set forth. They simply demand that the voters give them the officers or their living will be taken away, as if such a thing were possible. The beasts of the field have their meals; the horse enjoys his oats and grass; the cow her chop feed; the pig his swill; the birds that fly and the reptiles that creep have their living—man wants more. He is not satisfied with a bare subsistence on dinner pail "grub." An attempt is being made in certain quarters to use the matter of the opening of the west end of the Red Lake reservation as political capital. If the matter was at all available for that purpose, it would be a hard one on Mr. Eddy and not, as a local paper seems to think, a feather in his cap. Mr. Eddy, while here, did not enthusiastically indorse the project, as has been stated, in fact, he rather deprecated the whole affair. He refused to promise his support and stated that he had made such a promise with regard to the free homestead bill and it had caused him infinite trouble and made him very few votes. As a matter of fact, "the faithful" were made to understand that if they wanted any beneficial legislation for this section, they must pay for it in votes for the Hon. Frank.—Thief River Falls Press.

A Beggar's Newspaper.

The good professional beggars of Paris have several newspapers, printed and published for their special benefit. One of these odd dailies is called the "Bon Guide." It gives a complete list of the baptisms, weddings and funerals to take place on that day, so that the readers may be posted as to the best place to pursue their calling. For begging-letter writers there is a list of the addresses, arrivals and departures of persons of known charitable disposition. The paper is a mine of information to its readers. Its advertisements are peculiar to the business and read somewhat as follows: "Wanted, a blind man to play the flute," or "Wanted, for a fashionable watering place, a one-armed man; good references; security required."

Beggars are generally poorly nourished in body. If they were not so, people would not be apt to give. It is safe to say that none of the Paris beggars drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer. People who use it are at once improved and built up in health. These beers, brewed by the Minneapolis Brewing Company, are a pure malt food product, made particularly with a view of developing their food value. A case of pints or quarts of "Extra Pale" or "Gilt Edge" will be delivered at your door. Order from your dealer or Alexander Thompson, Crookston.

LANDSLIDE TO BRYAN.

REPUBLICANS FLOCKING TO THE DEMOCRATIC STANDARD.

Wellington, Egan, Davis, Monett, Schurz, Olney, Wilson and Hundreds of Others of Like Prominence Cannot Endorse Imperialism.

Not a day passes that the press is not called upon to record the fact that from a dozen to a score of prominent men who voted for McKinley in 1896 have announced their intention of voting for Bryan and Stevenson this year. While there are among these many gold Democrats who voted the Republican ticket four years ago, and who are returning to their former allegiance, there are still hundreds of lifelong Republicans who have consistently supported the Republican ticket, ever since they reached their majority, but who now find it impossible to accept the Republican platform adopted at Philadelphia. The list includes business and professional men, bankers, educators, historians, jurists and the like, and in itself presents a forcible argument in favor of the Kansas City platform and the ticket nominated at the Kansas City convention.

The reason given for their conversion by these recent additions to the Democratic ranks are many. The gold Democrats, who left the party four years ago because of its attitude on the money question, declare that this issue is not the paramount one in this campaign; that the questions of imperialism, militarism and trusts are of immensely more consequence to the country, and upon these questions they cannot support the Republican party.

Why They Support Bryan.

The many voters of foreign birth who are leaving the Republican party give as their reason for doing so that they are opposed to its policy of imperialism. Many of them, also, differ with the present administration in regard to its colonial policy, and believe that the constitution is being ignored in the conduct of the administration towards Cuba and Porto Rico.

Still others give as their reason for coming over to Mr. Bryan that they believe, in a crisis, the country would be safer in his hands than in the hands of the men who dictate President McKinley's course of action. In view of the continuance of the war in the Philippines and the complicated condition of affairs in China, they believe that there is grave danger of a crisis to successfully carry this country through which will require a clear head and mature judgment, such as Mr. Bryan possesses.

Ex-Secretary of State Olney has written a letter declaring himself for Mr. Bryan and advising all patriotic citizens to support the Democratic candidate. Mr. Olney has always been an expansionist but has not confused the Jeffersonian article with imperialism. His announcement came as a bomb shell into the Republican camp.

Great Names in the Van.

At the head of the list of converts to Democracy since the Kansas City convention stand such names as Webster Davis, late assistant secretary of the interior under Mr. McKinley; G. L. Wellington, senator from Maryland; Patrick Egan of New York, who was minister to Chile under President Harrison; Thomas Wentworth Higginson of Boston, soldier, historain and litterateur; and a score of others equally as prominent. The Republicans, in their desperation, are announcing conversion after conversion to McKinleyism, but they are unable to present a list containing such a formidable array of names of national reputation as the above.

Webster Davis, who resigned his position as assistant secretary of the interior and cast his lot with the Democrats, did so because he had visited South Africa and had become convinced that the attitude of the present administration towards the struggling Boers was un-American and unjust. He had been making speeches for the Democratic ticket ever since he announced his conversion at the Kansas City convention, and his work has been the means of changing hundreds of votes from McKinley to Bryan.

Former Lieutenant Governor Jones of New York, who was an enthusiastic supporter of Mr. McKinley in 1896, says in announcing his change of sentiment: "I believe the country would be safer, in the event of any possible crisis, in the hands of Mr. Bryan, a man of unswerving firmness, integrity and ability, than under the control of Mr. McKinley."

Frank Monnett, who, as the Republican attorney general of Ohio, enforced the law against trusts so diligently that they sought to bribe him with half a million dollars. He is out for Bryan now.

Wells, Fargo & Co.'s President.

John J. Valentine, president of the Wells, Fargo & Co. Express, says: "Believing that between the claims of freemen, that all men are entitled to equal political rights, and the dogma of tyranny, that might makes right, there is no middle ground, I favor the endorsement of Bryan and Stevenson and the straight support of the Democratic nominees."

Edward Osgood Brown, a prominent Chicago attorney, says: "I believe Bryan honest, able and right on the only real issue of the campaign. I support him because I think opposition to imperialism my first political duty."

Sigmund Zeisler, a prominent attorney of Chicago, says: "McKinley's arrogation of unconstitutional powers, his yielding to sinister influences, his constant wabbling, his hypocritical cant, filled me with gradually increasing disgust. Bryan's courageous consistency, his manifest sincerity, his brilliant defense of the principles of self-government have filled me with increasing admiration and confidence in his statesmanship."

William Birney, son of the old liberty party's dead leader, has declared that he will support Bryan in the present campaign.

Great New York Publicists.

Bourke Cockran of New York, famous as lawyer and orator, who has been classed as a Republican ever since he made speeches for General B. F. Tracy, the regular Republican candidate for mayor of New York City in 1897.

General Robert Avery of New York, a life-long Republican, who says: "My devotion to the principles of the Republican party taught by Lincoln, Seward, Greeley, Summer, Chase and others compels me to vote for Mr. Bryan."

R. Tecumseh Sherman of New York, son of the late General W. T. Sherman, who has served a term in the board of alderman as a Republican. He cannot longer affiliate with a party that condones the Alger and other army scandals.

Henry F. Keenan, a well known author, who wrote "The Money Makers."

L. W. Habercorn, who was chief of the Republican national committee's German bureau in the campaign of 1896, leaves his party on the issue of imperialism.

It would require several pages of this paper to publish the names of all prominent Republicans in all parts of the country who are now working for the success of Bryan.

ENEMY OF LABOR.

Theodore Roosevelt now pleads for the vote of the laboring man. On Labor Day he stood upon the same platform from which Mr. Bryan spoke and said nice things to the "horny-handed sons of toil." Mr. Bryan voiced the laboring man's complaint against the Republican doctrine of "Government by Injunction," and in a roundabout way "Teddy" voiced the same sentiments. Of course, Roosevelt is in sympathy with the laboring man. He is opposed to "Government by Injunction"—at least he says he is; he is a candidate for vice-president now, you know. There is, however, food for thought in an article published in the "Review of Reviews" for September, 1896, and written by Theodore Roosevelt, at that time not a candidate for vice-president. In that article, page 295, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"The men who object to what they style 'Government by Injunction' are, as regards the essential principles of government, in hearty sympathy with their remote skin-clad ancestors who lived in caves, fought one another with stone-headed axes, and ate the mammoth and woolly rhinoceros.

"They are interesting as representing a geological survival, but they are dangerous whenever there is the least chance of their making the principles of this ages-buried past living factors in present life.

"They are not in sympathy with men of good minds and sound civic morality."

A CANDID CONVERT.

The administration press has loudly proclaimed the "conversion" of Mr. Chavannes, editor of the Des Moines Globe, a Republican who voted for Mr. Bryan on the money question in 1896. Mr. Chavannes has returned to the fold, however; has been elected a Republican precinct chairman, and his paper advocates the election of McKinley and Roosevelt this year. In an interview with the Omaha World-Herald, Mr. Chavannes gives the following candid reasons for supporting McKinley this year:

"I am a Republican and I do not have any faith in the Democratic party. I am giving the Republican national ticket my support now for the reason that I believe the election of McKinley means imperialism. By imperialism I mean just what the Democrats mean when they call Republicans imperialists."

He is supporting McKinley because he believes in imperialism; wants imperialism; and knows what ticket to support in order to get imperialism. A candidate who is getting converts because of their avowed belief in imperialism can hardly assert hereafter that imperialism is a "bugaboo."

Two Silent Statesmen.

Kansas City Times: The aloofness of Thomas B. Reed and Benjamin Harrison, the two bravest and most distinguished leaders of the Republican party, from participation in the canvass for the re-election of William McKinley cannot fail of having a telling influence upon the action in the forthcoming election of a very large number of voters belonging to that political organization.

Life in Sarawak.

A village in Sarawak, Borneo, usually consists of a single house of immense size, which affords accommodation to all the inhabitants. The house is built on posts ten or fifteen feet high; it has a verandah along its entire length, "in which is centred nearly all the social life of the community;" and from this verandah open out the private rooms devoted to each family. Cannibalism does not exist in Borneo; but strips of flesh are cut from the bodies of enemies, stored in bamboos, and used as an offering to the hawks from which the omens are taken. In certain cases of illness the patient would be persuaded to eat a small portion of human flesh as a curative agent; but this can hardly be regarded as cannibalism. In Dutch Borneo the people did at one time to a small extent eat human flesh; but the practice was stopped. For example, a male child might be very ill; and, as a last resource it would be considered right to sacrifice a less valuable female life to save him. In such a case, if the boy had a sister she would be killed and a small piece of her flesh be given to the patient to eat, under the impression that his life would thereby be preserved.

Paintings in Madrid Gallery.

The number of paintings in the Madrid gallery exceeds 2,200, and some idea of the astounding artistic value of the collection may be derived from the statement that it contains forty-six paintings by Murillo, fourteen by Zurbaran, fifty-eight by Ribera, sixty-four by Velasquez, fifty-five by Teniers, sixty-six by Rubens, ten by Raphael, twenty by Poussin, sixty-six by Luca Giordano, twenty-two by Van Duck, fifty-four by Breughel, ten by Claude Lorraine, sixteen by Guido Reni, forty-three by Titian, fifty-four by Tintoretto and twenty-five by Paul Veronese.

THE FARMERS AND THE WIRE TRUST.

The figures in the following article apply to Indiana as far as acreage and area is concerned. The moral of the article, however, will be readily seen by the farmer, wherever he may be found.

In the onward march of events it so happens that farmers prefer wire to wood for fencing their land. In the state of Indiana there are in round numbers say 200,000 farms, and it is estimated that the average farm contains 80 acres and that about one-sixth of these farms, say 33,000, are fenced with wire. There are numerous reasons urged by farmers for preferring wire to wood for fencing. The forests of Indiana in a large measure have disappeared, and timber suitable for rails has become scarce and costly and is too valuable for fencing; it is worth more to the farmers for lumber than it is for fencing material; besides wire, even if wood were plentiful, is more durable than wood. As a result wire has become universally popular for fencing. This fact accounts for the existence of the wire trust, an aggregation of capital of about $100,000,000, which has control of about 20 corporations engaged in the manufacture of wire suitable for fencing, exclusive of barbed wire, numbered as to size 9, 12, 13 and 16.

For the purpose of easy calculation to show to what extent the wire trust is a beneficiary of the Dingley protective tariff, it is worth while to approximate the amount of wire required to fence a farm of 80 acres, and the cost prior and subject to the operations of the trust. The outside fencing of an 80 acre farm would require 640 rods of fence, and it is estimated by those who know that the inside fencing equal to four lines across the farm would require as much more—total 1,280 rods.

Wire fence of a superior quality, four feet high, is manufactured, containing 10 pounds of wire to the rod; hence, 1,280 rods of fence would require 12,800 pounds of wire. Before the trust advanced prices this wire was sold to manufacturers of fencing at $1.65 per 100 pounds, costing $211.20 to properly fence an eighty acre farm.

The trust, taking advantage of the necessities of farmers, advanced the price of wire to $3.95 per 100 pounds—an advance of $2.30 per 100 pounds. As a result, manufacturers of wire fence, instead of being able to supply the required wire for an 80 acre farm for $211.20, are required to advance the price to $504.60—a difference of $293.40, which the farmer has to pay or go without wire fencing.

Going back to the estimate that one-sixth of the farms of Indiana—33,000, the average being 80 acres—are under wire fence, each requiring 12,800 pounds of wire fencing—it is seen that up to date 424,400,000 pounds of wire have been required to meet the demands of the Indiana farmers. If this wire had been sold at $1.65 per 100 pounds, it would have cost the Indiana farmers $7,002,800. If, however, the wire had cost $3.95 per 100 pounds, the place to which the trust has forced prices, then, in that case, the Indiana farmers would have paid $16,663,800—a difference of $9,661,000.

What is in store for Indiana farmers provided the wire trust continues its plundering policy? There are, according to the estimate made, 166,000 80 acre farms in Indiana, which under favorable conditions would have wire fences.

It has been shown that to fully fence an 80 acre farm 12,800 pounds of wire are required; hence to fence 166,000 such farms would require 2,125,800,000 pounds of wire. If this wire could be furnished at $1.65 per 100 pounds, which was the price prior to the advance made by the trust, it would cost the farmers of Indiana the sum of $35,075,700, but under the advance made by the trust to $3.95 per 100 pounds, the cost would be $83,969,100—an increase of $58,893,400.

The basis of the caluculations is approximately correct and demonstrates the purpose of the trust to rob the farmers of Indiana, who choose to substitute wire for wood in fencing their farms. The result has been, as has been stated, to paralyze the wire fencing industry. Farmers of Indiana have decided that they will not pay the trust its robber prices, and are discussing the enormous iniuty of the Republican tariff which fosters such plundering corporations as the wire trust. They say that a law which enables a combination of capital to perpetrate such colossal robberies of the farmers as the wire trust has inflicted upon them ought to be abolished, and since this cannot be accomplished while the Republican party is in power, a change in party control of the government has become an absolute necessity.

The Burden We Bought.

New York Herald: We certainly did the handsome thing by Spain in the late war. We paid her $20,000,000 in cash, then unstrapped the burden from her shoulders that she had been staggering under, strapped it on our own shoulders and are now doing a little staggering on our own account. We played the part of a very accommodating Don Quixote in that affair.

Imperialism Past and Present.

Imperialism is a menace to the American republic as it was the destroyer of the great republics of ancient and modern Europe.

Big Oil Engine.

In the shops of the Southern Pacific railway, at Ogden, Utah, there was installed last week a thirty-six horsepower Diesel motor, by means of which it is expected to supply power for a machine shop through the use of crude California petroleum. As the use of this type of motor in the West is novel, much interest is being excited by the trial, for the oil fields of California provide much reason for desiring its success. The Diesel motor is essentially a gasoline engine, adapted to use crude petroleum or other oils direct. It operates on the four-stroke, or Otto cycle, but differs from other internal combustion motors in compressing a full charge of air to a point above the igniting point of the fuel, then injecting this fuel for a certain period into this red-hot air, where it burns with limits of pressure and temperature under perfect control. There are no explosions but steady combustion at a predetermined much lower temperature and without essential increase in pressure, the combustion line being practically an isothermal.

All After Mr. Rockefeller.

Dr. Harper, of the University of Chicago has British rivals in his designs on John D. Rockefeller's millions. At the time of Mr. Rockefeller's visited London, in July, his presence at the Savoy hotel had not been chronicled more than twenty-four hours before hundreds of letters began to arrive for him. His secretary opened only enough to observe that every mendicant and institution in the empire was possessed of a desire to make the acquaintance of the Rockefeller munificence. The applications ranged from requests for a ton of coal to petitions for the endowment of colleges and orphan asylums, and they are still coming. Mr. Rockefeller will return to London late in the fall. There awaits him at the Savoy a bundle of letters nearly two feet square.—Correspondence St. Paul Dispatch.

WOMAN'S KIDNEY TROUBLES

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing this Fatal Woman's Disease.

EDNA FREDERICK.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women.

The following letters will show how marvellously successful it is:

Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am failing very fast,—since January have lost thirty-five or forty pounds. I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired, and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes I am troubled with a white discharge, and I also have kidney and bladder trouble. . . I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you, and see if you could do me any good."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio.

Sept. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, and did not care to talk with any one. I did not enjoy life at all. Now, I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough for what you have done for me. You are surely a woman's friend. Thanking you a thousand times, I remain,

Ever yours

MISS EDNA FREDERICK,

Troy, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it enough. I had headaches, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, and kidney trouble. I also had a pain when standing or walking, and sometimes there seemed to be balls of fire in front of me, so that I could not see for about twenty minutes. Felt as tired in the morning when I got up as if I had had no sleep for two weeks. Had fainting spells, was down-hearted, and would cry."—MRS. BERTHA OFER, Second and Clayton Sts., Chester Pa.

MARY A. HIPLE.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot find language to express the terrible suffering I have had to endure. I had female trouble, also liver, stomach, kidney, and bladder trouble. . . . I tried several doctors, also quite a number of patent medicines, and had despaired of ever getting well. At last I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, thanks to your medicine, I am a well woman. I can not praise your medicine too highly for I know it will do all, and even more, than it is recommended to do. I tell every suffering woman about your Vegetable Compound, and urge them to try it and see for themselves what it will do."—MRS. MARY A. HIPLE, No. Manchester, Ind.

What He Would Get.

Some years ago the Prince of Wales visited a factory where a large number of men were employed. The prince asked one of the workmen, who was perfectly ignorant as to the identity of the stranger, who was addressing him:

"What wages do the men have here?"

"Well," replied the honest workman, respectfully scratching his head and partially lifting his cap with the same hand, "that depends on what they is. A chap like you would get about eighteen bob a week."

The prince often relates the story with a smiling face.—Tit-Bits.

BRYAN AND LIND

TOUR OF THE STATE BY THE TWO GREAT LEADERS OF THE PEOPLE.

Grand Outpouring of the People and Magnificent Display of Enthusiasm. Sweeps Over the Whole State Like an Irresistible, Overwhelming Tidal Wave. Unparalleled in the History of the State. Trade Balance Fallacy—Expansion vs. Imperialism — Roundup of Reform Press Notes and Comment for the Week, Etc., Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 1, 1900.

Bryan's tour of Minnesota has been one grand triumphal march. It far surpassed all precedent and even all expectations. Everywhere the people gathered in countless numbers and came from great distances to see and hear their great leaders, Bryan and Lind. It has been an outpouring of people such as Minnesota has never seen before. The enthusiasm displayed was overwhelming, irresistable. It swept over the country like a tidal wave and carried everything before it. Many a voter who was hesitating on the brink, plunged in and declared himself for Bryan and Lind with a will and a vim that guarantees an overwhelming victory in November.

Nor was the enthusiasm confined to any class or locality. Farmers with their wives and families drove across country dozens of miles to hear Bryan and Lind. In Duluth the laboring men were so anxious for an opportunity to hear Bryan, that they asked him to speak to them before they went to work in the morning, before 6 o'clock. The greatest demonstrations of all were the Twin City meetings. The surging masses of humanity that had gathered to greet their leaders, the magnificent display of enthusiasm, all this has no parallel in the history of the state, and augurs well for the future.

Bob Dunn's speech against the present state administration is about the weakest thing on record. Democrats have at least one advantage in the present campaign. They don't have to go back a generation or two to dig up ancient fossils in the boneyard of antiquity to throw at our opponents. We can find carloads of brickbats and cobblestones on the streets and highways just anywhere. The greatest part of the speech is devoted to a eulogy of Minnesota, its growth and prosperity. But Minnesota has not grown because of the Republican administrations, but rather in spite of it. The growth of Minnesota is not due to the Republican party but to the energy, intelligence and thrift of her citizens, her wonderful resources and natural advantages.

If the opposition can't find anything stronger against Governor Lind, they certainly won't cut much ice. They had better go out of the business. The whole affair looks like a confession of incompetence on the part of the opposition to make a case, more than anything else. A state with such resources and such energetic inhabitants as Minnesota has, could not be retarded even by administrations of driveling, imbeciles or arrant knaves, and in this respect the Republican administrations have not all been nearly as bad as they might have been. A few of them even came up to a very fair standard of innocuous mediocrity.

Down in the Minnesota River valley live three farmers, Jones, Brown and Smith. Each owns a nice farm of 160 acres. Jones had his farm mortgaged for $5,000 at 6 per cent. During the past year he sold and took to town farm products amounting to $1,000, i. e., his exports amounted to $1,000. Now, the first thing he did was to pay the interest on the mortgage amounting to $300. This left him $700 which he spent in clothing, furniture, farm implements, etc. His exports amounted to $1,000, his imports to $700, leaving a trade balance of $300 in his favor, according to McKinley's way of figuring.

Brown's farm was not mortgaged. He also exported $1,000 worth of farm produce, all of which he invested in clothing and other necessities of life, farm implements, etc. His imports and exports were equal.

Smith not only owned his farm, he had also lent out $5,000 to various people from which he realized the sum of $300 in interest. He also sold $1,000 worth of farm produce, all of which he invested in improvements, machinery, etc. His imports amounted to $1,300, his exports to $1,000, leaving a trade balance of $300 against him. His imports were $300 more than his exports.

According to McKinley's way of figuring, Jones was the most prosperous of these men, because his exports were $300 more than his imports, leaving a trade balance of $300 in his favor. To argue that we are prosperous because we export more than we import is a fallacy like the rest of McKinley's arguments. The simple fact is, that countless millions of foreign capital are invested in this country and the interest on these investments has to be paid for by products which we export and for which we consequently receive no returns.

The only other country which has a similar trade balance in her favor is poor, down-trodden, starving India, which is similarly obliged to pay interest on immense investments of British capital, while in the case of Great Britain, which has invested immense sums in foreign countries, the imports far exceed the exports in value.

What a tremendous waste of raw material at the university for our respected friend, Dr. W. W. Folwell, and General Solicitor M. D. Grover of the Great Northern railway, to be making addresses upon the subject of "Trusts," when our great and good political authority, Marcus Aurelius Hanna, declares that there are no such things as trusts!

"We will give you the flag but not the constitution," is what the Republican administration says to the Philippines. The flag is merely an emblem. It has been held in the hands of traitors like Burr, and martyrs like Lincoln. It has floated over the slaughter of striking miners in Montana, and over the heroic fields of '76. It is merely an emblem. In the hands of a patriot, it stands for all that is good and holy. In the hands of the carpet-bagger, the demagogue, the thief and the knave, it is a meaningless rag, or possibly even a cloak and pretext for his villany.

The Constitution is a guarantee of equal rights and privileges to all. It is the thing itself of which the flag is the emblem. Without the Constitution the flag is nothing. Wherever the Constitution is extended, it becomes at once the paramount influence in the life of all that live under it. It is the same to all men at all times everywhere. It is an incalculable power for the uplifting of men, for justice and liberty. It may be abused at times, but it carries within itself the power to remedy all such abuses.

But this is the thing which the administration will not extend to the Philippines. McKinley will not give them the Constitution, but he does offer to them an emblem which may stand for much or nothing, accordingly as it is in the hands of a patriot or of a knave.

Says Mac to the Philippines—"You see we can't let you have the Constitution, but we will bring the flag, which represents the Constitution and wave it over you, and in our hands, that will be just as good as the Constitution, for you know we are all patriots and you can surely take my word for it, for you know I am a good and holy man and I am actuated only by the deepest sense of duty and I go to church every Sunday and contribute liberally to the missionary fund, but if you won't take my word for it and refuse to submit, I shall come over there and shoot down every mother's son of you, and wade in gore up to my neck."

But the untutored Filipino thought he smelled a rat and would not submit, and Mac started in to carry out his threat, and the Filipino wouldn't stand and take it meekly, but tried to get in a lick edgewise occasionally, and so they are at it ever since and Justice sits on her eternal throne with blindfolded eyes and the man who calls the slaughter in the Philippines inhuman murder and criminal aggression, is denounced as a traitor by Republican demagogues and mountebanks.

When we annex new territory, parcel it out into free and sovereign states and territories, make the inhabitants free and sovereign citizens of the United States and guarantee to them the full benefits of the Constitution, that is what made us a great nation, that is expansion. When by slaughter and bloodshed we conquer populous islands without extending to them the rights and privileges of the Constitution, without admitting them into the Union as free states, without making the inhabitants free and sovereign citizens of the United States, that is contrary to the Declaration of Independence, that is imperialism. The Democratic party has always been the party of expansion, the policy which has extended the flag and the Constitution from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The Republican party has become the party of imperialism, the policy which proposes to extend the flag by bloodshed and slaughter regardless of cost, but is not willing to extend the Constitution with its guarantee of equal rights and privileges to all.

In the latest of the Republican national press documents three savage sheets were devoted to showing the prosperity of the campaign as gauged by bank deposits, absolutely ignoring the fact that money piled up in banks is no evidence of prosperity. It is when money is out doing its work of stimulating business that the country prospers. The enormous accumulation of money in banks is one of the ills that the people have to complain of. It does nobody any good there, neither helping business that needs it, nor bringing returns to the people who own it.

Speaking of Authority Hanna, here comes Republican Governor Mount of Indiana calling Hanna down in the following fashion: "If Hanna made that statement (that there are no trusts) he either did not know what he was talking about or wanted to fool the people of the country. There ARE trusts in this country and they are fast grinding the life out of the American people and I hope the people will rise in their might and crush them."

If Bryan and the anti-imperialists are responsible for the present continuation of the war in the Philippines, will the Republican press kindly tell us who was responsible for it, before Bryan took an interest in the Philippines? A people that has fought for liberty as long as the Filipinos, don't mind keeping on a little longer. That's the reason why they are at it still.

The work of the state board of equalization was brought to a close last week. The work this board has accomplished, under the administration of John Lind, and under his personal direction shows more than anything else the purpose of Governor Lind to secure justice for all, and equal privileges for none; to make every one bear an equal share of the burdens of the government, and not let them rest only on those who are least able to bear them. A full report of the work accomplished in revising the tax assessments of the state will be published next week.

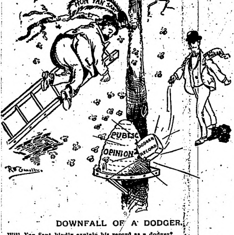
THE APPROACHING CRISIS.



DOWNFALL OF A DODGER.

Will Van Sant kindly explain his record as a dodger?

Will he kindly explain why, as a member of the legislature, he failed to vote on certain bills which were in the interests of labor, in the interests of the people, which the people demanded?

The people of Minnesota want a governor who will be a governor of the people and for the people, and not the puppet of special interests.

EXPANSION VS. IMPERIALISM

American Policy Towards Inferior Races and Disorganized Communities.

Vain Attacks by Opposition on Lind's Efficient and Honest Administration.

Imperialist of 1811—Willing to Extend the Flag But Not the Constitution.

Why should we follow after strange gods? No new problem faces the American people on land or sea. There is plenty of good tested patriotic American precedent.

You say: "Those Filipinos are so low in the scale of civilization. They are an inferior race." Suppose for the sake of argument we allow this. Have we not met "inferior" races before? After much experimenting and more injustice, we have finally developed a tolerably just Indian policy and service. Why not apply to the Filipinos the principles and practices that have been found successful and consonant with our fundamentals of government when applied to other barbarous races? What are these principles?

(a) We have never deprived the Indian of his self-government. No, sir. Never. We never sent governors or judges or chiefs of police to the Indians. The Indian agent has many sins to answer for, but thank God, he never tried to govern the Indian. So he could have been worse. We have let the Indian keep his tribal organization as long as he pleases. We do not meddle with tribal affairs.

(b) We have never taxed the Indian. We have reasoned that taxation without representation is contrary to our theory of government.

(c) The relation of the United States with the Indian tribes has always been regulated by treaty. The United States government has not felt too big to talk it over with even the smallest and dirtiest Indian tribe. And why should it? Only he, who is wrong is afraid of ventilating the subject in friendly conversation. Why does not McKinley dare to talk it over with the ambassadors of the Tagals? Does he then realize that his case is so hopelessly bad?

(d) We have as a rule procured a cession of the land occupied by the Indians before we have taken possession of it. Thus we have often bought our territory twice; once from some European "colonizing power," and again from the natives.

The above, besides being a brief summary of our Indian policy is also an exact summary of what we haven't done in our new possessions. We have refused the natives self-government; we have taxed them without their consent; we have refused to treat with them even when they have humbly begged to be allowed to plead their own cause; we have appropriated their territory without even consulting them much less paying them for it.

And now virtuous McKinley and saintly Beveridge are surprised and grieved to find the natives up in arms against us! Strange, isn't it?

Why should we thus depart from all our former practices and traditions?

Because the administration is plutocratic and Anglo-maniacal. The English are often praised for their wise colonial policy. Come to think of it, however, the English system is liberal only to colonies settled by Europeans. Canada and Australia have liberty galore, but how about India, Soudan, the Kaffirs? The English policy towards "inferior" races has been simple, direct, and "strenuous." We now follow the English policy of transmitting civilization via the bayonet route; first we knock our inferior brother down, then rob him, and then revive him by rum and religion. Then we expect him humbly to thank us for civilizing him and to work as a vassal to enrich our trader and spoils politician.

We have left the enlightened, humane, and progressive American method of dealing with inferior races and adopted the brutal, mediaeval, selfish European method.

Why? Partly because the administration is in love with everything English, partly because the English system is more profitable for the capitalist and pot-hunting politician.

Sometimes a quite different excuse is given for American murder and rapine in the "colonies" It is claimed that society is in such a disorganized state there that before anything elese, we must restore order.

Now, this is a lie, of course. We have never been able to find an imperialist who could give even the shadow of a proof that there would be a bit more murder or arson or larceny or adultery or drunkenness in Luzon than in Ohio if the American army were not there. Now several hundreds are murdered every week, but the American army does the murdering. Property is destroyed—by the Americans. The prostitutes and the saloons are numerous. Yes but we brought them there.

But for argument's sake, let the imperialists have the benefit of the lie. Suppose the Philippines are disorganized. Suppose that without an army, life and property would be in danger. Then, what is the American policy in that case?

We had a similar one at the end of the Civil war. Then the Southern states were disorganized. The military and carpet bag government of the North was far from ideal, but we did not so far forget the Declaration of Independence as to try to set up anything but a self-government. The provisional arrangements were for the express purpose of establishing a stable and free self-government. Every one of the states got back all their original rights, but this is precisely what we have expressly declared we will not do in the Philippines We refused to pass the resolution declaring that our arbitrary government was to be only temporary. It was the vote of a Republican Vice President, who is now in glory—let us hope—which fixed our policy as that of an indefinite tyranny.

New occasions teach new duties, to be sure. But it can never be our duty to retrograde. By all means let us advance to something nobler than our present Indian policy or our recent carpetbag government. But don't let us advance to the rear. The English plan of dealing with "natives" was a good and merciful one in its day. Compared with the earlier method of making the inferior race slaves, or the Assyrian one of flaying the captives alive; it is relatively very humane to rob the "silent, sullen kin" simply of their civil liberty and a modicum of their property. But compared with the American policy of actually respecting the rights of even a weaker race, the English-aping policy of our administration is sheer barbarism.—Steel Pen.

DUNN'S CHEAP TALK.

State Auditor Dunn was under the necessity of going back a long way to find an argument against the present able and honest governor, and such part of the state government as he is responsible for. Back to 1857 to find sins of the fathers that are visited upon the second and third generations of their children; and what was this sin? A new state, without wagon roads or railroads, whose resources were unknown and undeveloped. A land, the fertility of whose soil had not yet been fairly tested, and if the test was favorable, without means to transport the products to market. And these awful democratic fathers, having faith and courage and a belief in the future of this state, whose greatness they could only catch a glimpse of and the reality of which has exceeded all prophecy, actually borrowed money to build roads and bridges, encouraged the building of railroads, and pledged the credit of the state as security. This is what Bob Dunn, as a lot of his loyalty-to-party, has dug up against John Lind, and advances as a serious reason why the people should not again vote for him for governor.

In addition to this charge, which smells of mould and decay, he calls attention to the grain inspection department, and the only fault he could find is that it has cost more in 1900 than in some preceding year. Well, is the state not growing? Have we not two million people to a million and a half some years ago? And he could not find this disparagement without an unfair comparison as to time. Supposing it be true that the service is costing more this year than in 1898, this is more than counterbalanced by the fact that the grain growers are receiving fair and just treatment. We hear no more of undergrading, excessive dockage, and unjust weights, but let us quote a letter from Auditor Dunn's essay. He gives the expenses of the grain department for crop years, that is to say from Sept. 1st to Aug. 31st, as follows:

And continues:

1895	$147,522.22
1896	174,808.24
1897	176,220.97
1898	191,681.12
1899	213,764.54
1900	207,955.59
Board of Appeals, 1900	14,233.00

Comparing the expenses of the year 1900 with those for 1898, that is the first full year of Democratic administration, with the last full year of Republican administration of the department, it is seen that the expenses of grain inspection during 1900 exceed the 1898 expenses $16,274.47. We submit that the above proves nothing against the administration of Chief Inspector Reishus, but on the contrary the figures given, when properly construed, show that he has been able notwithstanding many obstacles and unfavorable conditions of the crop year of 1900, which Mr. Clausen has recently stated in a public interview was one of the extraordinary difficulties, owning to the poor crop, unseasonable weather, etc., and in fact that Mr. Reishus was "up against the real thing," and he had no criticism to make against his management to materially reduce the expenses.

Please note Mr. Reishus was in office the full crop year, viz., from August, 1899, to August, 1900, and the figures given by the state adiutor for 1900 are $207,955.58, while for the year 1899, when Clausen was in office, a part of which time was in Governor Lind's administration the expenses were $213,808.95, showing a reduction by Reishus of $5,808.95, which will strike everybody who is not prejudiced as doing exceedingly well under the circumstances.

THE IMPERIALISTS OF 1811.

Depend upon, it before the campaign is very much older the Republicans will be anxious to forget all about the Louisiana purchase. Just keep your eyes open, and you will soon notice the Republican orator and quillpusher dodging this topic as he would smallpox or the Philippine leprosy.

For the Republicans are correct when they say that there were Imperialistic plans in connection with the Louisiana territory.

But the leader of the Imeprialists was not Thomas Jefferson, but Josiah Quincey, not a Democrat, but a lineal ancestor of the present Republican party.

In 1811 the Democrats decided to admit the present Louisiana as a state. Louisiana was the first state proposed that lay outside the boundaries of the territory of the original United States. But the Democrats were expansionists then as now, and they wished to extend the Union with its liberty and self-government to the west side of the Mississippi.

The Imeprialists were "little Americans" then as now. They with Josiah Quincey in the lead, demanded that the Union be not extended west of the Mississippi, but that this territory be governed as an imperial domain, as a vassal territory, as a crown colony. Is not that precisely the argument of the little Americans today, namely, that we must not extend the blessings of liberty and self-government to any country separated from us by water? The only difference was that the Imperialist of 1811 would make fresh water (the Mississippi) the insurmountable barrier for freedom; while now the water to keep out freedom must be salt.

If these little American Imperialists had succeeded in keeping the republic from expanding, if they had annexed to it an empire, there would not have been any state of Minnesota. There would have been the Imperial Province of Minnesota.

How would you have liked the following program?

Mark Hanna's son as governor of Minnesota, with a dozen of McKinley's, Heath's and Quay's nephews as our council to make laws for us, just as they are now doing in the Porto Rico, If we had dared to oppose those bloodsuckers, we had been rebels, our property would have been confiscated, our houses burned, and our people killed at the rate of three hundred a week, just as we, mark you, are doing in the Philippines.

What a rich field the trans-Mississippi country would have been for the trust-maker, the spoil-taker and the land-raker! There would have been spoils galore for all the hungry wardheelers and perjured campaign-liars of the dominant party. How conducive to prosperity would not a Mississippi tariff have been!

Steamboat Captain Van Sant would be chasing the anti-imperialist, John Lind, with a winchester to get the prize put on him by a benevolent, paternal, imperial government. This would be a much simpler and safer process for the Republicans than the coming fall elections.

The Imperialists were not successful in 1811. We preferred to expand in those days. We did not wish any vassal territory. Then the American flag was the emblem of liberty, not imperialism.

Shall we change now? Are we ready today to commit the treason against our land and its constitution that we scorned to commit in 1811?—Steel Pen.

The Republicans are dodging, they are scared, they don't dare to come out in fair and square discussion of the main issue. They try to dodge the trust question by saying: "There are no trusts." They try to dodge the question of imperialism by asserting that expansion and imperialism are the same. When a man does not dare to come out in a fair and open discussion, but tries to evade the question by dodging, it simply means that he considers his case hopeless.

Van Sant the Dodger has been assured the support of all the tax dodging corporations in the state. "Birds of a feather—"

CHINESE EMPIRE ISSUES SOME EDICTS.

Throws Into Greater Confusion the Already Complicated Chinese Situation—Report That Allies Have Seized Shan Hai Kwan—The Emperor Renews His Request to Russia and Japan for Their Aid in the Peace Negotiations—Empress Now Realizes the True Nature of the Crisis.

London, Oct. 1.—Beyond the issuance of a numbebr of Chinese edicts, which throw into greater confusion the already complicated Chinese situation, there is little news in this morning's papers. From Shanghai comes an unconfirmed report that the allies have seized Shan Hai Kwan. All the reports with regard to the edicts emanate from Shanghai. According to the advices in addition to the edicts ordering Grand Councillor Kuan Kang to offer oblations before the coffin of Baron von Ketteler and the edict directing that Li Hung Chang's entire plan be followed with regard to the punishment of the princes and higher ministers of state responsible for the anti-foreign outbreaks and the decree ordering that funeral honors be paid in Pekin and Tokio to the remains of Sugiyama Akira, the of the Japanese legation, Emperor Kwang Su has addressed further letters to the czar and mikado renewing his request for their aid in the peace negotiations. Various opinions are expressed as to the edicts. The Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post says:

"The severe punishment ordered by Emperor Kwang Su will only mean a money fine. There are traces of Li Hung Chang's under American influence in the edicts.

On the other hand the Standard's Shanghai correspondent remarks:

"The empress now realizes the true nature of the crisis. After consultin the emperor she summoned the court dignitaries, and upon their assembling, while she remained silent, the emperor in a loud voice which lasted a couple of hours against the courtiers. Then in an angry voice he dismissed them. After this the decrees were issued."

Delivered a Tirade

While these have been promulgated feverish war preparations are reported from Shanghai and new appointments have been made to the hinese army and navy.

"The Chinese Official Gazette has resumed publication," says the Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post, wiring Sept. 24, "and contains an order directing the pekin officials to follow the court, unless their duties here prevent them leaving. British looting continues and daily auctions are held at the legation. This is ukely to last all winter. Members of the nobility are the heaviest losers, Prince Ching in particular."

HAY TAKES HOLD.

Secretary of State Resumes the Duties of His Office.

Washington, Oct. 1. — Secretary of State Hay returned yesterday from his summer's vacation in New Hampshire and to-day will occupy his desk at the state department. Dr. Hill, who has been acting secretary the latter part of the summer, called early last evening and spent several hours with the secretary. To all other callers Mr. Hay excused himself. There were no new advices awaiting him. He expressed his satisfaction with the steps taken by the government, and gave a final and emphatic denial to the allegations recently set afloat that there were differences of opinion between himself and others of the administration on our policy toward China. He reiterated the statement of Dr. Hill that the secretary had been in constant touch and communication with the department during the progress of negotiations and was in thorough accord with the action of this government in every phase of the situation. Mr. Hay said he "was in the usual health of a man of his age," and would resume his regular duties to-day.

Beyond the return of Secretary Hay the day passed without Chinese developments. A special dispatch from Berlin asserting a belief there that the United States was about to issue a note on the question of partition of China was repudiated in an authoritative quarter. It was stated that not only is there no note about to be issued respecting the matter of the partition of China, but that there is no note whatever regarding Chinese policy now in process of formulation by this government.

Russian Legation Departs.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 1.—The following dispatch, dated Pekin, Sept. 27, has been received from M. De Giers, Russian minister to China: "In accordance with orders from the highest quarters I am leaving for Tientsin with the whole legation."

Injured by an Explosion.

Beaver Crossing, Neb., Oct. 1. — A terrible gas explosion occurred in the Eager Mercantile company's acetylene gas plant yesterday. Earl Eager, one of the owners, had his jaw broken in three places and his life hangs in the balance. Homer Houchen, a clerk, had both arms broken and was otherwise bruised. Charles Simonton, druggist, is badly injured about the hands and one foot. A lighted match caused the explosion.

oLoks Like Murder.

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 1.—Late Saturday night the mangled body of Patrick Mullen was found on the track of the electric railroad at Cuyahoga Falls. At first it was thought he had been killed by a car. Yesterday discoveries were made which indicate that Mullen was murdered back of a blacksmith shop about a quarter of a mile away, where his hat was found beside a pool of blood. It is believed the body was placed on the track by his murderers. He had considerable money when last seen alive.

POWERS TO PAY.

Samoans to Be Rewarded for the Surrender of Rifles.

Washington, Oct. 1. — Baron Speck von Sternberg, German charge d'affaires, was at the state department Saturday in reference to closing up that branch of the Samoan agreement relative to the payment to the native Samoans the value of the rifles surrendered by them. When the Samoan commissioners arrived at Apia they deemed it expedient first to secure the disarmament of the belligerent native factions. This was agreed to by the natives on the understanding that $12.50 for each rifle would be paid. Some 3,000 rifles were turned over. The natives now ask the payment of the money, and Dr. Solf, the governor, has proposed that the payment shall be made under restrictions proposed by the foreign consuls in order that the considerable amount of money involved shall not lead to disorder among the natives. The three parties interested in Samoa at the time of the surrender of the rifles—United States, Germany and Great Britain—will jointly contribute the amount required and no difficulty is apprehended in making the settlement.

CORBETT REFUSES TO TALK.

Has Come Back to Meet Charges—Makes Up With His Wife.

New York, Oct. 1.—James J. Corbbett returned from Europe on the Campania. The only one who met him at quarantine was his legal representative, Emanuel Friend, and he and the fighter held a conference while the ship was groping her way to her dock through the fog. The gang plank of the Campania had hardly put out before the form of Corbett appeared. He looked well and was dressed in a long brown mackintosh and wore a brown Derby. He carried a hat box which appeared to be his only piece of baggage, for this was chalked by the custom house people without causing him any delay, and he was then hurried off the pier by Mr. Friend and John Considine and another friend. The last two were on the dock to welcome him. As he was leaving the pier Mr. Corbett said hurriedly to the reporters:

"I have come back to meet any charges which may be made against me. That is all I have got to say and that is all I am going to say."

It is believed that all differences between Corbett and his wife have been settled. Husband and wife dined together at a restaurant and later appeared at a place of amusement. It is now said that Mrs. Corbbett will not press the divorce suit which she threatened to bring.

THE BRITISH FLAG IS RAISED.

Portion of the Porcupine District in Alaska Under Its Folds.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 1.—A dispatch received here, dated from the British commissioner's camp near Porcupine City, Alaska, says that Archer Martin, justice of the supreme court of British Columbia and head of the British commission, raised the British flag Sept. 17. He took possession of that portion of the Porcupine district recently declared to be British territory, at least for the time being, by the international boundary commission. He then declared that the Americans, who own all the claims in this district, should at once apply to have their titles confirmed by this commission.

MAY STAY OUT HOUR LONGER.

Curfew Will Not Ring Until 11 p. m. at Manila Hereafter.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Gen. MacArthur recently issued a general order for the betterment of the government of the city of Manila as follows:

"Existing orders requiring residents of the city of Manila to confine themselves to their homes after 10 o'clock p. m. are hereby amended to extend the hour to 11 o'clock p. m., after which hour the streets of the city will be cleared by the police. Saloons will be closed at 10 o'clock p. m., and the sale of liquor is prohibited after that hour."

WILL COST ABOUT $15,000,000.

Big Expenses Entailed in Taking of the Country's Census.

Washington, Oct. 1.—So far as the work has progressed it appears likely that the present census will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000,000. The census bureau finished the enumeration of all the cities in the United States of over 25,000 inhabitants with the exception of Los Angeles, Seattle and Tacoma. The work of announcing the states will come next, beginning with Arkansas, probably to-day or to-morrow.

MAY TRY ANOTHER METHOD.

Speed of New Warships May Not Be Tried Over Measured Course.

Washington, Oct. 1.—It has been proposed to the navy department that the trial trips of the monitor Wyoming and the torpedo boats Paul Jones and Preble shall be in San Francisco bay by the standardized screw method instead of over a measured course, as is customary. The craft are now being built by the Union Iron works of San Francisco. A determination has not been reached yet, and it will depend upon the decision of the bureau chiefs as to the practicability of the plan.

HOBSON'S EYES ARE PAINING.

Lieutenant Has Asked for Six Months' Leave of Absence.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Lieut. Hobson has applied to the navy department for six months' leave of absence because of trouble which has developed with his eyes. He has experienced considerable pain with his eyes of late, particularly when exposed to strong light, and it is understood that a specialist has recommended that the organs be given a complete rest for six months.

W. J. Bryan: The fact that the trusts support the republican party ought to be sufficient proof that they expect protection from it. The republican party cannot be relied upon to extinguish the trusts so long as its draws its campaign contributions from their overflowing vaults.

Mrs. S. F. Norton, treasurer of the newly organized Woman's Bryan Anti-Trust and Anti-War Club, made a ringing speech at the first meeting of the club, in which she said: "It behooves every man who is suffering from the results of combined capital to vote for that candidate who at least promises to destroy those conditions which oppress him. Every man whose living is earned by the sweat of his brow is to-day the slave of the money power. Vote for the man who believes trusts exist and promises to crush them, who pledges himself in no measured terms to the protection of your interests."

Ex-Senator Gorman, whose policial judgment is conceded to be as good as that of any man in the country, was in Washington this week, and said of the outlook: "There is a drift—a very decided drift—in favor of the democrats which justifies the hope that Bryan will be elected. Political conditions seem much as they were in 1892. The men who are managing for the democrats in New York say that they are going to carry the state. They are sincerely confident. They believe they are going to succeed. The democratic managers generally feel confidence in the general situation and believe that Mr. Bryan is going to be elected. The drift is strongly in that direction."

Sins of Commission.

What has President McKinley done to turn against him so many thousand of his fellow-citizens who aided in his election? He has trampled the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence under foot and turned his back upon the traditions of the republic. He has involved the country in foreign entanglements from which it will be difficult to withdraw. He has inaugurated a war of conquest upon an inoffensive people which has already continued a year and a half without results and which bids fair to continue indefinitely. To maintain this unjust war the people of the United States are compelled to provide men and money and to pay war taxes when there should be pe c?. And finally, under this administration and largely by virtue of law passed since Mr. McKinley became president, trusts have greatly multiplied and have flourished.—Baltimore Sun.

WRONGED PEOPLE OF PORTO RICO.

Guilty by His Own Confession of the First Count Made Against King George in the Declaration of Independence—Has Not Even the Tinsel Excuse of "Sovereign Right."

While there is not one of the Mark Hanna-Kelly-Quay-Roosevelt school of politicians that would acknowledge it, there should nevertheless be such a thing as ethics in politics; for every man there are a few "thou shalt nots," and it is an audacious affront upon logic and common sense to say that everything goes with a nation. There are a few things that a government, even allowing that it is directed by such a wise and benevolent group as the coterie named above, should not do. We are presumably a free people—in national affairs a sort of free moral agent. There are certain liberties we can take with ourselves, but it by no means follows that we can take the same liberties with others. It is all very well for us acknowledging that, while we are sufficiently abject to tolerate the bull pen form of government in our own country, it by no means follows that because we are willing to live under such a government, or, rather, such a lack of government, that we have a right to impose the same conditions upon an alien people against their protest.

There is nothing organically wrong in the idea of expansion. The American private land holder has a perfect right to possess himself of adjacent property if he complies with certain ethical ideas that have been embodied in the laws of his country. Even Mark Hanna would probably be disinclined to proclaim publicly that, in his belief, it was justifiable to shoot a man in order to become the proud possessor of a quarter section of land. The argument holds as regards national affairs. While it might be perfectly proper for us under some conditions to possess ourselves of innumerable oriental isles, it is wrong, and very decidedly wrong, for us to shoot all the inhabitants in order to get a quitclaim deed. The American people have a right to arm themselves for defense, but the American people, much less the president of the United States, have no right to send 100,000 troops abroad in order to force American rule upon a people who do not desire it, even though their objections may seem trivial to us, who do enjoy its beneficence.

In this connection it might be well for the American people to remember that for a president to act in the absence of constitutional authority is to act in violation of his solemn oath of office. An attempt was once made to impeach a president who had infringed upon the constitution much less seriously than had President "Mark Hanna-McKinley."

The constitution of the United States is, after all, nothing but the legal expressions set forth in the Declaration of Independence. Perhaps it might not be considered high treason to call attention to a few of the precepts of that now, in certain quarters, almost obsolete and forgotten document. Among other things that were set may be mentioned the following. The sentences were hurled at the head of a bad king, but they may apply equally well in the case of a bad president. He has, said the Declaration:

"Obstructed the administration of justice by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

"He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries.

"He has erected a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

"He has kept among us in times of peace standing armies without the consent of our legislatures.

"He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power."

Since the constitution is simply the legal expression of the Declaration, it follows that McKinley, in violating the principles of the Declaration, violates the constitution. President McKinley is by confession made guilty of the first count made against King George. In Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines he has obstructed the administration of justice. He has denied common justice to the people of Porto Rico, who came to us as allies; he is wronging the Cubans, who are our wards from the simple fact that we rescued them from the tyranny of the Spanish, and he is arresting the people of the Philippines because his pet, Otis, was not competent or just enough to treat them fairly. President McKinley is indicted by the same sentences that indicted the poor British king, and he has not even the Englishman's tinsel excuse of "sovereign right."

How long will the American people tolerate a state of affairs like that in the Philippines and China? How long will they suffer to be controlled by such enemies of the republic as Hanna?—Governor Pingree.

Vermont Points to Bryan.

Vermont has revealed to the Anglo-Republicans, if they did not know before, what the matter is with their party, and they will be still wiser in November, when, if Republican losses and Democratic gains should be in the same proportion throughout the country as they have been in Vermont, Bryan would be elected by a sweeping majority.—New York News.

are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

The McKinley colonial policy of subjugation of the Philippines is in part responsible by paralyzing the production of Manilla fiber, and two New Jersey trusts organized and protected under the McKinley dynasty do the rest.

In Minnesota under Governor Lind's administration of the State Twine Plant, competition has in part broken down trust prices.

There should be a reason for every act. When you select a family beverage you should know that it is pure, healthy and strengthening like "Golden Grain Belt" beer. Johnson or Dr. Blomburgh who were the victims that received the initatory and second degrees respectively. After the close of the session the visitors and local members repaired to A. F. THE NEXT PRESIDENT

Thousands of People Greeted W. J. Bryan at Crookston Last Saturday.

Everybody Satisfied and The Whole Ticket will Be an Easy Winner.

Between fifteen and twenty thousand people from northwestern Minnesota poured into Crookston last Saturday afternoon to welcome the next president of the United States—William J. Bryan. Special trains on all lines leading to Crookston began to arrivae afte dinner and each and every train was loaded down to their utmost capacity—three in a seat, aisls in every coach packed full and many were compelled to stand on the platforms. The St. Hilaire line being the shortest run turned out seven coaches filled full to the surprise of a few along this line, who who were heard to make the remark that "two coaches would hold all who wanted to see Bryan, Lind, Daly and that push." The Red Lake Falls crowd accompanied by their band remained here while the special went to Thief River Falls and return. The band rendered a few selections in front of the Hotel Markham which was duly appreciated by our townspeople. They have a first-class lot of boys in their band and play excellent music. Owing to the large crowd from Thief River the train was delayed about half an hour but came in with banners flying and their band playing one of the national airs and the whole crowd cheering. Some little time was taken for all to get on board, but once started they made remarkable quick time for this road. Only one stop was made and that at Wylie where about thirty-five from that vicinity boarded the train. The Crookston band met all incoming trains and played their best. Both bands from the St. Hilaire line fell in and the procession marched through the business portion of the city to the school grounds where Gov. John Lind, M. J. Daly and a number of candidates for state offices were to address the large assemblage. The first speaker was Hon. S. M. Owen, the father of populism in Minnesota, still in the prime of his vigor, however, as was proven by his earnest speech in which he elucidated the principles of the party's political faith. Senator Daly followed, speaking for 20 minutes upon the issue, touching particularly upon the trusts and the question of imperialism, and being given hearty applauses at the end of nearly every one of his well rounded periods. Mr. Daly made hosts of friends in this his first appearance before an audience in Crookston. M. E. Neary of Minneapolis, candidate for secretary of state on the fusion ticket, R. C. Sanders, candidate for attorney general, T. J. Knox, P. M. Ringdal followed in ten minute speechs each of which was well worth extended notice, and in all of which there was the true ring of patriotic sentiment. Then came the address of Governor Lind. This was what the waiting thousands had expected with high anticipations and the way they punctuated it with applauses, with shouts of approval, and tigers of commendation proved it was genuine manna to those who were hungry for sound logic and convincing argument. Gov. Lind said he desired to give an account of his stewardship, and he showed that his effort had been to administer the laws justly. The effort made to compel foreign corporations, the railway companies to pay their just proportion of taxes was gone over, the Sommerville law was touched upon, and Senator Daly commended for supporting it while Senator Ryder's vote against was the turn of the scale by which it was lost. The governor attacked State Auditor Dunn's administration of the public land matters, showed that the administration of the railway affairs by the commission had resulted in great good to the state, and stated that if he were reelected the people would not be called upon to pay a cent of state taxes all of which were now in fair way to be collected from railway companies and outside corporations. Gov. Lind was the last speaker on the afternoon program.

Mr. Bryan's special arrived at 7:35 in the evening. He was met at the depot by a committee consisting of Gov. John Lind, M. J. Daly and other notables and conveyed to the speakers stand under escort of members of the Bryan, Lind and Daly Club. The depot platforms, the open space surrounding it and the streets leading to the speakers' stand were jammed with an enthusiastic cheering crowd of people. The bands all played, and the ovation that greeted Mr. Bryan as he stepped from the car door resolved itself into one prolonged and mighty cheer. So anxious were the people to see him that it was with difficuly that a way was cleared for him to reach his carriage, and and when the procession started thousands of men surrounded the carriage in which he rode, and followed it until it stopped at the rear of the speakers' stand. Another mighty cheer went up as Mr. Bryan and Gov. Lind stepped upon the platform, which continued until Mayor Campbell stepped forward to introduce him. When Mr. Bryan stood before the crowd the cheering began again. He waited a moment, then held up his hand for silence and as soon as the cheering had subsided sufficiently for him to make himself heard he began his speech. At the outset Mr. Bryan captured his audience by saying: "I had intended to speak at several places in this state, but I do not see any use in doing so, since all the people are here. I am deeply obliged to Gov. Lind for bringing them here this afternoon, and am glad they havent been able to get out of town since.

At the outset Mr. Bryan announced that he would confine his remarks to the subject of trusts and imperialism. He quoted from Henry Clews Manual to show the increase in trusts and the increase in the prices of commodities controlled by them. He proved that no relief could be had at the hands of the republican party, for Mr. Hanna had defined the trusts on three counts. First there were no trusts, second the trusts were the natural evolution of business made necessary by the growth of the manufacturing interests of the country, and third that the people need not be afraid of them as the republican party would take care of them! The humor of that last proposition reminded Mr. Bryan of the fox in Æsop's fable who had suggested to the farmer that he (the fox) would look after the chickens while the latter went on with his agricultural pursuits.

After a scathing denunciation of the republican party for its position upon this question, Mr. Bryan turned to the subject of expansion and for 20 minutes he arraigned the present administration for its policy in regard to the Philippines. In closing he ridiculed the idea that we could not protect a people without governoring them and cited the fact that this had been done for the last 25 years in the case of the South American republics. If this country was so great a friend to the oppressed peoples, how could its course concerning the Boers be justified? It it could defy Spain why not England? The state department telegraphed messages of condolence when a king died, but had not a word to say when two South African republics were ruthlessly wiped off the earth. Mr. Bryan closed his speech amid wild cheering and was whirled away to the train and left for Duluth at nine o'clock.

AN UNMANLY ATTACK.

Moorhead (Rep.) News.

The republican papers are giving place in their columns to a cartoon representing, on one side, S. R. Van Sant shouldering his musket in 1861 as a common soldier, and on the other showing John Lind, clothed in the uniform of an officer, seated in an easy chair tilted back, with his feet cocked up on his desk, the picture of ease and contentment, the evident purpose being to represent Van Sant as the common soldier, the man of the people and Lind as a pampered official, and to thereby belittle his services to the country.

But it is not of the cartoon, which has neither originality or wit to recommend it, to which we propose to pay especial attention; it is to be the alleged cause assigned by the Republican press for the production of such a cartoon that we desire to call the attention of the voters of Clay county. It has been stated and widely circulated that Governor Lind calls S. R. Van Sant "a little tin soldier." Governor Lind promptly denied making such a remark, but that made no difference, of course. There was never a particle of foundation for the accusation against Governor Lind, consequently it could not be expected that those who are responsible for the trickery would pay any heed to the denial. The charge was made up out of whole cloth to prejudice the G. A. R. of the state against Lind and for the purpose of giving color of reason for the production of a cartoon which would tend to ridicule Governor Lind's service in the Spanish war. In doing this they are guilty of the meanest and most low lived act which the annals of the politics of the state afford. They know that Governor Lind volunteered for that branch of service in the army to which he way physically adopted and the decent mind cannot conceive of the depth of the baseness of the brain that conceived such an attack upon him nor of the moral turpitude of the persons who would publish it. Moreover, they are apparently unmindful of the fact that the services for which John Lind volunteered was the very service, the self same branch of service, upon which President McKinley's war record is founded, as noble a branch of service as any, for upon the proper conduct of this branch of service often depends the winning of battles.

The whole service to forcibly illustrate the dire extremity to which the Van Sant managers are driven in their campaign against Lind. Without a single peg upon which to hang a strong argument against him, they resort to an act which will, as sure as fate, be weighed in the balance against them on Nov. 6. The American citizen is, above all things, manly and quick to resent that which is unmanly, of which this whole attack savors.

Now, one word as to the man in whose interest his scurrilous cartoon is published. Had Van Sant stood by his guns as nobly in the legislature when the railroad bills were up as he unquestionably did in the civil war, the public might now have been spared this last sad spectacle, the spectacle of an aspirant for the governorship resorting to disreputable practice to belittle the standing of an opponent.

ALTGELT ON CONGRESS.

"There is a vast difference between a republican congressman at home and the same man when he is down in Washington and finds out what Mark Hanna wants him to do. If you desire legislation which will benefit you send men to Washington over whom Mark Hanna cannot wield the party lash. Send men who vote there as they talk here. The republican congressmen, including your own representative, voted every time, according to the congressional records, on the side of the trusts. If you send a republican back to Washington he will vote as the caucus tells him, and that will do the bidding of Hanna."

PE-RU-NA

Many a woman, sick and weary of life, dragged down by weakening drains, painful irregularities, depression, and the hundred and one ailments which affect women only, has found in Pe-ru-na a bright star of hope, which has changed her misery to joy, her suffering to health.

No woman need suffer from the derangements peculiar to her sex, if she will give Pe-ru-na a fair trial.

The majority of weaknesses which make woman's life a burden, spring from a simple cause. The mucous membrane which lines the pelvic organs becomes weakened and inflamed owing to strain, cold, overwork, etc. This causes catarrhal congestion, inflammation, painful irregularities, depression of spirits, irritability, weakness and suffering. It shows in the haggard lines of the face, the dull eyes, the sallow complexion and angular form.

For the prompt cure of such ailments try Pe-ru-na. It drives away "the blues," clears the complexion, brightens the eyes, changes thinness to plumpness, and cures pains, aches and drains, because it immediately strikes at the root of such troubles and removes the cause.

RAISE FOR MINERS

ONE COMPANY OFFERS A TEN PER CENT INCREASE.

Move Will Be Followed Tuesday by Every Colliery in the Anthracite Region — Expected by Operators That This Raise Will Be Satisfactory to the Men—Mine Owners Anticipate That There Will Be a General Resumption of All Collieries—Not Known if the Miners Will Accept.

Philadelphia, Oct. 1.—An offer of an increase of 10 per cent in miners' wages was yesterday offered by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company, and this move, it is stated, will be followed on Tuesday by every colliery in the anthracite region. It is expected by the operators that this increase in wages will be satisfactory to the men, and they believe many miners will take advantage of this rise and return to work. Mining operations will, in this event, be given an impetus and mine owners anticipate that there will be a general resumption of all collieries and that they will soon have their full complement of workers. The Philadelphia & Reading operate thirty-nine collieries, and of these twenty-seven have been shut down on account of insufficient operating forces. Whether the miners accept this increase and return in sufficient numbers to reopen the mines cannot be foretold now. Reports from Schuylkill, where the company's mines are located, rather indicate that the men will follow the advice of the United Mine workers and remain away from the collieries. President Mitchell was not informed officially of the advance in wages, and the intimation thus given is that the United Mine workers will receive no recognition from the mine owners.

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY.

Man Found at His Own Door With a Bullet in His Breast.

Plainview, Neb., Oct. 1.—A. D. Aikens, an old and respected resident of this vicinity, was found dead yesterday morning, at his own door and a bullet hole in his right breast told how his life ended. Mr. Aikens had been in town Saturday evening and started home about 9 o'clock, driving a team of horses. About two miles from town his hat was found in the road and his team wandered into a neighbor's yard a short distance from where the dead body was found. The body was first discovered by his wife, who first mistook it for a tramp who had fallen asleep by the roadside. The whole affair is shrouded in deep mystery. The dead man carried no firearms of any description and in his pockets, when searched, was found about $10 in money, thus doing away with the theory of robbery.

FALLS INTO RIVER.

Wisconsin Man Gets a Cold Bath Unexpectedly.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 1. — Martin Ward of Boyd, Wis., fell into the river at 1 o'clock yesterday morning and narrowly escaped being drowned. He has been in the city for a couple of days and on his way home from North Dakota. He wandered near the river about midnight and fell down the slip at the foot of Jackson street.

After floundering about in the river for a considerable time he managed to crawl ashore near the Milwaukee freight house. Officer White found him wandering about the railroad tracks chilled through by his cold bath. Ward was sent to the central police station, where he was attended by the city physician.

Relief.

It was with mingled emotions that the Arctic explorer beheld a relief expedition standing up the bay.

"To whom do you propose bringing relief?" asked the explorer, civilly.

"To the public," replied the expedition, with an insulting laugh.

Suiting the action to the word, they beat about, and left the explorer to starve to death.—Detroit Journal.

"That old man going by," said the landlord of the tavern at Yaphank to the Summer Man, indicating by a jerk of his thumb a bent and time-worn figure that was doddering down the village street, "is Uncle Zimri Tarpy. He's lived here all his life—'most eighty-six years."

"H'm!" commented the city man, with mild facetiousness. "He must like it here pretty well by this time!"

Ruskin on Woman's Dress.

When a woman walks around town with three or four yards of silk tied in a bundle behind her, she doesn't see it herself, or benefit by it herself. She carries it for the benefit of beholders. When she has put all her diamonds on in the evening, tell her to stay at home and enjoy them in a radiant solitude, and the child, with his forbidden barley sugar, will not look more blank. She carries her caparison either for the pleasure or the mortification of society, and can no more enjoy its brilliancy by herself than a chandelier can enjoy having the gas lighted.

"I could'nt Sew another Stitch to Save my Life."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night.

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time.

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause.

Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, "dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system.

For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you how grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhœa. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

MRS. SARAH SWODER

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."

HUNT WOMEN FOR SCIENTIST.

Whole Town Government Helps Prof. Starr in Ethnological Research.

Prof. Frederick Starr, of the University of Chicago, said to be the greatest modern student of Mexican ethnology, and a scientist who has probably measured more Otamies and learned more about their life and history than any other, speaking of how he obtains subjects to measure, says:

"In every case I present to the officials of a native village the peremptory orders from the governor of the district to give me all the assistance they can. I ask for 100 men and twenty-five women, because they give me as much trouble as 100 men. Besides, women take to the woods when white strangers appear, and have to be hunted out. If the village government hesitates about giving me the subjects, I threaten them with imprisonment, and sit down and wait.

"Presently a woman will be seen returning to the village. The town government immediately disappears, its members separate and gradually close in on the woman. A sudden dash, and she is captured, brought before me and held while I measure her. In this way I get my twenty-five female subjects. The men submit out of curiosity."—Chicago News.

HOW HE ASKED THE QUESTION.

An Election Bet Helps the Bashful Youth to Propose to His Best Girl.

He was a bashful youth, and when he tried to frame a proposal to the girl of his heart his tongue glued itself to the roof of his mouth and refused to be loosened.

One day they talked of politics. And then of political bets. His eyes suddenly brightened.

"Wh—what do you say," he stammered, desperately, "to making a little bet with me?"

"I've no objection," she sweetly answered.

"Then," he went on, "let's go ahead and make a bet. If McKinley is elected you w-will agree to m-marry me!" He could get no further.

But she nobly came to his rescue.

"I'll make a bet, too," she softly murmured. "If Bryan is elected you will agree to marry me."

There was a brief silence. Then a queer smile struggled across the face of the agitated youth. Another smile lighted the face of the happy maid.

"Why wait for the election returns?" he chuckled.

"Why, indeed?" she echoed.

So they were married the next week.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Froze His Hand in Summer.

To have his hand so badly frozen that amputation was for a time seriously considered when thermometers registered 100 degrees in the shade, has not been the experience of many men, yet Harry Knowles, a bartender in an Aberdeen, S. D., saloon, had this experience the other day.

For charging beer in kegs and forcing it to flow through the pipes in the bar faucet, carbonic acid gas is used. This comes in liquefied form, and is stored in cylinders strong enough to withstand a pressure of several thousand pounds to the square inch. These cylinders are usually charged to a pressure of about 1,500 pounds, and a safety plug is gauged to blow out at 2,400 pounds pressure. The gas is not unlike liquid air when it is permitted to escape and come in contact with the atmosphere, and creates a very low temperature.

The safety plug blew out of a cylinder in the saloon where Knowles was employed, when the proprietor was out, and, not understanding the nature of the gas, Knowles picked up a damp towel and attempted to hold it over the aperture and stop the flow of escaping gas. It took but a few moments to freeze the towel stiff, and the young man did not discover that the excessive cold had also badly frozen his hand until the proprietor stepped into the room and told him to let the gas go, as nothing could stop it. Knowles then discovered what happened to his hand. He put it in charge of a doctor, who says the hand will be saved, but the victim suffers a great deal of pain and will be laid up for several weeks.—Chicago Record.

Antiquity of Chewing Gum Habit.

A correspondent of the Popular Science Monthly calls attention to the following interesting passages in a letter written by Columbus shortly after his discovery of America:

"Finally, that I may compress in a few words the brief account of our departure and quick return and the gain, I promise this, that if I am supported by our most invincible sovereigns with a little of their help, as much gold can be supplied as they will need, indeed, as much of spices, of cotton, of chewing gum (which is only found in Chios), also, as much of aloeswood and as many slaves for the navy as their majesties will wish to demand."

The date of this letter is March 14, 1493, over 400 years ago, and it is very evident, from the inclusion of chewing gum in his list of products obtainable in the new country, that Columbus regarded it as an item of considerable importance; so we may fairly assume that the chewing gum habit was prevalent in Spain in 1492.

Abe's Opinion.

Long and earnestly they had argued in the grocery about the way in which the world would be destroyed. For four long, weary hours those residents of Sawville had set forth their theories.

And, finally, they had asked the opinion of old Abe Hartley, who, among them all, had remained silent.

Taking his pipe from his lips for one brief moment, he answered:

"It will probably be talked to death."

Without a word, the debaters led the way to the cider barrel, Abe bringing up the year.—Indianapolis Sun.

CONSIDER THE RAISE

MINE WORKERS WILL MEET IN CONVENTION.

Generally Believed That President Mitchell Will Call a Convention of the United Mine Workers to Consider the Offer of Increased Wages — Hasty Action on the Questions Will Not Be Reached by the Convention — Sheriff Says Strikers Must Refrain From Marching.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—It is the general belief that President Mitchell, of the United Mineworkers, will issue a call for a convention of United Mineworkers to consider the offer of increased wages to be held at Scranton, and the supposition is that Thursday next will be named as the time. Mr. Mitchell, however, declined to give publicity to the matters discussed by himself and other officials of the organization at a secret conference yesterday at Hazleton, and he gave no intimation as to when the convention would be held. This and other questions to be considered at the convention, were fully discussed at yesterday's conference.

Indications are coming to the surface that hasty action will not likely be reached on the questions by the convention, and recesses will be taken pending conferences of committees with the operators. These conferences will be requested for the purpose of reaching a clear understanding as to the permanency of the increased pay if accepted, and also to ascertain the operators' views on the proposition of the increase to be respectively allowed the miners and mine laborers.

Sheriff Harvey of Luzerne county yesterday, through President Mitchell, issued his ultimatum to marching strikers. He says he has been lenient with them heretofore, but that they must now refrain from marching, or take the consequences. President Mitchell assured him he would endeavor to have the men preserve the peace.

FOODS IN MEXICO.

Hundreds of Houses Swept to Destruction.

St. Louis, Oct. 8.—Telegraphic advices from Tampico, Mex., state that the Panuca and Tames rivers, which empty into the gulf at that place, are on one of the biggest rises in their history, and great damage has been wrought by the floods in the populated and cultivated valleys above there. At one point near Chile station on the line of the Mexican Central railroad, the Tames river is over fifty miles wide and has swept to destruction hundreds of houses occupied by Mexican farmers and laborers. Many cases of drowning are reported. All the tributaries of these rivers in the south and eastern parts of the State of San Luis Potosi are out of their banks and have washed away whole villages and ruined thousands of acres of growing crops.

UNDER UNITED STATES LAW.

Case in New York to Be Appealed on Novel Grounds.

New York, Oct. 8.—County Judge Smith Lent, at White Plains, N. Y., sentenced Charles Wood, who was a few days ago convicted of robbing a Fort Slocum soldier named Charles Smith of $35, and then leaving him for dead, to nineteen years' imprisonment in Sing Sing. His counsel will appeal the case on novel grounds, first that as the United States was at war with the Filipinos only the United States law prevailed in the case and the county court had no legal jurisdiction over soldiers.

Bourke Cockran Ill.

Kansas City, Oct. 8.—Bourke Cockran is quite ill with a cold and sore throat and has postponed a meeting at Leavenworth, Kan., advertised for to-night. Mr. Cockran arrived here last night from Topeka, where he Saturday night addressed a large gathering, and sought the services of a throat specialist. The physician called in said, Mr. Cockran's affliction was not of a serious character, and, although he talked with difficulty, the New York campaigner talked lightly of his ailment. Mr. Cockran says he will return to Leavenworth on Wednesday or Thursday night and make an address. He will start for Nebraska to-day, speaking en route if able.

In Memory of Parnell.

Dublin, Oct. 8.—The anniversary of the death of Charles Stuart Parnell, the Irish statesman, was celebrated yesterday by a small procession to Glas Nevin cemetery. The gathering was smaller than it had been on previous anniversaries. Messrs. John E. Redmond and Patrick J. O'Brien were present. Several wreaths were deposited upon the grave, including one from the widow.

Eight Persons Injured.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Eight persons were injured, one seriously, by a collision between a Calumet electric car and a south-bound Lake Shore & Michigan Southern train at Stoney Island avenue and Seventy-ninth street. The conductor says the accident was due to the fact that the motorman, who was a new man, did not bring the car to a stop before starting across the tracks.

Pleads Guilty to Burglary.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 8.—Charles Daley pleaded guilty to the charge of burglary before Judge Brindley, and was sentenced to one year at Waupun.

SWEPT BY CYCLONE

PART OF THE TOWN OF BIWABIK, MINN., IN RUINS.

Nine Lives Are Known to Have Been Lost and Many Received Injuries —Scores of Surprising and Hair-Breadth Escapes — Substantial Buildings Sucked Into the Cyclone's Mighty Vortex as So Much Straw — Mining Property Demolished—Masses of Debris Scattered Everywhere.

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 8.—The northwestern part of the town is in ruins and a path of wreckage 150 feet in width and more than a quarter of a mile long tells of the terrific fury of a cyclone traveling from southeast to northwest, which struck Biwabik late Saturday afternoon.

Nine lives were lost and many persons received serious injuries. The list of dead includes an entire family of six living two miles north of Biwabik. The remaining three lost their lives in the town. One of them, a Mrs. Marowitz, was found 400 feet from her home in a terribly mangled condition. Her husband was found a quarter of a mile away, and he, too, was Horribly Mutilated.

The property loss will reach $75,000. The shaft houses and buildings of three mines which stood in the path of the hurricane are a mass of kindling wood. Two little children and their sick mother, who was lying in her bed, had the roof and sides of their house lifted clear off the floor and blown away, only slightly injuring those inside. A score of other surprising and hair-breadth escapes from death occurred. The citizens of Biwabik furnished immediate relief to all in need. The cyclone was preceded by a wind and rain storm of terrible power. When the rapidly moving funnel-shaped cloud struck, so suddenly as to give almost no warning, the sound was deafening.

Ruin and Disaster

followed its course, and substantial buildings collapsed and were sucked into its mighty vortex as so much straw. Fragments of the buildings in its path were scattered all over the surrounding country. The duration of the cyclone was about three minutes. Plowing through the outskirts of town, the cyclone struck the Duluth mine, destroying two shaft houses, an engine house, blacksmith shop, dry house and three cars which stood near on a side track. The greater part of the debris was lifted clear of the ground, carried some distance and dumped into a pit. By an unexplainable circumstance, nearly all the employes managed to reach cover. The ground was swept as if with a broom at the Biwabik property and with incredible swiftness everything standing in the Austrian district, where the mine is located,

Was Demolished.

The engine house of the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern, near by, several cars and a locomotive, were shifted clear of the tracks and hammered into a mass of wreckage. Other instances of the diabolical fury of the hurricane were not wanting, and hardly a structure which stood in the path of the funnel has any portion remaining standing. Among the buildings destroyed were many houses owned by the mining companies and tenanted by their employes. A marvelous providence seems to have cared for these, and nearly all managed to reach places of safety without injury. For a mile northeast of town there are timbers and masses of debris scattered everywhere, which were caught up by the cyclone and dropped as its violence abated. Several open spaces present the appearance of a forest of gigantic toothpicks, so thick did the broken timbers and splintered boards fall.

TWO HUNDRED PEOPLE HURT.

Seven Thousand Five Hundred Pounds of Dynamite Goes Off.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 8.—A special to the News-Tribune from Eveleth, Minn., reports one of the largest explosions ever occurring in the state. Seven thousand five hundred pounds of dynamite in the powder magazine of the Spruce mine, about half a mile from town, blew up about 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A hole 100 feet square and twenty-five feet deep marks the spot where the magazine stood. The force of the explosion was so great that there is not a piece of glass over a foot square within a radious of two miles of the mine. Practically every window and mirror in Eveleth was broken, while in saloons all bottled goods were demolished. The damage done to the Spruce mine was about $3,000, the mine laboratory and warehouse being totally wrecked. At least 200 people were hurt more or less by being thrown down by the shock or hit by shattered glass. The explosion was plainly felt at Biwabik, twelve miles distant. The cause of the explosion is hard to ascertain. An unknown man was seen near the magazine a few minutes before it occurred, and it is believed that he was responsible, although it is pure guess work. At any rate the fellow has not been seen since. The only explosion equalling this occurred at Virginia, Minn., in 1894, when the Lake Superior Powder company's magazine exploded, destroying everything within two miles.

BLOOMINGTON FERRY TRAGEDY.

The Body of a Man Whose Clothes Were Found Is Recovered.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 8. — The body of the unknown man whose coat and cap were found on the river bank was taken from the Minnesota river near Bloomington Ferry yesterday. The body was found floating on the water within twenty feet of the place where the man was supposed to have met his death. This spot is a short distance below the bridge at Bloomington Ferry and adjoins a pasture, on the fence of which the man's clothing was found a week ago. Coroner Nelson visited the scene of the drowning and had the body brought to Minneapolis, where it will be held at the morgue awaiting identification. From appearances it is thought that the body had been in the water about a week. There was nothing on the remains by which they could be identified. The man was apparently of medium size, perhaps between thirty and thirty-five years of age. He was quite bald and had a mustache and a week's growth of beard. He wore a black sack, worsted coat, black trousers and pointed black lace shoes. He had a blue negligee shirt with narrow white stripe. It is presumed that he committed suicide in the river or that he possibly was drowned by accident. Coroner Nelson is inclined to believe that the man took his own life.

FREIGHT TRAIN IS WRECKED.

Collision on the Great Northern Results in the Death of One Man.

Marshall, Minn., Oct. 8. — Freight train No. 55, on the Great Northern, crashed into a work train one mile north of Marshall at 5 o'clock Saturday morning. A. E. Thomson, on the work train, a resident of Sioux City, and married, was killed. Brakeman Miller had his face and neck cut. No. 55 was on regular orders and was running at full speed. The work train was backing into Marshall slowly. The engineer of the freight train saw the red lights, but not in time to stop. The engineers and firemen on both trains jumped in time to escape injury. Both engines were wrecked.

HIGH WATERS ARE LOWERING.

Worst of the Flood Thought to Be Over in Wisconsin.

Wausau, Wis., Oct. 8.—The waters in the river and other streams in the country are falling. The worst of the flood is apparently over. Unharvested crops of corn, potatoes, buckwheat, etc., in the bottoms are almost a total loss. Washouts on the railroads are being repaired and trains are running about on schedule time again. Grand Rapids, Wis., reports the main street in that city flooded, and much damage has been done to merchandise. Many basements are flooded. The Reporter printing office and the Cahn Dry Goods company were the worst sufferers.

ROBBED IN SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

M. L. Hubbard of Mondovi, Wis., Leaves $12,200 in His Room.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 8. — M. L. Hubbard of Mondovi, Wis., a capitalist horse buyer and cattle buyer, was robbed of a gold watch, $200 in money, $2,000 in notes and a letter of credit issued by the Bank of Mondovi for $10,000. Mr. Hubbard was on his way to Idaho to buy horses and had stopped in the city to see the carnival. He left his money and securities in a pocketbook in his coat in his room, and when he returned it was gone.

Shot by a Fellow Sportsman.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 8. — J. R. Duus, real estate and insurance agent, was accidentally shot yesterday afternoon while hunting across the river in Nebraska by J. E. Smith, of the lumber firm of Loonan & Smith. They were hunting in company, but became separated. Smith fired at a rabbit in a clump of woods. Duus happened to be in line of the shot and received part of the discharge in the breast, making a serious wound.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 8.—L. C. McDonald, a brakeman in the employ of the Milwaukee railroad who was caught and crushed beneath the wheels of a train in the yards here July 25 last while uncoupling the airbrake hose between two cars, died in the hospital here yesterday.

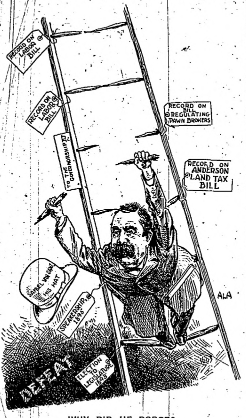
DOWNFALL OF A DODGER.



WHY DID HE DODGE?

WHY DID HE DODGE?

Van Sant Would Not Vote for Labor Bills and He Dared Not Vote Against Them.

Consistently Dodged on Bills Intended to Benefit Laboring Man and Farmer.

His Record Proves Him to Be the Puppet of Special Interests and Corporations.

The main reason, perhaps, why the candidacy of Captain S. R. Van Sant has aroused such a small amount of enthusiasm among the rank and file of the Republican party, is, that he is not the kind of man who can make strong and lasting friendships. As a fleeting acquaintance the captain is quite a success, being talkative, round, rosy and apparently a very genial gentleman. He has not much of importance to communicate, but he does it in a very impressive manner, and an audience is reasonably well amused with him for fifteen minutes or half an hour. Beyond that brief period, Captain Van Sant commences to pall, and the more extended the acquaintance, the greater the ennui the captain creates.

The cause of this is the fact that the captain does not possess that virile strength of moral fiber which puts into every act and word the sonorous vibration of truthful earnestness, and elicits a responsive thrill, from the minds and hearts of others. His character is not positive, but negative. When a problem is presented to him requiring decisive action, the captain judicially views both sides of the case, makes sure he is right and then runs away.

It is practically impossible to induce Captain Van Sant to take a bold position on any new matter which is in controversy. He would probably assert with considerable boldness that the earth is round, because that proposition is not seriously disputed by anyone.

He would today, probably, nod his head sagely and declare that he sympathized with the South African Republics in their struggle, but he knew it was a hopeless fight from the start, and, anyway, the Republican administration at Washington could not be expected to interfere. But when the question of this country intervening in behalf of the Boers was a new issue and President McKinley was feeling the pulse of the country to see if public sentiment would permit of the Boer appeals for help being denied Captain Van Sant was invited to publicly express his opinion on the question.

Not knowing which way the Republican cat was going to jump, the captain evaded the issue by suddenly and swiftly leaving the state and burying himself in some unknown recess in Wisconsin or Iowa. He dodged the question.

If Captain Van Sant had spoken out manfully at the time, no matter whether he cried "Hurrah for the Boers" or "Hooray for the British," he would have pleased one side or the other and have earned the respect of both. But as it was he pleased no one and lost the respect of all people who look with dislike upon a dodger.

The course pursued by Captain Van Sant in this matter furnishes the key to his lack of popularity and inability to evoke enthusiasm in his present gubernatorial campaign. And his unsatisfactory position on the Boer question is but an example of similar evasions and shirkings on his part in regard to other important questions during his public career.

Take the record of Captain Van Sant when he was a member of the state legislature of 1893. Of course, once in a while a member will be absent from a roll call by reason of sickness or more important business; but when the roll is being called on the final passage of important bills, it is the rule to summon all the members from the committee and cloak rooms, and only the most expert and deliberate of dodgers can or does evade voting. Yet Captain Van Sant succeeded in dodging the vote on a number of important measures—measures which, to hear him talk now, one would think were very near to his heart.

For instance, the captain protests that he is a great friend of the workingman. He told them so at considerable length last Labor Day. Yet when he was a member of the legislature in 1893 he dodged the vote on three measures of the first importance to the cause of labor, when the bills came up on three separate occasions, for their final passage. The captain was not kept away by sickness, for he is never sick. He neither chews, drinks, smokes, swears or is sick, according to the Pioneer Press. He has no vices to quit except one, and that is his ineradicable propensity to dodge, especially to dodge the vote on labor bills.

Everybody knows that Captain Van Sant is a large employer of labor, and no one would have been surprised if he had expressed views inimical to the measures in question and manfully clinched his opinions by voting against the bills. But he didn't even take that position. He simply dodged. One of these bills on which Captain Van Sant failed to vote was Senate File 266, a bill to compel street railway companies to protect certain of their employes from the inclemencies of the weather by inclosing the ends of their cars with vestibules. This is one of the bills which the Republican State Auditor, Hon. R. C. Dunn, in a recent speech, referred to as "a meritorious measure" for which the workingmen should thank the Republicans. There were five Republican votes cast against it in the house, but not a single Democratic or Populist vote. They were all for it—but Captain Van Sant dodged the vote entirely. If it had depended upon him, the street car drivers, motormen and conductors would be exposed to the wind, rain, hail, snow, heat and cold today, as they were prior to the passage of this "meritorious measure." Another measure of vital interest to labor, on which Captain Van Sant dodged the vote was House File No. 36, a bill making it a misdemeanor on the part of employers to require as a condition of employment the surrender of any rights of citizenship. This bill was designed to prevent the blacklisting of employes who might be members of labor organizations. It is another of those meritorious labor measures for which the Hon. R. C. Dunn so modestly gave the Republican party credit. It was introduced by Mr. Walsh, a Democrat from Ramsey county, and when the roll was called on its final passage Captain S. R. Van Sant, the present Republican candidate for Governor, dodged the vote. There was only one vote cast against it and that was by a Republican, G. W. Benner of Mower county, and the workingmen had a better opinion of Mr. Benner than they had of the man that dodged.

The third labor bill which Captain Van Sant failed to cast his vote, either for or against, was House File 95, a bill to provide for the protection of employes. This time the captain did not even have the excuse that it was introduced by a Democrat, for the father of the bill was Mr. Wyman of Minneapolis. But for some unknown reason Captain Van Sant disliked to vote on labor measures. He would not vote for them and he dared not vote against them, so he dodged. He therefore dodged the vote on the final passage of House File 95, an act to which no person of humane instincts, whether he be a large employer of labor or not, could possibly object. It simply provides for the fencing of all dangerous machinery, tools and material so that the chance of injury to employes would be reduced to a minimum. But Captain Van Sant would not vote for such a measure and he did not think it safe to vote against it, so he dodged the vote.

It may have been a coincidence that the captain failed to vote for or against these three important labor measures, but if it was so, if for some reason he was unable to be present when the roll was called on the final passage of these bills, the captain could have signified his approval or disapproval of them and had the same recorded in the House Journal by making the simple statement to the speaker when the Journal was read the mornings following the passage of these measures that he desired to be recorded as voting for or against, as the case might be.

But such directness would have been contrary to the captain's genius. He was content to dodge.

House File 324, a bill to prohibit pawnbrokers to charge more than 10 per cent interest, was another measure that called for another exhibition of Captain Van Sant's agility when the roll was called on the final passage of the bill. If only for the purpose of satisfying the insatiable curiosity of the public the captain should now explain why he dodged this bill. Why did he not vote either for or against? Why should not pawnbrokers be limited to ten per cent, or even less? Or to state it in another way, why should pawnbrokers not be allowed to charge more than ten per cent interest? A straightforward answer to any of these questions by the captain would perhaps explain why he dodged the vote on the bill in 1893.

Captain Van Sant is very free in denouncing trusts and combinations today, but in 1893 he had a chance to vote on a measure, House File 874, a bill to increase the punishment of persons violating the law of 1891, prohibiting pools and trusts by providing for the imprisonment of the offender in case of conviction. The captain was not as strong an anti-trust man in 1893 as he is now as election is pending, so when the roll was called on House File 874 the captain dodged the vote with his customary grace and swiftness.

Senate File No. 577, was a joint resolution introduced in the legislature of 1893, providing for the appointment of a legislative committee to investigate certain frauds upon the state in relation to the sale of public lands of the state. This was the commencement of the celebrated "Pine land investigation," and was probably the most important act of the whole session. From a party standpoint, if from no higher motive, the captain should have recorded his vote on this resolution. The only excuse a man could have for voting against such a resolution was that he had been concerned in some way in the larceny of the state's pine timber. But evidently the captain had not even such an excuse as that, for he dodged the vote altogether.

The results of that investigation are well known, and the passage of the resolution marked the period since which it has been both dangerous and expensive to steal pine timber from state land. But Captain Van Sant cannot enjoy any of the credit for this very desirable result, nor can he claim any gratitude from the dishonest lumber firms for fighting their battles and opposing the resolution, because he dodged the vote.

There were several bills affecting railroads, the vote on which the captain found it convenient to dodge. Senate File 127, requiring railroads to give notice of the time when belated trains will arrive; House File 340, which provides for the interchange of cars at junction points, and House File 274, providing for the stoppage of trains at county seats. Captain Van Sant dodged the vote on all three measures, and it is now due the people that he should explain why the public is not entitled to know when delayed trains will arrive; why railroads should not make an interchange of cars and why people living at Pine City and other county seats should not enjoy a decent train service?

And now the Republican managers are wondering why there is so little enthusiasm among the rank and file of the party over the candidacy of Captain Van Sant. The reason is not far to seek. The captain has never helped the friends or fought the enemies of his political friends or his party unless the battle had already been won by someone else. He has systematically dodged every important public measure or question which has come before him during his public career. In 1893 he dodged the vote on House File 502 and House File 56, two bills which provided for the erection of grain elevators on the right of way of railroads and the construction of sidetracks to elevators near the right of way, measures which became laws without the captain's vote, and which have done more to prevent monopoly and preserve the freedom of the country grain markets than any other laws on the statute books.

Captain Van Sant also dodged the vote on House File 674, a bill declaring express companies common carriers and subject to regulation the same as railroads.

The list of measures on which the captain dodged the vote is a long one, but there is one more which should be mentioned, and that is Senate File 114, which provided for the submission to the vote of the people of a constitutional amendment authorizing the levy and collection of a tax on inheritances. There is but little excuse for the member of the legislature who votes against giving the people the privilege of voting for or against an amendment to the constitution, and there is no excuse at all for the member who dodges the vote on such a proposition. The captain dodged the vote, however. Why, is not known.

The people of Minnesota cannot enthuse over a confirmed dodger. They can admire a man who is sturdily against them, and perhaps forgive him some day, but there is no forgiveness for the dodger. They will say to him as was said to the Laodiceans: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth."

"There are good trusts and bad trusts," yells Beveridge. Yes, but as the good die young, evidently none but the bad ones have survived.

WELLINGTON'S CRIME.

He Has Abandoned Imperialism For the Principle of Liberty.

The defection of Senator Wellington of Maryland troubles the administration Republicans because, as members of their national committee admit, it means that McKinley has no chance of carrying that state.

Therefore it was in order for the Republicans to send a gang to the Bryan mass meeting at Cumberland to interrupt and hiss and insult the senator who declines to become an "imperialist" at the bidding of William McKinley. "Benedict Arnold!" yelled one of the gang of patriots. By that he meant to say, of course, that Wellington was the worst of traitors.

He is a traitor not to his country, not to the principles of free government, but to imperialism and its chief exponent, William McKinley, and the party who supports him. He has committed the unpardonable sin of abandoning a party which has ceased to be republican to become imperial.

That is his treason in the view of Republican leaders and the gang they sent to insult him in Cumberland.

The proof of this we have in the fact that the same gang did not insult Bryan when he denounced imperialism even more strongly than Wellington did. That meant that there was no treason in denouncing imperialism, but that there was treason in abandoning the imperial party and going over to the party of liberty.

Mr. Bryan paid a noble tribute to Wellington, such as he might, had he been living then, have paid to Patrick Henry at the close of the memorable speech in the course of which a creature of King George yelled "Treason!" at that early patriot.

With that tribute ringing in their ears minions of imperialism were abashed and silent. Who dares say that the gospel of liberty is not still a mighty force in this land of ours?

Mr. Olney's Conversion.

Richard Olney's conversion to the Bryan cause is in some respects the most notable event in the campaign up to date. Mr. Olney was one of the ablest men in Cleveland's cabinet. He is a Boston man, identified with many interests commonly supposed to be antagonized by the Kansas City platform. But he is a Democrat. He was the author of the Venezuela message, wherein he made Grover Cleveland defy the British government to the point of war to try to extend its territory in South America. Such a man is not likely to give his support to an administration that voluntarily hauled down the American flag over American territory in Alaska. It is the final test. No American deserving the name can do more than Mr. Olney has done. The brains and heart of the American people go with the stanch New England American.

> Imperialism involves a departure from principles which were universally accepted in this country until within two years. To know that all men are created equal one needs not the wisdom of a sage or the learning of the schools. It was declared to be a self evident truth; it was evident to those who pledged their lives to the maintenance of the Declaration of Independence, and it is evident still to those who are not blinded by the glamour of wealth and the glittering promises of a colonial system. If all men are created equal and endowed with inalienable rights, it follows as a logical and necessary sequence that governments were instituted for the welfare of all and derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. On the preservation of this doctrine our hopes depend. If it is abandoned, there is no foundation upon which a government like ours can be constructed.—W. J. Bryan.

GOOD READING FOR M'KINLEY.

Wisdom From the Scriptures and Washington's Farewell Address.

A number of women who find fault with President McKinley's "good Lord, good devil," course on the temperance question have been sending out an endless chain of prayer for his defeat at the polls in November, says the New York News. We respectfully suggest that, without neglecting the prayer chain, they ought to urge McKinley to read the Bible and especially the following verses in Proverbs:

"He that passeth by and meddleth with strife belonging not to him is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.

"It is an honor for a man to cease from strife, but every fool will be meddling.

"Strive not with a man without cause if he hath done thee no harm.

"Envy thou not the oppressor and choose not of his ways."

This course in Scripture reading might be followed by a careful study of Washington's farewell address and especially the following part of it:

"Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of Republican government."

Washington could not have written more to the point if he had foreseen McKinley's British alliance and his plot to assist Great Britain in destroying the Boer republics.

"The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations," continued the Father of Our Country, "is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

"Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?"

Is McKinley greater than Washington that he dares to incur risks from which Washington shrank and against which he warned Americans, or is McKinley's British alliance another illustration of the saying that "fools rush in where angels fear to tread?"

"Prosperity" Pointers.

Wages of mill operatives and factory hands all over the country are being cut down or the mills are being shut down by reason of overproduction, which the Republican campaign managers have been pointing to as a specimen of "McKinley prosperity."

The "full dinner pail" argument of the Republicans is no longer a powerful one to conjure with. "A full dinner pail" means an empty pocketbook, for the workingman is fortunate if he has anything left after he has filled his dinner pail to provide the high price necessities of life for his family.

If you can in one administration multiply your standing army by four and make it 100,000 instead of 25,000, will it not be easier for the next administration to multiply it by four and make it 400,000 instead of 100,000?—W. J. Bryan.

Unpleasantly Surprised.

The British alliance McKinley Republicans are almost as much surprised at the Democratic gains in the Green Mountain State as the British commander at Ticonderoga was when Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain boys demanded his surrender "in the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental congress."

McKinley and Silver.

The present ratio is 16 to 1, and at that ratio Mr. McKinley is coining silver at the rate of over $1,000,000 per month. During the four years of his administration he has coined about $50,000,000, but then William always did believe in silver if one may place any trust in what he said.

Ordinary citizens of the United States have no rights which trusts and millionaires are obliged to respect.

This is the principle of the party of Mark Hanna, McKinley, the Standard Oil company and the late Collis P. Huntington, and the refusal by a Standard Oil magnate named Rogers to permit Mr. Bryan's car to be attached to a train on the Ohio River railroad, of which Rogers is president, is simply in a line with that principle. The trust gluttons of wealth and power feel keenly the shafts which the people's champion is aiming at their fortress of monopoly, oppression and extortion, and they take care to miss no opportunity to vent their spite against him and the cause which he advocates with an eloquence and ardor that seem almost inspired from above.

To deny to a citizen because he is the candidate of the Democracy for president of the United States the use of a railway created under a public franchise for the public benefit may seem a small matter, but it is not. It shows the length to which the trust usurpers and conspirators will go to crush the political independence of the American people. It points to the future of the American nation should McKinley be re-elected and the Anglo-Republican party be sustained in its plot to overthrow a government of the people, for the people and by the people, and inaugurate an oligarchy of trusts, a reign of imperialism and militarism.

If William Jennings Bryan can be flouted and insulted in this way by an arrogant Standard Oil trust magnate, what chance would the ordinary citizen have should he happen to step in the path of trust millionaires after McKinley's re-election? Swollen with the pride of victory, they would look upon the common workingman as a nobody, to be flung to the earth if he dared to look at them and to be blacklisted and driven to starvation or exile should he dare to disobey them.

The liberty of the American people is at stake in this election. It is not merely a question of politics; it is a question whether this millionaire Rogers and others of his kind shall be permitted to rob the people of their independence and to establish a system of industrial slavery in place of free competition and liberty.—New York News.

"Mr. Oil Trust will now sing the beautiful ballad entitled 'We Never Can Get Enough.'"

—New York Journal.

The laboring man has abundant reason to fear the trusts. Mr. Charles R. Flint, in a speech delivered in Boston more than a year ago in defense of the trusts, frankly asserts that one of the advantages of those combinations is that "in case of local strikes or fires the work goes on elsewhere, thus preventing serious loss." Is it possible that any wage earner can fail to see how completely the trust places the employee at the mercy of the employer?—W. J. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan Free From Bitterness.

Mr. Bryan's campaign utterances have so far been distinguished by strength, moderation and thoughtfulness. He is devoid of bitterness, and, while keen to expose the weak points of his opponents, he is careful to do so simply as a thinker and a debater, with none of the offensiveness that has characterized the speeches of one of the Republican campaign star performers.

These Full Dinner Pails.

Newtown, Conn., is threatened with extinction by the closing of its only industry, the support of 350 operatives and their families. The rubber trust runs the plant and finds it of advantage to concentrate the business at its other points. This will empty 350 dinner pails.

The Republican party, which was not willing that a black [illegible] should be sold for $1,000, now [illegible] is that a Filipino can be bought for $2.50. The principle is exactly the same.—W. J. Bryan.

The farmers are becoming desperate lately since so many politicians button-hole them and talk about McKinley and prosperity. No plowing done to speak of and in many cases grain rotting in the field. Under these circumstances its pretty hard to make a farmer swallow the prosperity fake you hear so much about. They might as well say the farmer knows nothing about his own business.

James Gilbertson and A. A. Erickson, two prosperous farmers living a few miles east of St. Hilaire were in the village last Thursday and made this office a pleasant call. There is practically no threshing done so far and only three machines in the whole country to do the work.

Alex. Van Praag, grand master for Minnesota of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will make our lodge an official visit sometime this month. Every member of this lodge should make it a point to be present.

O. Finberg, proprietor of the Hotel St. Hilaire arrived yesterday and has men at work renovating and otherwise improving the inside and outside preparatory to opening it to the public in the course of two or three weeks. It will be a first-class house in every respect.

There was a noticeable change in the attitude of the republican managers just as soon as they got the tip that Hanna had all the money he wanted. Instead of talking doubtfully of the result of the elections, both Presidential and Congressional, they began to blow, making the most ridiculous claims as to the number of electoral votes that McKinley will get and the number of republican Congressman that will be elected.

The boodle stage of the campaign has been reached, and the head has been knocked out of the republican barrel. Hanna's recent visit to the eastern headquarters of the big trusts filled the barrel to overflowing. In every doubtful state and Congressional district every vote that can be had for money is to be bought. These are not mere assertions. They are hard facts, of which the democrats have been warned by chairman Richardson, of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, and by Mr. Richard Croker of New York, both of whom know of the enormous amount of money secured by Hanna, and judge by the way he spent millions in 1896 how he intends to spend it. It is not easy to prevent some buying and selling of votes among those who are unprincipled enough to engage in such a traffic, but vigilence on the part of democrats may greatly lesson the number bought and sold, as every state provides a heavy penalty for the crime.

We listened to several Republican speakers at Grand Forks the other evening and each and every one of them said prosperity was the issue of the campaign and not imperialism and trusts. The administration was made responsible for the present alarming condition of prosperity. We will bet that more than half of the business men in the audience were not certain that their personal condition of prosperity was such that they would be able to get through the next six months and the great majority of the farmers did not know where the money was coming from to pay taxes and interests, to say nothing of living expenses for the coming year. It is a great thing, this condition of prosperity, for which the opposition claim McKinley is responsible. It would not take many years of it to turn our farm houses into poor houses and our merchants into bankrupts. How much is there in this prosperity cry? Ask yourself.—Pink Paper, Bathgate, N. D.

I take it for granted that no one Minnesota farmer would consider for a moment the idea of farming without the necessary implements. Still, costly as an agricultural outfit is, the average farmer gives his implements very poor, if any, protection against the inclemency of the weather and the consequence is, he is obliged to buy a set of new implements every five or six years while if they are properly protected they would last nearly twice as long. If you do not feel able to buy both implements and lumber for a shed, try and borrow a machine somewhere and with the money thus kept back by all means buy material and build a shed. For from fifty to one hundred dollars (depending on the cost of material) a very commodious and substantial shed can be set up, while every farmer well knows how speedly he must halt if he goes, with the above sum in his pocket to purchase farm machinery.—C. H. in Dakota Farmer.

The drink question is settling itself. Nothing is good or bad simply because somebody calls it so. Cheap Spell-Binders.

The following is the way the Pelican Rapids Press, a republican paper published in Otter Tail county goes after the committee:

The Republican Committee have decided to ask no aid from the three Republican papers in the county this year in conducting the campaign. The state committee are calling upon all the republican papers in the state of space, and have appropriated money to the various county committees, with the expectation that the various committes will provide for the republican papers of their counties. The action of the Republican county committee would indicate that they do not believe that the people of this county read the newspapers. They have an ample campaign fund of some $2,000, a part of which comes from the state central committee. With this money they are employing a large number of cheap "spellbinders" at about $15 a week to travel through the county and "josh" the farmers and perform the "spellbinders" act at the country school houses.

We are willing to submit to the people of this county if the employment of a $15-a-week "spellbinder" is not a libel upon the intelligence of the people of Otter Tail county. The great majority of farmers are better posted in general politics than the average fifteen-dollar-a-week "spellbinders." Don't it.

Peculiar Occupation For Which Only Few Are Qualified.

The ham smeller's only tools are a long steel trier and his nose. He stands in a barrel to keep his clothes from being soiled by the dripping brine, and the hams are brought to him, and he plunges his sharp pointed trier into them, withdraws it and passes it swiftly beneath his nose. The trier always goes down to the knuckle joint.

In testing meat in that manner the man with the trier judges by the slightest shade of difference between the smell of one piece of meat and another. The smell of the meat is almost universally sweet, and that is what he smells. The slightest taint or deviation from the sweet smell is therefore appreciable. It is not the degree of taint that he expects to find, but the slightest odor that is not sweet.

When he detects an odor, he throws the meat aside, and if it is not unwholesome it is sold as "rejected" meat, but if it is tainted it goes to the rendering tank. The ham tester smells meat from 7 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock at night, and his sense must never become jaded or inexact or his usefulness would be at an end.

Ham testing is not a pursuit dangerous to the health, as tea testing is supposed to be, but the ham smeller with a cold in his head is like a piano player who loses his arm in a railroad wreck.

ALTGELT ON CONGRESS.

"There is a vast difference between a republican congressman at home and the same man when he is down in Washington and finds out what Mark Hanna wants him to do. If you desire legislation which will benefit you send men to Washington over whom Mark Hanna cannot wield the party lash. Send men who vote there as they talk here. The republican congressmen, including your own representative, voted every time, according to the congressional records, on the side of the trusts. If you send a republican back to Washington he will vote as the caucus tells him, and that will do the bidding of Hanna."

"There was in the old days far less wear and tear upon the nerves, and, under such conditions, digestion was more completely performed," writes Mrs. S. T. Rorer of "Why I Am Opposed to Pies," in The Ladies' Home Journal. "The mothers of today must look more carefully to the building of their bodies and brains than their mothers and grandmothers did. Indeed at the pace at which we Americans are going we use our brains at full speed nearly all the time. What man can build brain and brawn on pies, layer cakes or preserves or any other mass of material which from its very complexity requires labor and time for digestion, drawing the blood from the brain to the stomach during his working hours? Observe those who eat their complex foods carelessly and hastily and you will see at a glance the conditions that necessitate a complete rest every now and then, or an early nervous breakdown.

"In my close observation in the last 20 years I find very few people in our common struggle for existence who can for any length of time eat carelessly of complex foods. At 40 or 50 a man may perhaps have accumulated wealth, but not health, and of what earthly use is the first without the second? Many persons in the generation gone before have eaten pies at least once a day, but they have not had meat three times a day, nor have they rushed at our pace. They gave more time to the digestion of the pie. People who recommend these rich foods rarely know anything of their complex conditions and still less of the complexity of digestion."

Letters of Introduction.

"I disapprove of letters of introduction," said an elderly New Orleans business man, to the Times Democrat anecdotist, "and I won't give one under any circumstances. They are bad form and border close on downright impertinence. What right have I, for example to thrust a perfect stranger on my friend John Smith of Memphis or Chattanooga, without having at least asked Mr. Smith's permission or ascertained whether the introduction would be mutually agreeable? Then, again, such letters always mean either too little or too much. Most of us give them almost as freely as we give good advice, without the least idea of incurring any responsibility; yet a letter of introduction is, or ought to be, an absolute indorsement of the bearer, and the recipient would be justified in holding the writer strictly accountable for any abuse of his hospitality. I believe this view is unassailable, but I must confess I stopped writing letters of introduction myself on account of a little contretemps that has nothing to do with the proprieties of the question.

It happened in this way: A certain friend asked me to give a letter to a young Englishman, introducing him to a former business partner of mine, now living in Louisville. I didn't want to do it, but lacked moral courage to refuse; so I wrote two letters—one the introduction requested and the other a brief note to the Louisville man, explaining the circumstances and saying that I didn't really know whether the Englishman was a gentleman or a horsethief. Two days later I got a telegram from my old partner, saying that he had received a letter of introduction by mail and was at a loss to know what to make of it. I had put the two inclosures in the wrong envelopes, and had given the Englishman the private note of reputation." "I suppose he read it, of course," remarked some one in the group of listeners. "That's just what has been troubling me ever since," replied the old merchant; "I dont know whether he did or not. He presented it without turning a hair, and if he knew the contents he certainly made no sign. At least that is the report of my friend, who was so surprised when he ran his eye over the epistle that he nearly fell out of his chair. All this happened four years ago, and I haven't written a letter of introduction since. I wouldn't meet that Englishman again for a thousand-dollar bill, because, if I did, I wouldn't know whether to shake hands or get ready to fight."

Notes from the Paris Exposition.

"The Singer Manufacturing Company, of 149 Broadway, New York, show their usual American enterprise by having a very creditable exhibit, located in Group XIII, Class 79, at the Paris International Exposition, where they show to great advantage the celebrated Singer Sewing-Machine which is used in every country on the globe, both for family use and for manufacturing purposes. The writer was highly pleased with this display and observed with much satisfaction that it was favorably commented upon by visitors generally.

The Grand Prize was awarded by the International Jury to Singer Sewing-Machines for superior excellence in design, construction, efficiency and for remarkable development and adaption to every stitching process used in either the family or the factory.

Only One Grand Prize for sewing machines was awarded at Paris, and this distinction of absolutely superior merit confirms the previous action of the International Jury at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, where Singer machines received 51 distinct awards, being more than were received by all other kinds of sewing machines combined.

Should it be possible that any of our readers are unfamiliar with the celebrated Singer Machine, we would respectfully advise that they call at any of the Singer salesrooms which can be found in all cities and most towns in the United States."

Saxe's Mistake Explained.

Here is a story of John G. Saxe, the poet wit: During the war Saxe attended a flag-raising at Greenbush, a little place across the river from Albany, and made a speech, in which he commended the patriotism of the young men of Greenbush, through whose exertions the flag had been procured. The chairman of the meeting whispered to him that the young ladies of Greenbush had also been instrumental in raising funds for the purchase of the flag. Thereupon, Mr. Saxe, addressing the young ladies of Greenbush, made them a graceful and gallant apology for not including them in his praise. "I don't know how I came to make such a mistake," he exclaimed, "save as I may have been laboring under the impression that the young men of Greenbush embraced the young ladies of Greenbush."—New York Mail.

"Beg pardon," replied the haughty servant.

"Haven't you any conscience—conscience—conscience? Don't you understand?"

The waiter picked up the bill of fare and began looking it over.

"I don't know if we have or not. If we have it's on the bill; if it ain't, you've got to pay extra for it. Them's the rules, sir."—Spare Moments.

Found Byron's Skull Cup.

The drinking cup, fashioned out of a human skull, which was constantly used by the poet Byron, has been found beneath the floor of the chapel at Newstead Abbey. The cup has a remarkable history. The story goes that while living at Newstead, Lord Byron found a human skull of large dimensions and peculiar whiteness. He concluded it belonged to some jolly old soul of a friar, and he resolved to convert it into a drinking vessel. Accordingly, he dispatched it to London, where it was elegantly mounted. On its return to Newstead Byron instituted a new order at the abbey, constituting himself "Abbot of the Skull."—London Daily Mail.

GOV. LIND DECLARES

UNDER NO CONDITION WILL HE BECOME A CANDIDATE FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

Would Consider It Political Dishonesty If He Were to Become a Candidate For the United States Senate In Case He Should Not Be Elected Governor—That Republican Spellbinder—Irreproachable Record of the Present Administration—Bureau Notes, Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 8, 1900.

Governor Lind has made a declaration and it is one that admits of no misunderstanding, misinterpreting or juggling. It is such a one as could not be expected otherwise from a man whose reputation for honesty and moral integrity is as irreproachable as that of Governor Lind.

It was at Benson, Minn., during one of the most successful meetings of the campaign. In introducing the governor, Chairman Julius Thorson referred to his record in very favorable terms and added the statement that his friends hoped to see him elevated to a seat in the upper house of congress. In reply to this allusion the governor made the following plain statement:

"I am not, never have been, nor do I expect to be a candidate for the United States senate. I am a candidate for governor, and if elected governor, will serve out my term. Any other course would be politically dishonest. While I appreciate the kind words of the chairman, I wish to make this statement as emphatic as possible, that there may be no misunderstanding."

A mere, common, self-seeking politician might have been tempted to shift and temporize and consider his own immediate interests, but for a man whose record has earned for him the title of "Honest John" no other course was possible or even to be thought of.

It is nice to be good at figures. A man who is good at figures can prove a thing and then turn around and prove the exact opposite with equal dispatch and felicity. An example to the point in question is the Republican spellbinder of whom the Republican press exaltingly announces that he "fired a deadly volley" into the state administration. However, the funeral has not been announced yet, and gifts of flowers would be decidedly provious.

After a good deal of hard figuring, the gentleman makes it appear that the grain inspection under Mr. Reishus has cost $30,000 more last year than it did two years ago under Mr. Clausen. The only wonder is why he didn't go back a year or two further, or even five or ten years. If he had, he could have gotten a much better showing for his side than what he has now.

Why didn't he tell us that the cost of the department in 1900 was $15,000 greater than in '97, or $47,000 greater than in '96, or $74,000 greater than in '95. If he had only carried the iridescent logic of his reasoning out to the bitter end, he would have told us that in 1900 the department cost $221,000 more than it did the year before it was started, which in point of fact would have been indisputable, but as an argument it would have been an absurdity.

By a very simple process of subtraction, we find that the cost of the department in '96 was $27,000 greater than in the preceding year; for '97 the increase is $2,000; for '98 it is $15,000, and for '99, the last year of Clausen's regime, the cost of the department was $22,000 over the preceding year, so that the expense of the department in '99 were $66,000 more than in '95. Making an average increase of $16,500 a year. But our Republican spellbinder will not let us consider the last year of Clausen's regime, because he worked under a Democratic governor that year.

Now just why a Republican grain inspector should be obliged to spend more on his department under a Democratic governor than under a Republican governor, surpasses the understanding of an average citizen. A good, staunch Republican no doubt can easily see it, but a common, average citizen would be inclined to think that according to the laws of human nature, the Democratic governor would be inclined to keep a Republican grain inspector under him on as short an allowance as possible. But even if we throw out the year '99, we still find that in '98 the department cost $44,000 more than in '95, making an average increase of nearly $15,000 a year. And so if the gentleman tells us that during the past year the cost of the department was $30,000 more than it was two years ago, he merely tells us that the expenses have increased at an average of $15,000 a year, the the same rate of increase that had prevailed during the last five years of the Republican administration, an increase which is founded on the natural growth of the department.

Everybody knows that more elevators are built and more scales are put in every year, and state weighers and inspectors are required in each elevator; and consequently the expenses of the department have constantly increased. Moreover, the expenses do not depend merely on the size of the crop. As Mr. Clausen, Mr. Reishus' Republican predecessor, himself has said, it costs more to inspect a poor, unsatisfactory and uneven crop, like the one we had this year, than a big, fine crop.

But this is not all. The Republican spellbinder insists on adding the cost of the Board of Appeals, amounting to $14,000, to the expenses of the grain inspection department of the present year. But this Board of Appeals is a new institution, established by the law of '99, and being a new institution, it naturally requires an extra appropriation to support it.

In comparing the expenses of the department with former years, it is therefore no more than fair to leave out this extra item, and this will leave the expenses $2,000 less than in '99, and only $16,000 more than in '98. In other words, the increase of the expenses for two years under Governor Lind was only $10,000, while under the Republican administration the average increase in the expenses was $15,000 a year, or $30,000 for two years.

Before the joint legislative committee of the last legislature, Mr. Clausen and his subordinates themselves admitted that they had made the grading of wheat more severe early in the season, and had gradually made it more liberal as the season advanced; in other words, in the fall when the farmer sold, the standard of grading was high and the farmer received a low grade on his wheat and a correspondingly lower price; but later in the season when the wheat was sold out of the elevators and warehouses, the standard of grade was low and the wheat received a comparatively higher grade, and brought a comparatively higher price, the profits of which went into the pockets of the warehouse and elevator men. The gross injustice of such a practice is apparent to every one, and no farmer can view it with feelings other than those of bitterest resentment.

It was Governor Lind that put a stop to this flagrant abuse, and determined that the grades on wheat shall be maintained with the same integrity and fidelity at all times for the protection of seller and buyer alike; that the standard of grading shall not be high at one time and one place, and low at another time and another place; that there shall be no discrimination against the farmer, and in favor of the elevator and warehouse men.

And now comes a Republican spellbinder and calls upon the people of Minnesota to repudiate Governor Lind, and put in his place a man who showed his hostility to the interests of the farmer by dodging the vote on the bill which provided for the erection of grain elevators on the right of way of railroads, and the construction of side tracks to elevators near the right of way of railroads; measures which became law, without the captain's vote, and which have done more to keep the grain market out of the clutches of monopoly than any other laws on the statute books. These bills the captain did not want to vote for and he did not dare to vote against them, so he dodged. The captain will probably say that he forgot to vote, but the farmer will not forget.

In no department of the state has the excellent business judgment of Governor Lind been more apparent than in the management of the state twine plant. In spite of being obliged to buy at disadvantageous prices, in spite of the opposition of trusts, Governor Lind has succeeded in protecting the farmer against the greed of the trust and netting a fair profit of $13,000 besides. Put the state administration into the hands of the Republicans and the Twine Trust will have its own way and scuttle the state twine plant as they did in Kansas, and then where would the farmer be?

It was under the direction of Governor Lind that the railroad commissioners investigated the freight rates and regulated them and reduced them in some cases as much as 4½ cents per hundred, thereby saving for the farmers of the state more than $400,000 a year; more than it takes to run the county government of all the counties affected.

It was Governor Lind who worked to secure the passage of a bill to tax the business and capital of foreign corporations operating in this state, a bill that would have brought thousands upon thousands of dollars into the state treasury, and it was the Republican legislature that prevented the passage of the bill, and as a result, corporations like the Standard Oil Trust, doing a business of millions of dollars in this state, go practically untaxed.

It was Governor Lind who tried to secure the passage of a gross earnings tax bill whereby the railroads would have been taxed on their gross earnings as they are in other states. And it was a Republican legislature that opposed the bill and defeated it.

In other states the tax on gross earnings on railroads is as high as 5 per cent, and in Kansas it is even as high as 12 per cent. By the refusal of the Republican legislature to raise the tax on the gross earnings of railroads to 4 per cent, they have deprived the state of $2,000,000 of taxes, even if the next legislature should make the raise as soon as possible.

It was at the initiative of Governor Lind that the Somerville law was passed, and a license fee imposed on foreign corporations for the privilege of doing business in the state, which law has already brought upwards of $50,000 into the treasury.

It was under the direction of Governor Lind that the state board of equalization raised the assessment of the street railway company of the Twin Cities nearly $2,000,000, and raised the assessment of the mining companies in St. Louis county $1,600,000, and raised the assessment of the lumber syndicates and other tax dodging corporations so as to make them bear their just and proper share of the burden of taxation, and not let the bulk of it rest upon the shoulders of the people at large.

And now comes this Republican spellbinder and on the strength of a few trumped up charges and statements expressly manipulated to mislead the unwary he calls upon the people of Minnesota to repudiate Governor Lind and put in his place a man who is bound hand and foot to the interests of syndicates and corporations, who would not dare to say his soul was his own; whose record from start to finish proves him to be a man that ever stands wavering between interest and duty, and has always consistently turned and dodged every time it came to a pinch.

F. J. L.

Will Captain Van Sant kindly explain his record as a dodger? The people are interested to know, they demand to know. The people want as Governor of Minnesota a man who has convictions and will stand by them; who has the interests of the people at heart, and will support them; who will not be the puppet of special interests; who will not stand like a wavering reed between interest and duty.

The people want a man on whom they can depend, and then in return he can depend on the people. And now will the doughty captain kindly explain his record? Why did he dodge? Why didn't he vote on the labor bills and a lot of other bills which the people of Minnesota were very much interested in?

The captain has the floor, gentlemen. Oh, you forgot, captain. Oh! Indeed! But what about the laboring man and farmer? Will he forget?

The world is, after all, a happy one, and as we gaze from the windows of our editorial monastery at the sun-kissed landscape, sweet visions of milk and honey, humming birds and molasses dance before our astonished vision like a calf before a circus procession. Last Saturday one of our subscribers came in and paid, in cold cash, three years in arrearages and two years in advance. Praise God from whom all blessings flow."—Nauvoo Rustler.

Evidence of Genius.

"My wife," said Mr. Snickers, "is a truly remarkable woman."

"We all know that," we said; "but do you wish to specify?"

"Yes, sir. She wrote and sold a story the other day, and spent only once the money she expected to receive for it."—Harper's Bazar.

Nice for the Nervous Lady.

Mgr. Calino, the simple-hearted and ingenuous Frenchman, happened to be riding in a train in the same compartment with a lady who was in constant fear of a smash-up.

At every sudden stop, ever jar, every sound of the bell or whistle, she cried out: "Oh! oh! Have we run off the track? Is it a collision? Are we going to be killed?"

Calino paid no attention, but remained wrapped in solemn silence.

Presently the lady said to him: "And aren't you afraid of railroad accidents?"

"Not I, madam," answered Calino, reassuringly. "It has been foretold that I am to die on the scaffold."

The nervous woman went into hysterics and had to be removed at the next station.—London Tit-Bits.

He Was Catching Fleas.

An Orchard street youngster was missed by his mother for some hours the other day. Finally he was located in the cellar, with a small kitten in his arms, with a pad and lead pencil at hand's reach. On being asked what he was doing, he answered:

"I'm catchin' fleas. Ain't I got to go to school next week? You don't want me to have any fun. I've caught forty and broke their necks, and 140 got away. That's right. If you don't believe it, just look at that pad."—South Norwalk Sentinel.

Mrs. Malaprop in the Hospital.

A well-meaning visitor, inspecting the childrens' ward in a hospital on a day which also happened to be the visiting day for the patients' friends, went over to a cot where a mother was anxiously bending over her child, a mite of two years with a broken leg.

"Well," said the visitor, "the poor little thing looks very comfortable, but I shouldn't like a child of mine to come here."

The sister in charge, who was justly proud of her pretty ward and the appearance of her little patients, felt more than a trifle hurt, and the visitor, seeing she had made a mistake, endeavored to correct it.

"Not," she added, "but that I am sure they are much better looked after than they would be at home!"

The glare in the eyes of the child's mother, when she heard that remark, was something to be remembered.

HELP FOR WOMEN WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time. I do not know what is the matter with me."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by

MRS. ELLA RICE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women. No other medicine has made the cures that it has, and no other woman has helped so many women by direct advice as has Mrs. Pinkham; her experience is greater than that of any living person. If you are sick, write and get her advice; her address is Lynn, Mass.

AFFAIRS CRITICAL

SITUATION IN SOUTHERN CHINA CAUSES ALARM.

Washington Officials Are Very Much Concerned—Unless the International Situation Assumes a More Definite Shape It Will Be Impossible to Prevent an Uprising—Conger Doubts Good Faith of the Chinese Government and Favors Severe Punitive Measures.

Washington, Oct. 15. — Government officials profess to be very much concerned over the critical condition of affairs in Southern China. They will not admit directly that they have advices confirming the press reports that an outbreak is imminent, but indicate that they have no reason to doubt that such is the case. One of the most prominent of them said that unless the international situation assumed a more definite shape it would hardly be possible to prevent an uprising in the Yang-tse provinces. He said that the viceroys of these provinces had succeeded against remarkable odds in holding the unruly element in check, but they could not do this much longer. In his opinion the initiation of peace negotiations was the easiest and surest way of stopping the agitation, for as long as the general Chinese question remained unsettled the empire

Would Be Perturbed.

The government is working zealously to bring about a settlement of the recent troubles, but practically no progress has been made. Minister Conger, as his telegram to the state department shows, is not satisfied with the action taken by Emperor Kwang Su to placate the powers. He has indicated plainly to the department that the list of those Chinese named for trial on account of their participation in the Boxer troubles is not nearly complete, and this and other advices from him lead to the belief that he and his diplomatic colleagues in Pekin doubt the good faith of the imperial government in its dealings with the civilized nations. That Mr. Conger and the other foreign representatives in the China capital are in favor of the adoption of severe punitive measures has been demonstrated.

Li Expresses Regret.

London, Oct. 15.—A special dispatch from Pekin, dated Oct. 12, says: "At the American legation Li Hung Chang expressed regret for the recent occurrence and thanked the Americans for their good treatment of the Chinese. He promised to request that negotiations be begun at the tsung li yamun two days hence and to exclude Yung Lu from them."

"It is asserted," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Times, wiring yesterday, "that the Russians have seized the Miu Chwang railway at the terminus of the Shan Hai Kwan line. This is the first step the Russians have taken on the right bank of the Amur. The Russian southern and northern armies have joined hands at the Tchling, north of Mukden, thereby placing all of Manchuria east of the River Liao and a portion west of the stream, in the hands of Russia.

IMPERIAL FUNCTION.

Boxer Said to Have Attempted to Assassinate the Emperor.

Berlin, Oct. 15. — A dispatch from Shanghai to the Lokal Anzeiger says that an imperial decree, dated Oct. 4, announces that a Boxer attempted to murder the emperor while the court was journeying to Sinan-Fu. The man was arrested and decapitated. The Shanghai mandarins maintain that the would-be regicide was really an anti-imperial Manchu, the allegation that he was a Boxer being intended to bolster up the fiction that the imperial clan were not associated with the Boxers in the Pekin crimes, but were themselves the victims of rebels.

ROW AMONG MILLERS.

Kansas Dusties Are Angry at the Minneapolis Grinders.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 15.—A big fight is on between Kansas millers and the big millers at Minneapolis. Recently the big millers advertised extensively that they did not grind Kansas wheat into flour because of its inferior quality. This angered the Kansas millers, who sent a committee to Minneapolis to investigate. This committee reported that several hundred car loads of Kansas wheat had been shipped direct to the big mills. To-day Kansas millers will meet here and denounce the Minneapolis millers and appeal to the Kansas wheat growers to boycott all dealers who buy for shipment to the Minneapolis mills.

Bold Raid by Robbers.

Guadalajara, Mex., Oct. 15.—A band of brigands under the leadership of the notorious Pedro Flores has been committing numerous murders and robberies in the Autlan district of this state for several months. News has just reached here that the robbers made a bold raid on the town of Autlan and killed the postmaster. Following this unprovoked murder, they robbed the place and terrorized the populace. They have a stronghold in the mountains and a detachment of rurales have gone in pursuit of them.

Wildcat Hunt in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 15. — Policemen and small boys joined in a wildcat hunt in the vicinity of Seventy-ninth street and Ontario avenue, and after setting fire to the shrubbery in which it was hiding, killed the animal with revolvers. Where the cat came from is a mystery.

WANTS THE ISLANDS ANNEXED.

New Zealand Favors Adding Cook and Savage Groups to Territory.

Wellington, N. Z., Oct. 15.—A motion introduced by the Rt. Hon. Richard John Sheldon, premier of the New Zealand administration, urging the desirability of annexing the Cook and Savage islands, has been adopted. The vote for the motion was unanimous in the legislative council. It was carried by [illegible] in the house of representatives. [illegible]

DISASTERS TO SHIPPING.

Many Vessels Come to Grief on the Coast of Nova Scotia.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 15.—Additional disasters to shipping on this coast are reported. The known list of vessels driven ashore now numbers thirty, mostly owned in the province and Newfoundland. The loss all over the country and the neighboring provinces through terrific rainfalls and wash-outs and damage to orchards and buildings by heavy winds will be very many thousands of dollars. The Canadian Pacific wires connecting Cape Breton with the rest of Nova Scotia are completely broken at the Straits of Canso, where the cable was fouled by a schooner dragging her anchor in the recent gale. Heavy rain is falling again throughout Nova Scotia. Rivers and lakes are everywhere overflowing and destroying property. There has been no Canadian Pacific train from Montreal for four days, and a serious wreck of the Sydney express, caused by a wash-out, is reported in Cape Breton. The Gloucester schooner Mystery, at Canso, reports one man lost at sea.

DE WET THREATENS.

Boers Must Fight or Be Made Prisoners of War.

Cape Town, Oct. 15.—The Boers are very active in the Kroonstad district. Gen. Dewet has proclaimed that burghers who refuse to fight will be made prisoners of war. British mounted infantry, scouting from Lindley, had Capt. Wiltshire killed through mistaking a party of forty Boers in khaki for friends. Boer commandos continually barrassed the British column while marching from Lindley to Kroonstad. The Boers captured a detachment of the Cheshire regiment which was escorting an empty wagon near Frankfort. They released the driver, but kept the wagon.

DECIDED BY MINERS

CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH THEY WILL ACCEPT RAISE.

They Will Return to Work if the Operators Agree to Pay the Increase Until April 1 — Sliding Sale Must Be Abolished at Two Points and Union Grievances Adjusted—Proposed to Submit Questions to Arbitration—Some of the Operators Say They Cannot Concede Miners' Demands.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 15.—The miners' convention adjourned sine die after unanimously adopting the following resolution:

"We would recommend that this convention accept the 10 per cent advance, providing the operators will continue its payment until April 1, 1901, and will abolish the sliding scale in the Lehigh and Schuylkill regions. The scale of wages in the two last named districts to remain stationary at 10 per cent above the present basis price, and that the companies agree to adjust other grievances complained of with committees of their own employes. Should this proposition be unacceptable to the operators, we recommend that the convention propose that all questions at issue be submitted to a fair and impartial

Board of Arbitration.

"We would further recommend that under no circumstances whatever should there be a resumption of work at any of the collieries until the operators signify their acceptance of this proposition, and you are notified officially that the strike is ended and all return to work in a body on the same day."

There are differences of opinion as to what will be the result of the action of the convention. It is believed by some that a long contest between the strikers and the mine owners is not unlikely, but others think that the employers, who have signified their willingness to consider any grievances the men consider they have, will consent to what the strikers say is a counter proposition.

TERMS ARE NOT ACCEPTABLE.

Some of the Operators Say They Cannot Accede Them.

Shamokin, Pa., Oct. 15.—A number of individual operators and representatives of coal-carrying companies between here and Centralia said that the terms of the Scranton convention were not acceptable. Reading coal and iron organizations claim their company is now paying more wages to employes than the mineral and union companies disburse to their men, and that by abolishing the sliding scale the company would be forced to pay more than any other company. So far as binding themselves to pay the increase until next April, operators say they will not consent to it because by the expiration of the contract they will perhaps be asked to enter into such a more rigorous one that they will be unable to meet unless the coal-carrying roads charge them less rates of transportation. It is evident that the individual mine owners are waiting to see what the large coal carrying roads that mine coal will do. It is reported in the coal region that the presidents of these roads will hold a conference in New York for a discussion of the action of the convention. There was a story afloat that the operators will accept the convention's decision, but nothing has come to the surface in this region on which to base the report.

After Morgan had passed Schwars looked for the money and could not find it, and concluded that some one had stolen it. A few nights ago he had a dream in which the spot where the money was hidden was given to him, and going there he found it intact.

LITTLE GIRL ASSAULTED.

Found Dead and in a Terribly Mutilated Condition.

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 15. — The dead body of Ada Lantz, the twelve-year-old daughter of Charles F. Lantz, a carpenter prominent in local labor circles, was found in the rear of her father's residence late last night. A surprise party had been tendered her parents, and while the guests were playing cards the little girl left the house. Her absence was not discovered for about half an hour, and after a search of the premises her body was found. Circumstances indicate that an assault had been committed upon the child, and this was borne out later by the coroner's investigation. The body was terribly mutilated. The police have a suspect in custody, but it is thought he cannot be held.

Opelika, Ala., Oct. 15. — Charles B. Young, a white man, was assaulted and knocked unconscious by negroes and placed on a track of the Western railroad. He will recover.

WRECK IS PLANNED

CAUSES DEATH OF TWO AND INJURY OF THREE OTHERS.

Engine and Forward Part of an Express Train Wrecked by an Open Switch Purposely Misplaced—Engine Was Demolished and Two Mail and Two Express Cars Were Piled in a Heap—Passengers Escaped Injury—Dense Fog Prevented the Engineer Seeing the Signals.

Chicago, Oct. 15. — An open switch at Eighty-fifth street, South Chicago, believed to have been purposely displaced, caused the death of two men, seriously injured three others, and made wreckage of the engine and forward part of the New York and Boston express train on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern road. The engine was demolished and two mail and two express cars were piled up in a heap, but the five passenger coaches directly behind the baggage cars did not leave the track, and their occupants escaped injury. The train was running forty miles an hour when it struck the switch. The victims of the wreck were:

Dead—H. J. Jerough, fireman, twenty-eight years old; lived at Elkhart, Ind.; caught under the wreckage of the engine and body cut in half.

Unidentified man, a tramp who was stealing a ride on the first mail coach; body ground to pieces.

Injured — Lewis Reynolds, engineer of the express; lives at Elkhart, Ind.; skull fractured and internal injuries; probably fatal.

L. C. Buttner, special officers of the railway; left side bruised; not serious.

Frank Morton, operator employed by the railway; cut about the head; not serious.

It is believed the wreck was caused by some persons who had deliberately broken the switch. Three locks which are used to hold the switch in place had been broken and could not be found. A dense fog that hung over the city made it impossible for the engineer to see the signals and he had no warning of the danger.

IOWA VISITORS ENTERTAINED.

They Take a Trolley Ride to Places of Interest.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 15. — "I believe I can get five men to go to St. Paul hereafter where I can get one to go to Chicago." Thus cheerily spake last evening J. R. Cook, excursion agent of the Milwaukee road, who brought to this city Saturday a party of Iowa residents. "Everybody in our party is delighted with St. Paul. They even like Minneapolis."

The excursionists themselves expressed cordial admiration for St. Paul streets, St. Paul scenery, St. Paul weather and St. Paul people. Committees from the Jobbers' union and the Commercial club had abetted these agreeable impressions. The city railway company also supplied the pilgrims with three of the company's best trolley cars at a nominal rental. In the three yellow coaches the men of Iowa rode yesterday morning to the Indian Mounds Park, to Lake Harriet and to Minnehaha. The travelers returned to the Merchants hotel for luncheon. Then they mounted again their golden steeds and sped away to Fort Snelling, its crumbling tower and its russet leaves. Last night the Iowans saw things delectable at local theaters.

To-day the merchants in the party will visit their new friends, the St. Paul jobbers, and purchase bills of goods. Most of the sojourners will leave for home this evening. Some, however, will remain until Saturday and enjoy many pleasures that the other men will miss.

PLEDGED TO REFORM

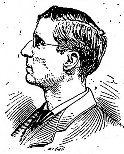
VOTERS SHOULD SUPPORT ALLIED NOMINEES FOR CONGRESS.

Record of the Republican Party on the Trust Question Proof That No Relief Can Be Hoped For Unless a Change Is Made in the National House of Representatives — Minnesota Candidates of the Allied Parties.

The Kansas City convention pledged the Democratic party to an increasing warfare in nation, state and city against private monopoly in every form. With control over interstate commerce and with the power of national taxation, congress is vested with full power to throttle trusts. The Republican national and state platforms are proof that trusts are the product of Republican policies. Relief can only be secured through a congress opposed to Republicanism, to secure which all Democratic and Peoples Party voters in Minnesota should work so that this great commonwealth will send a solid delegation to the next house pledged to reform.

L. L. BROWN.

L. L. Brown, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for congress in the First district, was born on a farm in Winona county, Minn., 40 years ago. He lived on a farm and attended public school until he was about 16 years of age, when he entered Galesville college, Wisconsin, where he prepared for the university. He entered the University of Wisconsin at the age of 20 and graduated with the class of '84, taking the degree of B. A.



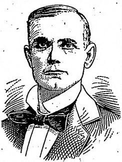
L. L. BROWN.

After graduating, Mr. Brown taught school for one year in Winona county, and afterwards studied law in the office of Hon. T. Simpson in Winona. In 1887 he was admitted to the bar, and afterwards formed a partnership with the Hon. John A. Keyes, now of Duluth. This partnership continued until Mr. Keyes left Winona, and after that Mr. Brown practiced law alone until 1893, when he formed a partnership with W. D. Abbott, which still continues under the name of Brown & Abbott.

His first political work was at the University of Madison, when he stumped the county in the interest of his party before he was 21 years of age. He is a popular and influential man, and his nomination is regarded by those who know him as a very wise one.

MARVIN E. MATTHEWS.

Marvin E. Matthews of Marshall, Lyon county, the Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for congress in the Second Minnesota district, was born near Jamestown, N. Y., Sept. 25, 1849, and removed with his parents to this state in the spring of 1855 and settled on a farm near Rochester.



MARVIN E. MATTHEWS.

After leaving the country school he continued his studies in the high school of Rochester. From 17 years of age he worked as a farm hand by the month, chopped wood in the forest through the coldest winter weather, later taught school, and thus made his way in the world unaided.

He studied law in the office of Hon. R. A. Jones at Rochester, and in 1872 he went to New Ulm, Minn., where he accepted the position of teacher in the high school. While thus engaged he also studied law in the office of George W. Kuhlman until the fall of 1873, at which time he opened a law office and practiced his profession at that place until 1876, when he went to Marshall, where he has continued the practice of law ever since. He graduated in the law department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor in 1881, and has since been one of the foremost practitioners of the state.

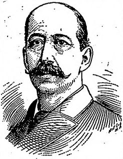
Mr. Matthews is a life-long Democrat, is a recognized leader in political circles and is now prominently connected with the several Democratic organizations of the state. He has served as county attorney and is receiver of public moneys at the United States land office at Marshall, Minn.

ALBERT SCHALLER.

Albert Schaller, the Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for congress from the Third district, was born in Chicago, Ills., May 20, 1856. When but 6 weeks old he was brought by his parents to Hastings, where they took up their abode, and have since resided continuously. He was educated in the public schools of Hastings. Having completed his common branches his parents sent Albert abroad, where he was tutored by able professors in Germany and France.

Returning to his native land the young man was sent to the St. Louis school of law, from which he graduated with honors. He came directly to Hastings and there hung out his shingle and began the practice of his profession.

His first office holding was in 1879, when he was elected to the office of county attorney, which position he held with honor for 11 consecutive years. The next office which Mr. Schaller was elected to was that of state senator from the Thirtieth district, in 1894.

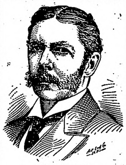


ALBERT SCHALLER.

Senator Schaller's successful fight on the state insane asylum during the last term is common history and needs to be only mentioned as a testimony of his record as a conscientious, able and tireless representative of the people.

DR. A. J. STONE.

Dr. Alexander Johnston Stone, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for representative in congress from the Fourth congressional district of Minnesota, was born in Maine in 1845. His distinctive life profession has been that of a physician and surgeon. He studied the science of medicine at the Berkshire (Mass.) Medical, Bowdoin and Harvard colleges in this country, and in some of the most renowned universities of Europe. Graduating with the degree of M. D. in 1867, he was for a year or more thereafter associated in practice with Professor H. R. Storer of Boston, but in January, 1869, he came to Minnesota and located at Stillwater. In the fall of 1870, he removed to St. Paul, where he has since resided.



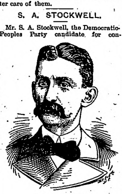
DR. A. J. STONE.

Upon coming to St. Paul in 1870, Dr. Stone began the publication of The Northwestern Medical and Surgical Journal. In time this journal became The Northwestern Lancet, which is still published with Dr. Stone as editor. In 1871 he organized the St. Paul Preparatory School of Medicine, which later became the St. Paul Medical College. He is a member of the faculty of this department, as professor of the diseases of women.

Dr. Stone will make an ideal representative in congress from the St. Paul district. No other man better understands the needs and interests of the district, and no other man can take better care of them.

S. A. STOCKWELL.

Mr. S. A. Stockwell, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress in the Fifth district, was born in Anoka, Minn., in 1857. He attended the public schools of his native town. After graduation he taught school for a number of years. Leaving the profession of teaching, he entered the employ of the American Express company, and served them faithfully for 10 years. He is at present general agent for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company of Philadelphia. He has been a resident and tax payer in the Fifth district for 20 years. Mr. Stockwell was elected to the state house of representatives in 1890 and again in 1896. In the session of 1891 he introduced and secured the passage of the Anti-Pinkerton law, and a bill for an appropriation of $5,000, which made possible the creation of the summer school, which is so much prized by teachers.



S. A. STOCKWELL.

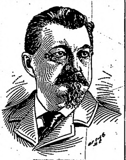
He was elected to the state senate in 1898 and took a very active part in all legislation for the good of the people and was a strong supporter of the increase in the gross earnings tax on railroads.

HENRY TRUELSON.

Henry Truelson, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress from the Sixth district, emigrated to the United States from the northwestern part of Germany in 1866 and located in the upper peninsula of Michigan. In 1869 he came to Duluth, where he served as alderman for a term of eight years. In 1881 he was elected sheriff of St. Louis county for a two years' term. Later on he was appointed as a member of the board of public works and served as its president for a term of three years. In 1896 he was elected mayor of the city of Duluth, was re-elected in '98, and served until March, 1900.

As a public officer Mr. Truelson's best efforts have always been in behalf of the people at large, to protect them against special privileges and corporate power, and to secure justice for all. This is especially exemplified by his fight against the gas and water companies, whereby he saved the people of Duluth upwards of a million dollars. His fight against the encroachments of the Long Distance Telephone company is another instance, as likewise the reduction of the cost of electric lights from $120 to $85 a piece, which reduction was secured through the efforts of Mr. Truelson, while he was mayor of Duluth.

In fact on every question that arose during his two terms as mayor, Henry Truelson was a power of strength on the side of good government, as honest, economical and just in public office as in private life, and always and everywhere, the fighting friend of the people.

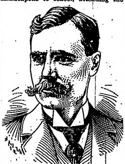


HENRY TRUELSON.

M. J. DALY.

M. J. Daly, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress in the Seventh district, was born in St. Paul on March 31, 1861. In 1866 the family moved to Carver county. With one or two winters of study away from home, young Daly remained on the farm until he was 21 years of age. He went to school winters and during the summers took his full share of the farm work. It was during this formative period of his life that he imbibed those feelings of respect for the farmer's calling and of sympathy for the hard conditions which surround him and that desire to do all in his power to relieve those conditions, which have ever since been such a marked characteristic of Mr. Daly's career.

When he was 15 years old he went to Minneapolis to school, attending the Minneapolis high school and the well known Marvin academy.



M. J. DALY.

He entered the law department of the state university of Iowa, at Iowa City, worked hard and graduated the following year. He was admitted to the bar in 1886 with high honors. Immediately afterwards he opened an office at Perham, Otter Tail county, and has lived there ever since.

In 1898 he was nominated by the reform forces for state senator, in the senatorial district of Otter Tail county, and elected in spite of a coalition against him, led by ex-Congressman H. E. Boen, who induced an independent candidate to run in the hope of defeating him. His record in the state senate was a good one. He took high rank from the outset, and was on the side of the people against corporations and rottenness from start to finish.

THE BRYAN ELECTORS

MEN TO BE SUPPORTED BY THE MINNESOTA VOTERS.

Questions Before the American People This Year of the Greatest Importance. Right of Self-Government Endangered by the Success of the Republican National Ticket as Evidenced by Our Record in the Philippines.

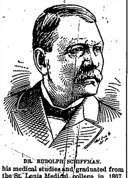
One great question now before the American people in this campaign is the question of right of self-government. President McKinley and his supporters seek to set aside the doctrine of self-government and to establish in its stead the ancient heresy of the right of government by brute force. No other interpretation of our attitude toward the Filipinos is possible.

In this perilous hour who shall answer? On whose hands the blood of the century? Voters of Minnesota answer at the polls by voting for Bryan and Stevenson electors.

DR. RUDOLPH SCHIFFMAN.

Dr. Rudolph Schiffman, one of the Democratic-Peoples Party candidates for elector-at-large, was born in St. Louis 55 years ago. He was taking a medical course at the St. Louis Medical college when the war broke out. Located as he was in one of the storm centers of the conflict, he promptly responded to the call for Union troops, enlisting as a private in Company D, Eighth Missouri cavalry.

After the war was over he resumed his medical studies and graduated from the St. Louis Medical college in 1867. Shortly after he was appointed assistant surgeon in the United States army and assigned to General Hancock's expedition against the Western tribe of Indians. This position he resigned after a year's service and removed to St. Paul, where he engaged in the general practice of medicine, and where he has ever since resided.

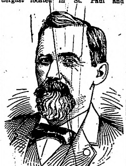


DR. RUDOLPH SCHIFFMAN.

MICHAEL R. PRENDERGAST.

Michael R. Prendergast, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector-at-large, was born in County Cork, Ireland. His parents, with a large family, settled in Connecticut in 1848. In 1855 the family removed to St. Paul. Michael was apprenticed to the printing trade in the office of the St. Paul Daily Times. In 1862 he enlisted in what afterwards became Company H, Tenth Minnesota Volunteers.

In the fall of 1873 Mr. Prendergast located in St. Paul and for nearly twenty years was associated with his brother in the business firm of Prendergast Bros. In 1891 the St. Paul stove works was established, largely by the efforts of Mr. Prendergast, who was the first vice president and manager of that great enterprise. Republican "prosperity" and trusts were largely the cause of its subsequent failure.



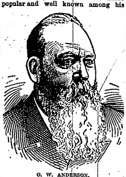
MICHAEL R. PRENDERGAST.

O. W. ANDERSON.

Dr. O. W. Anderson, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for elector from the First congressional district, was born in Lyster, Norway, and came to America in 1850, settling in Dane county, Wis.

In 1852 he moved with his father to Vernon county, Wis., and remained there until 1855 when he removed to Chicago where he studied medicine and pharmacy.

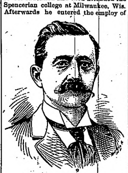
In the summer of 1861 he went to La Crosse, Wis., where he was employed as a pharmacist until the fall of 1863, when he settled in Rochester, Minn., where he has been engaged in the practice of pharmacy and medicine ever since, together with the establishment and manufacture of a line of medicines and pharmaceuticals that have become favorably known all over the Northwest, and are today staple household articles among the Scandinavians, making Dr. Anderson's name popular and well known among his countrymen throughout the Northwest.



O. W. ANDERSON.

GEORGE LESTER.

Mr. George Lester, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for presidential elector from the Second district, was born in Necedah, Wis., in 1857, received a good common school education and then attended the Spencerian college at Milwaukee, Wis. Afterwards he entered the employ of Bradford & Son of Necedah, Wis., (lumbermen) as bookkeeper.



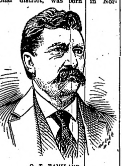
GEORGE LESTER.

His high character, energy and personal integrity won for him countless friends, and as a result he was elected register of deeds of Juneau county, Wis., on the Democratic ticket, although the county is strongly Republican.

He then went into the real estate business in lands in San Louis Park, Colo., with offices at Chicago and Denver. After this he entered the employ of C. L. Coleman, lumberman, at La Crosse, Wis., as traveling agent, and took charge of his business at Fairmont, Minn., in 1887, and has managed the same ever since.

O. T. RAMSLAND.

O. T. Ramsland of Sacred Heart, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector from the Third congressional district, was born in Norway in 1853 and came to the United States in 1871, engaging in farming, lumbering, and other business at various points in Wisconsin and Minnesota for a number of years.



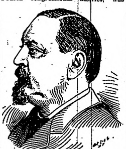
O. T. RAMSLAND.

In 1880 he located at Sacred Heart and engaged in general merchandise business, where he has since resided. He has served with ability in several local offices.

Mr. Ramsland is a believer in America and American institutions to the fullest extent and advocates "equal privileges to all and special privileges to none."

DANIEL ABERLE.

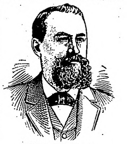
Daniel Aberle, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for elector from the Fourth congressional district, was born in the city of Mannheim, Germany, in 1848, and graduated from the high school of that city in 1867. He emigrated to the United States and located in Chicago, Ills, where he entered upon a commercial life which he has continued to the present time. In 1880 he located in St. Paul, and has ever since been actively and energetically connected with its business, social and political life and growth. Having joined the Democratic party early in life, he has been honored by the national organization by being appointed to its state central committee for five different terms, acting one term as treasurer. He was sent as a delegate to two national Democratic conventions, and has also been treasurer of the Democratic state organization during its existence.



DANIEL ABERLE.

FRED D. NOERENBERG.

Fred D. Noerenberg, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector for the Fifth congressional district, resides at Markville, in the western portion of Hennepin county, though doing business at Minneapolis. He was born in 1845 in the northern part of Prussia, and came to this country in 1860, locating at St. Paul. He removed to Minneapolis in 1875, and engaged in the brewing business in which he has since continued. For several years he has been at the head of the Minneapolis Brewing Company, one of the largest industries of its kind in the Northwest.



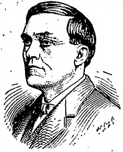
FRED D. NOERENBERG.

He has always been a Democrat in politics but never been a candidate for office with the exception of having been on the legislative ticket at one time, and in 1898 he was a candidate for treasurer of Hennepin county.

JOHN JENSWOLD, JR.

John Jenswold, Jr., the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector from the Sixth congressional district, is a practicing attorney at Duluth where since in 1888 he has had an extensive and constantly growing practice.

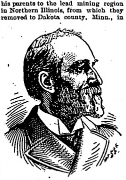
He is of Norwegian parentage, his parents coming to Greene county, Wis., when mere children. Here also John was born, but soon after removed to Zumbrota, Minn., where he lived until 1869. His parents then settled on an Iowa farm, where he grew up to manhood, receiving his education in the public institutions of that state. He studied law at the state university of Iowa, and soon after his graduation commenced the practice of his profession at Emmettsburg, Ia., being associated with Hon. T. W. Harrison and the partnership, so formed, continued until his removal to Duluth.



JOHN JENSWOLD, JR.

THOMAS C. HODGSON.

Thomas C. Hodgson, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for elector from the Seventh congressional district, was born on the Isle of Man, Jan. 1, 1843. In 1884 he moved with his parents to the lead mining region in Northern Illinois, from which they removed to Dakota county, Minn., in 1854, and settled in what is now the town of Greenvale, near Northfield.



THOMAS C. HODGSON.

In 1862 Mr. Hodgson enlisted in Company F, Eighth regiment volunteers, under Captain Leonard Aldrich, and served with the regiment in almost all of its raids against the Indians in the Northwest and in the bloody battles of the South until he was mustered out, July 11, 1865.

In 1876 Mr. Hodgson removed to Herman. He was appointed chief deputy inspector of grain for St. Paul under Governor McGill in 1887, and held this position until he resigned in 1890, and is at present living at Elbow Lake.

VOTE FOR THESE Issues Involved in Minnesota Demand Support For the Reform Ticket.

Continuation of Gov. Lind's Administration a Benefit to All Citizens.

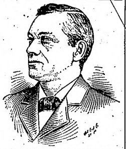
Brief Biographical Sketch of Each Candidate of the Allied Parties.

There are issues involved in this campaign peculiar to the people of Minnesota that demand earnest consideration. Taxation, care of public lands, administration of grain service and regulation of railroad rates are all questions demanding that careful administration which the past two years have demonstrated they will receive at the hands of John Lind, to whose able efforts should be added those of every nominee on the ticket of the allied parties. Voters of Minnesota secure this by voting for every man on the ticket whose biography is given briefly herewith.

JOHN LIND.

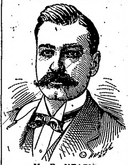
To be elected governor of the state of Minnesota at any time is not a small honor; to be the first man elected to the place in opposition to the Republican party organization is even a more signal victory; to be chosen above and beyond partisan lines by the discriminating judgment of his fellow citizens, at a time when all the other nominees of the opposing party, save the gubernatorial, were elected by more or less handsome majorities, is a distinction such as has been accorded to few men in any state. It was under such circumstances that John Lind was inaugurated governor of Minnesota in January, 1899.

Governor Lind was born at Kanna, province of Smaland, Sweden, March 25, 1854. The family emigrated to America in 1867 when John was 13 years of age, and settled in Goodhue county, Minn. Here young John, laboring to assist in the support of the family, lost his left hand by an accident which, perhaps, turned the current of his career, as now, ill-fitted to compete with his fellows in the material world, he was urged to more assiduity in the pursuit of his studies. He spent as much of his time at school as possible and at 16 he was granted a certificate entitling him to teach in the public schools. He taught one year in Sibley county, but not being satisfied with the compensation in a new country at that time, he, in 1873, took up his residence in New Ulm, where he has since resided, respected and honored among men. By the dint of hard study, industry and strict economy, he was able to attend the State university in 1875 and 1876, having in mind then the practice of law. Utilizing all his opportunities for private study and privileged as he was to work in the office of a New Ulm practitioner, he was admitted to the bar immediately upon leaving the university at the age of 21. In 1877 he began the practice of law and, taking an active interest in public life, was chosen superintendent of schools of Brown county. This position he held for two years, declining a renomination in order that he might devote himself entirely to the profession upon the adoption of which he had now fully determined, namely, the law. In 1881, under the administration of Garfield and Arthur, he was made receiver of the land office at Tracy, Lyon county, which position he held until the election of Grover Cleveland, still being able, however, to care for his private practice at New Ulm. Mr. Lind's natural talent and diligence made him a name more than local, and his prosecution of several suits, notably those against railroad companies, won him not a little renown. He was active in the councils of the Republican party, and in 1886 he was nominated to represent the Second district in congress. The Second district then comprised 20 counties—practically all of Southwestern Minnesota. That was a hard fought campaign, but Mr. Lind was elected by a splendid plurality. Two years later he was renominated and again elected, his adversary this time being Colonel Morton S. Wilkinson, a veteran leader, who had been one of Minnesota's three representatives in the house from 1869 to 1871, and United States senator during the war. He took an active interest in the affairs of the Indians and secured the passage of a bill establishing seven Indian schools in various parts of the country, one of them being located at Pipestone, in this state. Another sphere of work of local importance was the pushing of some old claims for the depredations of the Indians during the outbreak of 1862. He secured the payment of many of these for the people of the Second district who had suffered during that uprising. One of the greatest economies which he secured to the people of the state, however, was the passage of the bill for the reorganization of the federal courts of the district of Minnesota. Previous to its passage all sessions of the United States courts in this state had been held at St. Paul, entailing long sittings, delays in trials and long journeys, increasing the cost to litigants living remote from the capital. Mr. Lind's bill provided for terms as now held at Minneapolis, Mankato, Winona and Fergus Falls, as well as in St. Paul. Mr. Lind was a strenuous fighter for the integrity and enforcement of the interstate commerce act in its efforts to prevent discriminations in favor of persons or places. He had added to it amendments which made it possible for the commission to procure evidence more efficiently, and also made several battles in the courts to secure for the millers in the smaller centers of the state, rates more fair when compared with the millers of Minneapolis, who had been granted certain special privileges. Mr. Lind was instrumental in securing a great reform in railroad management and equipment, which is saving human life and limb hourly. That is, the automatic coupler and power-brake bill, so called, which was passed, and directed all railroads to provide their cars with automatic couplers of uniform type, and to have at least a certain number of cars of each train equipped with air or other power brakes, so as to obviate the use of hand brakes, which are very dangerous in icy or sleety weather. This bill was opposed by a strong and insistent lobby, led by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, but after a hard contest the lobby was beaten and Mr. Lind's bill became a law. Another bill of commercial value to the Northwest made Minneapolis a port of entry. Mr. Lind was a conceded authority in the house on the subjects concerned with the public lands, of so much importance to the West. In the contest over the tariff Mr. Lind was a hard fighter, and showed his independence by declining to be bound by the declarations of the Republican caucus. He fought the tariff on lumber because, as he said, it committed the nation to the idiocy of destroying its own forests rather than those of other people. He fought for free sugar, for free materials for making binding twine and for free twine. In 1890 Mr. Lind was elected a third time, defeating General James H. Baker of Garden City. In 1892 he declined to become a candidate again, for personal reasons, and the present congressman, James T. McCleary, was elected to succeed Mr. Lind. The platform adopted at Mankato accorded the retiring congressman this compliment: "We recognize in Hon. John Lind, our present member of congress, an able and efficient representative, and trust that his voluntary retirement from the field of active legislative duty will be only temporary."



THOMAS J. MEIGHEN.

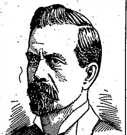
Candidate for Lieutenant Governor.



M. E. NEARY.

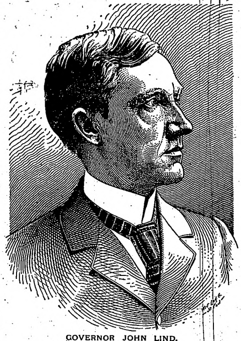
Candidate for Secretary of State.

In 1893 Governor Nelson appointed Mr. Lind, who had returned to the practice of law at New Ulm, a regent of the University of Minnesota. Mr. Lind was an early recruit to the financial policy espoused by Senator Teller and other Silver Republicans. In 1898 the Democratic and Peoples party nominated him for governor and he made a splendid run, David M. Clough defeating him by only a small majority of about 3,000 votes. In the spring of 1898, when President McKinley called for volunteers to defend the national honor and avenge the destruction of the Maine, John Lind, at the sacrifice of his law practice, tendered his services to Governor Clough in any capacity in which he might be available. Governor Clough, at the request of Colonel Bobleter, in command of the Twelfth Minnesota, made Mr. Lind regimental quartermaster, with the rank of first lieutenant. His record as quartermaster was attested by his popularity with the regiment, which had a chance at Chattanooga to compare with other standards the efficiency of Mr. Lind's arduous labors in keeping the men well equipped and provisioned. It was while the Twelfth regiment was encamped at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga National park, that the Democratic, Peoples and Silver Republican parties, in state convention, unanimously nominated Mr. Lind for governor. It was his desire, after the defeat of 1896, not to again enter the field of politics, but so unanimous was the call, and so insistent were the friends who had supported him so warmly in previous campaigns, that Mr. Lind at last put aside his desire for political retirement and consented to make the race, subject to the necessary limitations of his military service. With the surrender of Santiago and the subsequent return of the Minnesota troops from the South, Mr. Lind was enabled to make two short series of speeches in a few of the cities and towns of the state. There has rarely been such a series of popular demonstrations of personal admiration and sympathy. These tours, brief as they were, were splendid auguries of the magnificent vote which the men of Minnesota gave him on election day.



P. M. RINGDAL.

Candidate for Railroad Commissioner.



GOVERNOR JOHN LIND.

Candidate for Re-Election.

This is the public and political career, epitomized, of the man who has fought his way, despite rebuffs and temporary reverses, to attain success at last and a full realization of the fact that "he cannot appreciate victory who has not suffered defeat." Governor Lind's energies have not been spent alone in politics and public affairs. He has had a lucrative practice at the bar and had not sacrificed it in the public service. New Ulm is the center of a thriving farming community, prettily situated in the picturesque valley of the Minnesota, and is such a town as might well be selected for the home of a man of Governor Lind's character—earnest, faithful and unaffected. Governor Lind has been identified with some of the best institutions of New Ulm. He has served as director in the Brown County bank, and was one of the committee of five New Ulm men who had charge of the construction of the Minneapolis, New Ulm and Southwestern railroad and other enterprises that have materially benefitted his home town.

THOMAS J. MEIGHEN.

Thomas J. Meighen, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for lieutenant governor, was born in Fillmore county, Minn., 45 years ago, his parents coming from Pennsylvania. Mr. Meighen's business has been largely farming and mercantile.

Mr. Meighen has been active in the work of the Farmers' Alliance of this state since its inception and was vice president of the State Farmers' Alliance for several years.

While Mr. Meighen's antecedents were Republican, he has been connected with the Peoples party since its organization and was a delegate to the national convention at Cincinnati which gave birth to the Peoples party in 1891.

Mr. Meighen was chairman of the Peoples party state committee when the party was first organized in this state in 1891, which position he held for three years. He was a member of the national committee in 1896 and is now the head of the Peoples party national committee of this state, having been selected for that position at the national convention at Sioux Falls last May.

Although an active worker in all reform movements Mr. Meighen has uniformly declined to be a candidate for office, his candidacy for lieutenant governor being his second departure from that rule, he having been a candidate for congress for the First congressional district of this state in 1894.

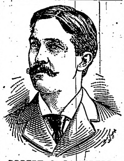
He was appointed as a member of the state board of equalization by Governor Lind, and his record on that board is a matter of public knowledge.

Mr. Meighen says: "In my advocacy of the principles of the Peoples party I do not claim to be wholly unselfish. I have made a close study of political economy and am forced to the conclusion that my interests, as one largely engaged in farming, will be best subserved if the principles advocated by the Peoples party are adopted."

M. E. NEARY.

M. E. Neary, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for secretary of state, was born in Oshkosh, Wis., in 1869. He received a common school education, and later on engaged in the gas business which he studied extensively and thoroughly. Being possessed of a boundless energy he also had the happy faculty of making a host of friends that saw in him one of those rare minds that seem almost to create themselves and are bound to work their irresistible way through all obstacles and disadvantages.

In 1887 he removed to Minneapolis, where he continued to work in the gas business, and soon formed an ever widening circle of loyal and enthusiastic friends. In 1895 he was appointed first assistant gas inspector in the Minneapolis city gas department, a position which he still holds. He was the first president of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Council, and at present he is serving his fourth term as president of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor.



ROBERT C. SAUNDERS.

Candidate for Attorney General.

He has always had a reputation for being conservative in dealing with the labor question, while the confidence which the laboring men have in him is best indicated by the positions of trust and honor to which he has been elected in their organizations. To his many friends all over the state his name stands for honesty and integrity, for calm level headed judgment and undaunted energy.

HENRY C. KOERNER.

Mr. Henry C. Koerner, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for the office of state treasurer, was born in Shakopee, Minn., Dec. 10, 1857. He is well qualified for this office, having received a good common school and college education, and being a thorough bookkeeper and an expert accountant.

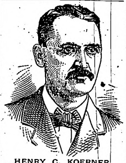
In 1874 Mr. Koerner engaged in general merchandise business in his native city. In 1880 he removed to the village of Jordan, where he continued in the general merchandise business. While at Jordan he served three years as a member of the village council. The popularity he attained at this time is attested by the fact that in 1886 he was elected without opposition as auditor of Scott county, which position he held continuously for a period of 12 years. He also served as alderman of the city of Shakopee for eight years, and was president of the city council for four years. He also served as clerk of the school board for a term of years.

In January, 1899, he was appointed by General E. M. Pope deputy public examiner of Minnesota, which position he is holding at the present time.

Mr. Koerner is married, and at present is residing with his family in the Second ward in the city of St. Paul. Mr. Koerner has a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the state, and can point to personal friends in every county in Minnesota, and be assured that they will stand by him and work for his election, and the election of those on the state ticket with him. He is a thoroughly popular man, a man of the people whom everybody is glad to meet, with whom everybody is glad to do business, who has made hosts of friends wherever he has been; but he is best liked where he is best known, in in his home at Jordan, Minn.

ROBERT C. SAUNDERS.

Robert C. Saunders, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for attorney general, was born in Campbell county, Va., Dec. 24, 1864. He studied law at the University of Virginia, that great institution of learning founded by Thomas Jefferson. In 1889 he was graduated from that university with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. In the spring of 1890 he came to St. Paul and took a position with the West Publishing company as law editor, which he held until March, 1891, when he resigned and removed to Hinckley, Pine county, Minn., and commenced the active practice of law. At the election of 1892 he was elected county attorney of Pine county. In 1887 the state legislature had passed a law (Laws 1887, Ch. 128) providing for the taxation of any interest in exempt railway land grants alienated by the railway companies. The St. Paul and Duluth Railroad company had sold the pine timber on its land grants to various lumber companies and persons, reserving the land. The timber, though sold, had never been taxed, while standing on the exempt lands, and it was for the purpose of reaching this standing timber that the 1887 law was enacted. However, the state and county officials had never even attempted to enforce the provisions of the act. In Pine county the taxes had been duly levied by the proper officials, the various companies interested had filed answers, and there the whole proceeding had stopped and lain dead for four years when Mr. Saunders assumed office. He immediately brought the cases to trial, prevailed in the district court and also in the supreme court to which the cases were appealed. The result was the collection of about $12,000 of back taxes from the lumber companies and the enforcement of taxes against standing pine on exempt land grants ever since. After the decision of the supreme court the officials in the other counties in the northern part of the state took the matter up and enforced the collection of the taxes in their several counties. The net result was the collection of thousands of dollars of taxes from standing pine on exempt railway lands under an act of the legislature which no one but Mr. Saunders attempted to enforce, and which had been ignored and neglected by all of the county attorneys in the counties interested, and by two attorneys general until he went into office.

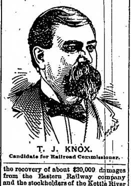


HENRY C. KOERNER.

Candidate for State Treasurer.

In 1894 Mr. Saunders lost everything he had in the great Hinckley fire of Sept. 1 of that year and had to start life again. Undiscouraged he reopened his law office at Hinckley in January, 1895, and practiced there till 1899, when, having been again elected county attorney at the 1898 election, he removed with his family to Pine City, the county seat, where he now resides.

In 1888 the town of Hinckley bonded itself for $12,000 in aid of the Kettle River railroad, a short line of five miles from the Duluth road to Sandstone. The road was built but soon abandoned by the company, and was finally absorbed by the Eastern railway of Minnesota, which tore up the track and utterly dismantled the road. The town employed Mr. Saunders to obtain redress and in 1894 he instituted litigation which finally resulted in 1900 in the recovery of about $30,000 damages from the Eastern Railway company and the stockholders of the Kettle River Railroad company for the abandonment of a railroad which had been aided by township bonds.



T. J. KNOX.

Candidate for Railroad Commissioner.

In 1897 Mr. Saunders was employed as special counsel by the board of county commissioners of Pine county to enforce the collection of taxes on logs cut in Pine county and succeeded.

In addition to the cases mentioned, Mr. Saunders has been counsel in a number of cases of importance, involving matters of taxation and other matters of public concern, and has been highly successful.

He has made the corporations operating in his part of the state respect him as a lawyer and fear him as an advocate of the people's rights.

P. M. RINGDAL.

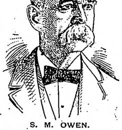
P. M. Ringdal, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner with four years term of office, was born in Goodhue county, Minn., in 1861. He attended the public schools of his native county, and St. Olaf's academy at Northfield, Minn. In 1880 he entered the railroad service as telegraph operator, continued in the service in various capacities until 1890, when he engaged in the manufacture and sale of marble and granite at Crookston, Minn., in which business he is still engaged at the present time.

In politics Mr. Ringdal was an independent up to 1890, when he joined the Alliance movement, and has been active in the work of the Peoples Party ever since it organized. The strength of his party in his part of the state is due in a large measure to his energetic and efficient work.

In 1894 Mr. Ringdal was elected to the state senate. In 1898 he was the candidate of the Peoples and Democratic parties for congress from the Seventh district, but was defeated. In January, 1899, he was appointed member of the railroad and warehouse commission for a three years' term of office. The commission having been made elective by the last legislature, his term was incidentally reduced to two years, in order to make possible the election of the whole commission, two members for four years, and one member for two years. In recognition of his effective work in behalf of the people of the state while serving on the railroad commission, Mr. Ringdal was nominated by the Democratic and Peoples parties for one of the four-year terms to succeed himself. Mr. Ringdal is at the present time chairman of the railroad and warehouse commission, and it is largely due to his energy and efficiency that the commission has been able to accomplish such excellent results in the interests of the people of Minnesota.

S. M. OWEN.

S. M. Owen, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner for two years, is so well known to the people of Minnesota that an extended notice of his life, his sentiments, his sympathies and his work is not necessary here. Two campaigns as candidate for governor of the state, and one for congress in his district, all of which were close and exciting, failed to reveal anything in his life, his record or his character that in the remotest degree reflected upon him unfavorably, or evidenced his unfitness in any respect for the high positions for which he stood. His life has been devoted to an impartial study of economic and sociological subjects, and that study has specially qualified him for the important office for which he is now a candidate.



S. M. OWEN.

Candidate for Railroad Commissioner.

While his sympathies are with the mass of the people, he never desired to see them benefitted at the cost of injustice to any class of citizens nor to any interest. He believes that the whole people can be benefitted by a change in existing systems, and by a fearless and faithful execution of laws, without being unjust to the beneficiaries of the wrongs that he would like to to see modified if they cannot be destroyed. All readers of his journal, Farm, Stock and Home, and they are found in every neighborhood in the state, know how intensely interested Mr. Owen is in the development of agricultural interests, and they know that he believes and teaches that farmers ought to be talked to of things other than plowing and sowing, reaping and mowing, and that transportation, markets, cost of supplies, systems of government, taxation, etc., have quite as much to do with farm prosperity as systems of cultivation or good crops.

T. J. KNOX.

T. J. Knox, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner, was born at Covington, in the state of Pennsylvania. His parents removed to the state (then territory) of Minnesota when he was a small boy and settled on a farm in the county of Fillmore, where he grew to manhood. Later he studied law at Rochester, Minn., first in the office of C. T. Benedict, Esq., and later in the office of Stearns & Start, and was admitted to the bar at that city in October, 1871.

In 1872 Mr. Knox removed to and began the practice of law at Jackson, Minn., where he has ever since resided, attending closely to the work of his profession. While he has held a number of county offices, he has never taken an active part in politics and has never been an applicant for office.

At the expiration of the term of Judge Mills in January last as railroad and warehouse commissioner Mr. Knox was appointed by Governor Lind as his successor, which office he has since held.

ALL FORMS OF TOIL MENACED BY TRUSTS

The Farmer, the Laborer and the Business Man Alike Threatened with Serfdom

DEMOCRACY THEIR SOLE DEFENDER

THE KANSAS CITY PLATFORM SAYS:

Private monopolies are indefensible and intolerable. They destroy competition, control the price of all material and of the finished product, thus robbing both producer and consumer; lessen the employment of labor and arbitrarily fix the terms and conditions thereof, and deprive individual energy and small capital of their opportunity for betterment. They are the most efficient agent yet devised for appropriating the fruits of industry to the benefit of the few at the expense of the many, and unless their insatiate greed is checked all wealth will be aggregated in a few hands and the republic destroyed.

We pledge the democratic party to an unceasing warfare in Nation, State and city against private monopoly in every form.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN SAYS:

A private monopoly has always been an outlaw. No defense can be made of an industrial system in which one, or a few men, can control for their own profit the output or price of any article of merchandise. Under such a system the consumer suffers extortion, the producer of raw material has but one purchaser and must sell at the arbitrary price fixed; the laborer has but one employer and is powerless to protest against injustice, either in wages or in condition of labor; the small stockholder is at the mercy of the speculator, while the traveling salesman contributes his salary to the overgrown profits of the trust. Since but a small proportion of the people can share in the advantages secured by private monopoly, it follows that the remainder of the people are not only excluded from the benefits, but are the helpless victims of every monopoly organized. It is difficult to overestimate the immediate injustice that may be done, or to calculate the ultimate effect of this injustice upon the social and political welware of the people. Our platform, after suggesting certain specific remedies, pledges the party to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in nation, state and city. I heartily approve of this promise. If elected, it shall be my earnest and constant endeavor to fulfill the promise in letter and spirit.

One of the main reasons why men struggle so hard to obtain a monopoly is that it enables them to charge more than the worth of the goods or services they supply.

In the Bramkamp wire nail case the attorney for the trust admitted that the combine had raised the price from 80 cents to $2.50 a keg, wholesale, securing thereby a monopoly profit of several million dollars. That trust went to pieces, but recently another has been formed, and wire nails have advanced over 140 per cent beyond the ordinary competitive price.

Coal Trust Extortions.

The coal combine was investigated by congress in 1893, and the report declares (1) that in 1888 the extortions of the coal monopoly averaged more than $1 a ton, or $39,000,000 for the year; and (2) that from 1873 to 1886 $200,000,000 more than a fair market price was taken from the public by this combination. It also appeared that in 1892 the combine raised the price $1.25 to $1.35 a ton on the kinds used by housekeepers, though the price of coal was already high and the cost of mining diminishing every year.

The Linseed Oil Trust in 1887 put the price up from 38 to 52 cents a gallon, or nearly $5,000,000 additional tax on the yearly output.

In the same year the Copper Syndicate put up the price from 10 to 17 and 18 cents a pound, or $30,000,000 addition on the yearly output.

A congressional investigation in 1893 brought out the fact that on the strength of a rumor that the internal revenue tax was to be increased by congress the Whisky Trust raised its prices 25 cents a gallon, which would amount to an additional profit of $12,500,000 on its yearly output.

Jump In Sugar.

In 1888, just after the Sugar Trust was formed, the average price of raw sugar was the same as in 1885, but the average price of refined sugar advanced so that the difference between the price of raw sugar and the price of refined sugar was 76 per cent more than in 1885 and about 70 per cent more than in 1887, the year the trust was formed. Recently sugar has made advances amounting to a total of 2 cents on the pound. For a dozen years we have paid each year a good deal more per pound for refining sugar than we did in 1885 (although the cost of refining has been constantly diminishing), and our sugar bill has averaged at least $10,000,000 and perhaps $20,000,000 a year more because of the trust.

Standard Oil Again.

The Standard Oil is another monopoly that has kept prices form falling as much as the diminished cost of transportation and refining would have caused them to fall in an open market, and at times it has lifted prices absolutely as well as relatively, in spite of the vast improvements in processes of manufacture, great cheapening of transportation by the pipe-line service, and the falling price of crude oil. From 1894 to 1897, for example, the price of refined oil went up 14 per cent, while the price of crude oil declined 6 per cent. Oil rose at wholesale in New York from 3 cents in November, 1897, to 6 cents in December, 1899, and it has gone still higher in 1900.

One may charge the fair value of the services he renders without a monopoly. But monopoly gives power to charge more than that value, in other words, monopoly confers the inestimable privilege of demanding something for nothing.

The Telegraph Monopoly.

We pay twice as much for our telegrams as government systems charge; the telephone monopoly charged the federal government $75 per 'phone for service the government is now supplying for itself at a cost of $10 per 'phone, and even in our largest city exchanges, where the monopoly charges $90 to $250, the service could be rendered at a profit for a uniform charge of $30 a year.

The Bell monopoly, in Grand Rapids, Wis., charged $36 for a house and $48 for a business place, while a coöperative telephone exchange is operating in the same place at $6 for a house and $18 for a business place per year and is making money. The exorbitant rates of express monopolies are notorious, and even railroads have been known to make excessive charges.

Municipal Franchises.

It is the same with all our city monopolies. Gas sells at $1 which can be made for 20 cents and distributed for 15, as we know from various gas reports and investigations.

The above are but a few samples from an enormous mass of facts demonstrating that private monopoly tends to extortion.

Extortionate charges lead, of course, to enormous profits and the building of vast fortunes which become, in their turn, the instruments of further extortion. The monopolists roll in wealth, while the working masses and competitive classes are cheated out of their fair share of the world's wealth.

Those who build palaces do not live in them.

Builders Enter Not In.

Those who dig coal have little fuel,
Those who make clothes are ill-clad,
Those who grow wheat and corn are poorly fed.

Those who build railroads do not travel.

Those who do most of the work do not enjoy the fruits of their labor, while those who do little or nothing, enjoy much; all because privat monopoly gives some men the power of appropriating what others produce.

Here are some of the profits private monopoly has made:

Oil trust—$23,000,000 in three months—about 100 per cent a year on the capital, water and all. (The oil monopoly has been known to make 520 per cent on its whole capital, and on one investment 3,000 per cent per year was obtained through railroad favoritism.—Wealth Against Commonwealth, pp. 67, 99, 100.)

Profits of Monopoly.

Steel trust—$42,500,000 a year—about 30 per cent on water and all.

Sugar trust, 200 to 400 per cent.

Wire trust, 60 per cent.

Tin plate trust, 40 per cent.

Pennsylvania coal, 30 per cent.

Fifth Ave. bank (New York), 150 per cent.

Chemical bank (New York), 200 per cent.

Metropolitan Telephone Co., 150 per cent.

Bell monopoly, $5,000,000 a year, 4-5 of its total income.

Telegraph monopoly (on original investment), 300 per cent a year.

Bay State Gas Co., 60 per cent a year.

Cleveland Gas Co., 144 per cent a year.

New York Gas, $300,000,000 in ten years, or enough to pay 10 per cent on the investment and duplicate all the plants besides.—(New York Senate Investigation).

Metropolitan Street Ry. System, New York, 28 per cent.

Philadelphia Traction—$5,500,000—16 per cent on investment.

13th and 15th Street Co., 65 per cent.

Philadelphia City, 31 per cent.

Ridge Avenue 42 per cent.

Citizens' Co., 67 per cent.

2d and 3d Streets, 25 per cent.

Union, 31 per cent.

The excessive charges and exorbitant profits of private monopoly are nothing more nor less than taxation without representation. You are not represented in the oil trust, the steel trust, the coal combine, the Chemical bank, the gas, electric, street railway, telegraph, telephone, railroad, beef, sugar, copper and tin monopolies. Yet they levy taxes on you.

Watered Stock.

The monopolists know that their outrageous profits may rouse the people if they become known and so many of those most open to the public gaze try to hide their gains by watering their capital. Ninety per cent on the real investment is only 9 per cent on a capital watered to tenfold bulk.

Fraud and extortion are among the most prolific, and are quite the most deplorable of all the results of private monopoly.

COST OF MILITARISM.

Two Hundred Millions for the Army; Seventy-Five Millions for the Navy Is What McKinley Wants.

DEMANDS ARMY OF 100,000 MEN.

We are at last to know what we are to pay for our experiment in imperialism.

The Washington government has made its demand. It demands an army of 100,000 men and it wants $200,000,000 for the next year to support its pretensions.

The navy department wants $75,000,000. The end is far away. This is only the beginning of what American taxpayers may expect.

To support the army and navy until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1902, congress will be asked to appropriate more than $200,000,000. The war department is estimating on the basis of 100,000 men.

Under the present law all volunteers and regulars in excess of about 30,000 men must be discharged before July 1, 1901, and Quartermaster-General Ludington is making arrangements for the transportation home of the volunteers, beginning next month.

It will be necessary to recruit regiments to take the place of the volunteers in case more troops are authorized, and when they are ready for active service they must be transported to Manila.

The pay of the army will be what was estimated for the current year—$47,000,000. There will be a heavy bill for clothing, medical and hospital stores, ordnance, ordnance stores and supplies and regular supplies for the quartermaster's department. The estimate made by Commissary-General Weston for subsistence stores for the current fiscal year was $11,112,242, and this will be exceeded.

Secretary Root's estimate for the military establishment for the current year aggregated $128,170,583, and it will undoubtedly be larger for the next fiscal year.

No Room for Subjects Under the Free Flag

The Supreme Purpose of the People Should Be to Oppose All Attempts to Grasp Imperial Power.

REPUBLIC FACES A PROFOUND CRISIS

The Republic is confronted by a great national crisis—involving the perpetuity of the institutions founded by the fathers.

For the first time in our country's history it has undertaken to subjugate a foreign people and to rule them by despotic power.

The president is waging war upon people of alien birth for asserting the very principles for which the fathers of our own republic pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honors.

The policy of the president offers the inhabitants of Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines no hope of independence, no prospect of American citizenship, no constitutional protection, no representation in the Congress which taxes him.

This is the government of men by arbitrary power without their consent; this is Imperialism.

This is the issue which the Kansas City platform declares to be the paramount question in American politics.

There is no room under the American flag for subjects. The president and congress, who derive all their powers from the Constitution, can govern no man without regard to its limitations.

No nation can endure part citizen and part subject.

We have come as a people to the parting of the ways. Which shall it be—Republic or Empire?

Shall we remain true to the American ideal or shall we adopt the sword?

Is the Republic of Washington and Jefferson ready for this tremendous stride backward?

KING GEORGE AND KING WILLIAM.

When the American colonies were in revolt against Great Britain, George III., then king, issued a proclamation as follows:

"I am desirous of restoring to them (the American colonies), the blessings of law, which they have fatally and desperately exchanged for the calamities of war, and the arbitrary tyranny of their chiefs." —George III. of England, in 1776.

So too while the forces of the United States were chasing the patriotic Filipinos from their burning homes, President McKinley assured them of his kind purposes as follows:

"That Congress will provide for them (the Filipinos), a government which will bring them blessings, which will promote their material interests, as well as advance their people in the paths of civilization and intelligence, I confidently believe." — President McKinley at Minneapolis, Oct. 12, 1899.

Read what Abraham Lincoln said with regard to these promises of "benevolent assimilation" offered to a people for a surrender of their liberties:

Mr. Lincoln, in a speech at Chicago, Ill., July 10, 1858, spoke as follows:

"Those arguments that are made that the inferior race are to be treated with as much allowance as they are capable of enjoying; that as much is to be done for them as their condition will allow; What are these arguments? They are the arguments that kings have made for enslaving the people in all ages of the world. You will note that all the arguments of kingcraft were always of this class. They always bestrode the necks of the people, not that they wanted to do it, but because the people were better off for being ridden. * * * Turn it every way you will, whether it comes from the mouth of a king as an excuse for enslaving the people of his country, or from the mouth of one race as a reason for enslaving the men of another race, it is all the same old serpent." —Lincoln's Complete Works, Vol. I., page 259.

"Let it be remembered," said the continental congress in addressing the states at the end of the Revolution, "that it has ever been the pride and boast of America that the rights for which she contended were the rights of human nature."

"True statesmen as they were," said Lincoln, "they knew the tendency of prosperity to breed tyrants, so they established these self-evident truths, that when, in the distant future, some men, some faction some interest should set up the doctrine that none but rich men or none but white men, or none but Anglo-Saxon white men, were entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, their posterity might look up again to the declaration of independence and take courage to renew the battle which their fathers began; so that truth, justice and mercy and all the humane and Christian virtues might not be extinguished from the land; so that no man would hereafter dare to limit and circumscribe the great principles on which the temple of liberty was being built."

DEMOCRATIC PARTY FAVORS LIBERAL PENSIONS.

We are proud of the courage and fidelity of the American soldiers and sailors in all our wars; we favor liberal pensions to them and their dependents; and we reiterate the position taken in the Chicago platform in 1896, that the fact of enlistment and service shall be deemed conclusive evidence against disease and disability before enlistment. —Kansas City Platform,

HEATH ENDORSES NEELY

"Postoffice Department.
"First Ass't Postmaster General.
"Washington, D. C., Dec. 13. 1898.

"My Dear Major—I intended to say to you when you were here that there is one man, Mr. Charles F. W. Neely, of Muncie, Ind., who wants to go into the Cuban mail service, in whom I am more interested than any other man among thousands of applicants for positions of that character. He is a newspaper writer and publisher, and about forty-two years of age, splendidly educated, a hustler, a man with the very best habits and as loyal as loyalty itself. He would make a GRAND CONFIDENTIAL MAN FOR YOU. I will write and ask him to go and see you. This is a man you will warm up to, and would like to have AS A COMPANION as well as an executive officer.

JEFFERSON AND LIBERTY.

I think all the world would gain by setting commerce at perfect liberty.

The only orthodox object of the institution of Government, is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under it.

The whole art of government consists in the art of being honest.

Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The liberty of speaking and writing guards our other liberties.

The highest obligation of this nation is to be true to itself. No obligation to any particular nations, or to all the nations combined, can require the abandonment of our theory of government and the substitution of doctrines against which our whole national life has been a protest, W. J. BRYAN.

PAPA—"Papa has got to disguise himself as a harmless old gentleman, Willie, to fool the common people. They call papa 'Honest Old Si' down town."

WHERE THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY STANDS ON LABOR

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

(From Kansas City Platform.)

In the interest of American labor and the upbuilding of the workingman, as the corner-stone of the prosperity of our country, we recommend that Congress create a Department of Labor, in charge of a Secretary, with a seat in the Cabinet, believing that the elevation of the American laborer will bring with it increased production and increased prosperity to our country at home and to our commerce abroad.

BRYAN ON ARBITRATION

(From Letter of Acceptance.)

"The platform renews the demand for arbitration between corporations and their employes. No one who has observed the friction which arises between great corporations and their numerous employes can doubt the wisdom of establishing an impartial court for the just and equitable settlement of disputes. The demand for arbitration ought to be supported as heartily by the public, which suffers inconvenience because of strikes and lockouts, and by the employers themselves, as by the employes. The establishment of arbitration will secure friendly relations between labor and capital, and render obsolete the growing practice of calling the army to settle labor troubles."

SUPPLEMENT TO THE
St. Hilaire Spectator.
ST. HILAIRE, - MINNESOTA.
Wednesday, October 17, 1900.

1800--1900.

Some Historical Parallels Between Jefferson and Bryan.

First hear now Mr. Henry Adams' summing up of the tirades against Jefferson by the Federalists of New England and New York in 1800: "Every dissolute intriguer, loose-liver, forger, false-coiner, and prison-bird; every hair-brained, loud-talking demagogue; every speculator, scoffer and atheist, was a follower of Jefferson; and Jefferson was himself the incarnation of their theories."

WHAT ROOSEVELT SAYS OF THE FOLLOWERS OF JEFFERSON

"Study the Kansas City platform and you cannot help realizing that their policy is the policy of infamy, that their triumph would mean misery so widespread that it is almost unthinkable and a disgrace so lasting that more than a generation would have to pass before it could be wiped out.

"They stand for lawlessness and disorder, for dishonesty and dishonor, for license and disaster at home and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad."

WHAT HISTORIANS SAY OF JEFFERSON'S ADMINISTRATION.

And what followed all this hysteria and malice, invocation of dread spectres and prediction of the mob? What was the sequel? "An administration," as Schouler justly describes it, "peaceful, progressive and popular beyond all precedent,"—especially strong and successful just where the direst disaster had been foreboded, in the management of the finances of the country. "The policy of this remarkable administration," writes this admirer of Jefferson, "was at once and steadily successful in winning the people; and the prestige of enthusiasm became irresistible when conjoined with the prestige of success. An executive, neither the instrument of others nor a betrayer of trusts, we may regard Jefferson as the genuine personator of that to which France's First Consul presented contemporaneously the counterfeit,—a leader of the common people in the direction of their best desires."

This verdict is not simply that of Jefferson's admirers. The historians are harmonious. Mr. Morse, in his volume on Jefferson, in the American Statesmen series,—and neither the series as a whole, nor Mr. Morse's volume in particular, will ever be accused of making admiration of Jefferson its forte—uses terms almost identical. Mr. Schouler, in the passage quoted, is writing of a time midway in Jefferson's second administration, just before the troubles with England. Mr. Morse is writing of the close of his first administration, when the campaign for his re-election approached. Everything, he says, "redounded to his good fame and popularity." The nation felt "comfortable and good natured amid the broad visible facts of the passing time. . . . Were not expenses curtailed and taxes reduced, and debts being rapidly diminished? . . . Had the country been for many years past so free from irritation and anxiety growing out of foreign affairs? . . . Had political kindliness ever before permeated the nation as it did today? Four years of prosperity and tranquility left little room for discontent with the government. Amid such influences political opposition pined and almost died."

The verdict of history on the administration of the latter day Jefferson, William Jennings Bryan, who has been more bitterly abused than even his great prototype, will closely follow out the parallel.

TO SUPPLANT WHITES

American Workmen Will Be Put in Competition with Chinamen by Conquest of the Philippines.

PLAN ALREADY OPERATING.

Never in the history of this government has the labor of this country been so menaced by the threatened influx of the Mongolian and Malay cheap labor of the far east as seems probable under the McKinley policy of imperialism, should that dangerous policy be ratified by the American people. Without the labor vote that policy cannot be approved. It behooves the laboring people, therefore, to look out for breakers ahead. What does the conquest of the Philippine islands mean? It means that they shall become American territory. What rights does that proposition carry with it to the people of the Philippines? The McKinley policy to make the Philippine islands American territory by conquest, and subject to American jurisdiction, carries with it the right of the people of those islands to free locomotion to travel whither they will from one part of American territory to another without let or hindrance.

What has happened in the Hawaiian islands under the McKinley administration since those islands have been annexed to the United States will take place in this country. Fourteen to twenty thousand Japanese coolie laborers have been imported into the Hawaiian islands by the rich sugar planters, under contract, since the annexation of those islands; and this too, in violation of the contract labor law. Why did not McKinley as the chief executive of this nation whose duty it was to enforce the law, prevent this influx of Japanese coolie labor? Simply because he is bound hand and foot in the clutches of the syndicates and trust combines of the country.

What have we in store for the Philippine islands should the McKinley war of conquest be endorsed? The influx of Chinese coolie labor into those islands under the sanction of the McKinley administration! General Wesley Merritt and General Charles A. Whittier, U. S. V., and other land and naval officers went to Paris from Manila to testify before the Paris peace commissioners as to the Philippine people, their wants, needs, capabilities and government. General Whittier said:

Then the question of the admission of Chinese, with the strong argument on both sides. The merchants of Manila are unanimous in their representations of the necessity for more cooley labor. They, and many others, require it in Manila, and think that it will be necessary in railroad building, and in the development of the country, saying, "There is no question of competing with American labor here, there being no such in the country, nor can there be, the climate prohibiting that. Cheap labor and plenty of it is the life blood of the Philippines. There is room for three millions of Chinese comfortably, while 90,000 is the present estimate."

The Omaha Bee (Republican) said editorially Oct. 14, 1898; if we absorb the Philippines, with their millions of cheap laborers, and proceed to the development of those islands industrially and commercially by the utilization of this cheap labor, NOTHING CAN BE MORE CERTAIN THAN THAT IN TIME OUR HOME LABOR WILL SUFFER FROM THE COMPETITION. WE SHALL NOT BE ABLE TO PERPETUALLY SAFEGUARD IT BY THE SYSTEM OF PROTECTION NOW IN OPERATION. . . . . "Territorial expansion as now proposed is a very serious matter for American labor and the opposition of that labor to expansion should have more vigorous expression than has been given."

This was when the Omaha Bee was opposing the conquest of the Philippines and endeavoring to shape the course of the administration.

LINCOLN VS. HIS PARTY.

(May 39, 1856. Speech at Bloomington, Ill., at the formation of party in State.—Arnold, p. 93.)

"Let us, in building our new party, plant ourselves on the rock of the Declaration of Independence and the gates of hell shall not be able to prevail against us."

[Republicans now declare the Declaration of Independence obsolete and deny its fundamental principle that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.]

Birdseye View of William McKinley

His Devious Political and Official Trail Is an Anomaly in American Politics

Always Wrong in the End

"The Republican party has accepted the European idea and planted itself upon ground taken by George III and by every ruler who distrusts the capacity of the people for self-government or denies them a voice in their own affairs."—William J. Bryan's Letter of Acceptance.

This is what President William McKinley has done, says Jonathan B. Taylor:

He has exercised the autocratic and unconstitutional power of denying the right of representation and suffrage; of trial by jury; of writ of habeas corpus; of the right to bear arms; of all rights guaranteed by the constitution to the inhabitants of newly recognized islands.

He has recognized slavery and polygamy in Sulu.

He has made war upon the non-slave holding non-polygamous inhabitants of Luzon.

He has consented to the taxation without representation of the inhabitants of Porto Rico.

He has withheld independence from the inhabitants of Cuba.

This is imperialism!

In his message President McKinley said:

"Forcible annexation is criminal aggression."

He then proceeded to "forcibly annex" the Philippine archipelago with its 8,000,000 unwilling people.

In 1899 President McKinley said:

"It is our plain duty to give free trade to the people of Porto Rico."

He immediately proceeded to importune and coerce a Republican congress into passing a tariff bill against Porto Rico in accordance with the demand of the sugar trust.

He gave pledges to Spain and Cuba that Cuba should be free and independent.

He has created a military government in Cuba, which has thwarted every step toward island autonomy and which reeks with theft and corruption of every kind.

Record in the Philippines.

President McKinley paid Spain $20,000,000 for something which Spain did not possess and had not power to deliver. The president has since that time spent of the American people's money $200,000,000 trying to obtain that for which he had paid $20,000,000. In this attempt he has only succeeded in filling graves, hospitals, insane asylums and fat insular jobs. The end is not yet.

He has appointed more commissions to carry out his unconstitutional policy than all other presidents have legally created. He is paying these commissions in violation of the constitution. (See article 1, section 9, clause 7).

These commissions have never done anything beyond administering coats of whitewash to the autocracy at Washington.

McKinley's Appointees.

President McKinley is responsible for General Alger of canned beef notoriety; for General Eagan, who was suspended for blackguardism, on full pay; for Rathbone and Neely, the Cuban postal thieves; for Gage, the banker, who turned the treasury over to Morgan and his Wall street conspirators, and for Griggs, whose sole duty is to shield the robber trusts from prosecution.

He is responsible for Hay, the British toady. He sent Hay's son to Pretoria to be the administration agent at the death of the South African republics. Under the same Hay McKinley surrendered American territory in Alaska to Great Britain and denied the right of American miners to protest.

Enemy of Labor.

At the request of the Standard Oil trust President McKinley sent its regular army into Idaho to shoot down and imprison miners who had rebelled against Standard oil tyranny in Coeur d' Alene. These men were thrown into a stockade and kept there without right of trial until many of them became raving maniacs. These facts are a part of current history.

He placed a horse doctor in charge of the medical department of Cuba. He placed Gen. Miles incommunicado and sent to Cuba in charge of the army Shafter, who rode to battle in a litter and who wanted to surrender when the first shot was fired.

Crooked All Through.

Mr. McKinley was a free silver man in 1893, a bi-metallist in 1896 and a single gold standard advocate in 1898. He was a champion of civil service in 1896, and two years later he discharged 8,000 civil service appointees to make place for political pets of Hanna and Platt.

Through his pro-British secretary of state he entered into a treaty with Great Britain whereby the American people were to dig a Nicaraguan canal and leave it defenseless to be used at pleasure by John Bull.

He permitted the opening of special mail matter to our consul at Pretoria by British agents and called our consul home because that official complained.

He makes constant declaration that the institutions of this country are in the hands of providence and then demands a large standing army, as if providence were not equal to the task.

Behold the Man of Destiny.

Secretary Root in a recent speech in New York said:

"Oh for one hour of Grant!"

Why Grant, if McKinley is such a Napoleon?

Why Grant, when the man of destiny and of providence, is at the helm?

Look at the man! He has been on every side of every question—always landing on the side opposed to the people, on the side of oppression, on the side of national shame.

LET THE PEOPLE ELECT THE SENATORS

President Johnson, in 1868, recommended a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senator by direct vote of the people, but his recommendation met with no response. About twelve years later General Weaver, then a member of congress, tried to secure the passage of a resolution submitting an amendment, but his efforts were futile. In 1892, the resolution recommended by President Johnson and urged by Congressman Weaver finally passed the house of representatives, but it has not yet reached a vote in the senate. And now after eight years more of public discussion, the proposition for the first time receives the endorsement of the national convention of one of the great parties.

If the fusion forces win a victory this fall, we shall see this reform accomplished before the next presidential election, and with its accomplishment, the people will find it easier to secure any remedial legislation which they may desire.

Great problems are solved slowly, but struggling humanity marches on, step by step, content if at each nightfall it can pitch its tent on a little higher ground.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

WANTS A MONARCHY

McKinley Organ in Iowa Voices the Real Sentiments of the Republican Party.

CONSTITUTION IS OBSOLETE.

The following article is from the Des Moines (Ia.) Globe, a Republican farmers' paper. It voices in plain language the spirit of McKinley Republicanism. What the Globe frankly speaks the imperialist secretly thinks.

It is brutally plain, and for this reason Republican organs have affected to discredit its sentiments; but it speaks out of the fullness of a heart saturated with Hamiltonianism, which is the inspiration of President McKinley; and there is in it that touch of sincerity that gives it weight as an utterance, a little rash perhaps and possibly a little premature, but significant of the trend of modern Republicanism. The article deserves the very widest publicity as showing the direction of the McKinley drift:

"For a long time thinking people who have large commercial interests have felt unsafe with our present form of government from the fact that we are controlled by the little cheap-John politicians and ward-heelers. NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO DO AWAY WITH OUR OBSOLETE CONSTITUTION and adopt a form of government that will be logical with expansion ideas and will give AMPLE PROTECTION TO CAPITAL.

"A CONSTITUTIONAL MONARCHY is probably the most desirable plan that we could now adopt. Everything is ripe for the change. We take it that the great farming interests of our land will readily adapt themselves to the change. The farmer is a great lover of law and order, and ANTI-MONARCHY IS LARGELY THE EXPRESSION OF FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY IDEAS SUGGESTED BY HOT-HEADED THEORISTS.

"We believe that history and experience have proven beyond cavil that A REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT CANNOT SUBSIST beyond a certain stage. That as soon as a great PEOPLE BECOME RICH, STRONG AND GREAT, THE REPUBLIC DROOPS AND DIES. We believe this is so, of necessity and not by chance. We believe that there is not a single case of record where the masses of a great nation possessed the intelligence to initiate laws, and were intelligent enough to compel the enforcement of such good laws as they might pass.

"It would seem as if science teaches that men are created to follow their masters—the inspired minds of the world. HISTORY SHOWS THAT A KING MUST BE AND IS FOUND IN EVERY NATION to guide its people in every great crisis. Neither is the change to be dreaded or looked forward to with foreboding. While we are in fact largely under the conditions of a monarchy, we have the evils without the benefits of the same."

Bryan and the Income Tax.

At present the government can draft the citizen, but cannot draft the pocketbook. Slowly but surely the dollar is being exalted and the man debased. Justice in taxation must be restored.

The sentiment prevailing among those who advocate an income tax justifies the prediction that the Democrats, Populists and Silver Republicans will in their next campaign advocate an amendment to the constitution specifically authorizing an income tax, and no one who has faith in the final triumph of every righteous cause will doubt the ultimate success of the effort to make an income tax a permanent part of the revenue system of the federal government. W. J. BRYAN.

NO FREEDOM NOW FOR FILIPINOS.

"I have always thought that all men should be free, but if any should be slaves, it should be first those who desire it for themselves and secondly those who desire it for others."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

From an address to an Indiana Regiment, March 17, 1865.

BENEVOLENT ASSIMILATION.

A Republican Newspaper Account of a Philippine Battle.

Just past this a few hundred yards we saw a solitary body lying in the road. The body was almost stripped of clothing, and there were no marks of rank left on the blood-soaked coat. But the face of the dead man had a look I had never noticed on the face of other dead men I had found in insurgent uniform on the field of battle, in the wake of an American firing line. The features were clear cut and forehead high and shapely. I decided the man must have been an insurgent officer. A soldier came running down the trail.

"That's old Pilar," he said. "We got the old rascal. I guess he's sorry he ever went up against the Thirty-third."

"There ain't no doubt about its being Pilar," rattled on the young soldier. "We got his diary, and his letters, and all his papers, and Sullivan of our company's got his pants, and Snider's got his shoes, but he can't wear them because they're too small, and a sergeant in G company got one of his silver spurs, and a lieutenant got the other, and somebody swiped the cuff buttons before I got here or I would have swiped them, and all I got was a stud button and his collar with blood on it."

So this was the end of Gregorio del Pilar. Only 22 years old, he managed to make himself a leader of men when he was hardly more than a boy, and at last had laid down his life for his convictions. Major Marsh had the diary. In it he had written under the date of December 2, the day he was killed:

"The general has given me the pick of all the men that can be spared and ordered me to defend the pass. I realize what a terrible task is given me. And yet I feel that this is the most glorious moment of my life. What I do is done for my beloved country. No sacrifice can be too great."

A private, sitting by the camp fire, was exhibiting a handkerchief. "It's old Pilar's. It's got 'Dolores Hosea' on the corner. I guess that was his girl. Well, it's all off with Gregorio."

"Anyhow," said Private Sullivan, "I got his pants. He won't need 'em any more."

The man who had the general's shoes strode proudly past, refusing with scorn a Mexican dollar and a pair of shoes taken from one of the private insurgent soldiers. A private sitting on a rock was examining a golden locket containing a curl of a woman's hair. "Got the locket off his neck," said the soldier. . . .

As the main column started on its march for the summit of the mountain a turn in the trail brought us again in sight of the insurgent general far down below us. There had been no time to bury him. Not even a blanket or a poncho had been thrown over him.

A crow sat on the dead man's feet. Another perched on his head. The fog settled down upon us. We could see the body no longer.

We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone.
But we left him alone in his glory.

And when Private Sullivan went by in his trousers, and Snider with his shoes, and the other man who had the cuff buttons, and the sergeant who had the spur, and the lieutenant who had the other spur, and the man that had the handkerchief, and another man that had his shoulder straps, it suddenly occurred to me that his glory was about all we had left him.—Richard Henry Little in Chicago Tribune.

Rights never conflict; duties never clash. Can it be our duty to usurp political rights which belong to others? Can it be our duty to kill those who, following the example of our forefathers, love liberty well enough to fight for it? W. J. BRYAN.

The Children of the Coal Miners

Do you hear the children weeping, O my brothers,
Ere the sorrow comes with years?
They are leaning their young heads against their mothers,
And that cannot stop their tears.
The young lambs are bleating in the meadows;
The young birds are chirping in the nest,
The young fawns are playing with the shadows;
The young flowers are blowing toward the west—
But the young, young children, O, my brothers,
They are weeping bitterly!
They are weeping in the playtime of the others,
In the country of the free.

—Mrs. Browning.

FALSE PRETENSE OF PROSPERITY.

Of all the humbug and false pretense of the McKinley administration there is nothing more hollow than the cry of "prosperity." The suppressed rotten beef scandal, which is sought to be covered by pleas of patriotism; the Cuban frauds, whose authors are pretended to be prosecuted; the boodle-furnishing trusts, which are held up as enemies while licensed to tax the people, are all palpable evidences of the miserable hypocrisy of Mark Hanna's regime, but for cool audacity nothing has equaled the clamor about "prosperity."

Dr. O. J. Perkins, of Chicago, has made a study of a certified report signed by A. H. Gleason, Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Labor and Industrial Statistics of Nebraska. Under his analysis this report tells a widely different story from that daily proclaimed by Republican speakers and press. "Using the round numbers," he says, "the mortgages 'satisfied' during the three and a half years ending June 13, 1900, amount to $99,000,000, as against $77,000,000 'filed,' or a difference of $22,000,000 in favor of 'prosperity.' This applies to real estate mortgages only and would bear out the claim of the Republicans provided there was nothing further. When, however, we pass to the next column we find that $238,000,000 in chattel mortgages have been filed as against $77,000,000 satisfied—a difference of $161,000,000 against 'prosperity.'"

The difference between $161,000,000 and $22,000,000 is $139,000,000. This is the actual increase in the mortgage indebtedness of the state of Nebraska according to the sworn statement of the county clerk. These large figures are not easily comprehended. Viewed from another standpoint it may be easier. Allowing that the population of Nebraska has increased twenty per cent since the census of 1890, we find that the increased indebtedness is over $109 for each man, woman and child in the state.

If the people of the state of Nebraska with abundant crops are in this short time plunged $139,000,000 more in debt than at the beginning of this period, how many years will it require under the same regime to place the property entirely in the hands of mortgage holders?

Those not acquainted with the present methods of loaning money in the west and south will be astonished at the large increase in chattel mortgages shown by the report. This is explained by the fact that the lender prefers a short time loan at an increased rate of interest secured by a mortgage on growing live stock to one on real estate. An analysis of similar reports made by other state officers in the west and southwest will show practically the same results.

Instead of there being any decrease of mortgage debt in Indiana, the mortgage debt, real estate and chattel, has increased during every year of the McKinley administration, and the total increase for the three years completed is in excess of $50,000,000. In two years of McKinley prosperity the chattel mortgages of Indiana have increased 255,151 in number, and $7,382,234 in amount, and the total mortgage debt of the state in three years of McKinley prosperity has increased $55,946,746 over what has been paid, not including the chattel mortgages and foreclosures of 1897.

A shell game is what the republicans were about to play on the voters of this county only for one of the pluggers giving the snap away.

Young men whose fathers became full citizens before they become twenty one years of age, are full citizens themselves and entitled to vote.

The new sixty foot flag pole was placed in position at the village hall Monday by I. Dahleen and old glory will float from its top as occassion demands.

At the populist county convention held at Cass Lake Saturday, Judge Ives was named on the ticket as probate judge, but later declined the nomination.

No news of any importance since the rainy season set in, but in the gossip line its at a white heat and we are thinking seriously of running a column for the benefit of a few in order to keep up with the times—so to speak.

Miss Mary Quande of Thief River Falls will be here Friday and Saturday with a fine stock of millinery goods and invites the ladies of St. Hilaire and vicinity to call and inspect the same at her former stand in the Holmes building.

The special election held at Thief River Falls last week for the issuance of $4,500.00 electric light plant bonds carried by a vote of five to one. When the plant is completed it would be a good time to change the name of the city.

Six thousand new offices are officially started to have been created by the last congress and about $7,000,000 additional have been appropriated to pay these and the expenses of the commissions of President McKinley. Imperialism comes high.

Trusts, now that election is near and fearing that McKinley will be defeated have concluded to drop the price on trust goods until after election. But we will pay it all back after election, with interest. If McKinley is elected, the trusts live.

The local in last weeks issue referring to the contract for building the new county jail at Red Lake Falls should have read $1,500 instead of $15,000. Our attention was called to it by a prominent citizen from the county seat and will gladly correct the mistake.

If Frank Midget Eddy is defeated this year it will be by republican votes. We have heard a number of republicans say that they will never again vote for Eddy because of his vote in congress for that infamous robbery of the poor defenseless Porto Ricans. And that is right.—Fergus Globe.

During the month of September, just closed, the receipts to the Modern Woodman society's benefit fund were $417,994.00, the members paying numbering 500,984. The amount paid to the society's general fund was $8,022.96. Making the grand total receipts $426,-017.36. The society "skips" an assessment this month.

Referring in his recent speech at Milaca to Gov. Lind's administration, state auditor, R. C. Dunn said: "I have never been accused of bitter political partisanship, and I do not regard any man or any party as infallible, but I have no hesitation in asserting that there is not in the Union a Better governed state than Minnesota.

Hanna has money enough to pay each man who votes for McKinley a liberal sum. The banks and trusts who furnish the money do it as an investment. They are simply paying for the privilege of skinning the people for four years. The privilege is worth a large sum and Hanna has the money to buy it for them.—National Watchman.

Prosperity and hard times seem to come in successive waves at intervals of about ten years. When the world is prosperous it spends too much money and then has to retrench to get even. There are signs that such a period of retrenchment is near at hand. It will come from entirely natural causes but it will be charged to the party in power even though it be world wide.

More than 50,000 men have been "laid off" by employing corporations within the last two weeks with threats that if Bryan is elected they cannot return to work. McKinley is either a fraud, or the laws governing elections should be enforced. The penitentiary is the only fit place for men who seek to control elections by threats of starvation.

Hon. T. J. Knox, candidate for Railroad and Warehouse commissioner will speak at the village hall Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock sharp. Farmers should avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this able speaker discuss the wheat situation of the state as well as other issues of the campaign. Remember the date and make it a point to be present as the farmers interests will be discussed.

A letter from our old friend S. M. Dalnard, who is now located at Everett, Washington, says Bryan is going to carry that state hands down. He further states he cannot vote this fall "owing to trouble in China." Sam will be greatly missed in political circles as he has always taken an active part during presidential campaigns.

A little excitement was created last Thursday as the train was pulling in from Thief River Falls when a horse belonging to Ed. Aubol held the right of way for over a mile and would not leave the track regardless of the continued shrill whistling of the locomotive. The old grey would have been an easy winner to the depot but for an accident which befell him as he fell through the bridge near the Fourth street crossing. The engineer not wishing to take advantage of the horse when down reversed the engine and saved the animal from being gored to death by the cow-catcher. The passengers aboard were notified and all turned in and in the course of twenty minutes had the animal on its feet none the worse for his little experience of running the race and going through the bridge.

Eddy's campaign manager, by the name of Adams, from Fergus Falls, is economising in his Eddy literature. He is sending out some old portraits, labelled Frank M. Eddy, that were left over from two years ago. Elmer realizes that its no use to buy new literature for a lost cause. Eddy says himself, after his extended tour through the northern part of the district that "it seems to be anti-republican this year." He has made himself obnoxious, even to the Indian vote and there are about 2,000 such votes in this district—solid against Eddy. So poor Eddy has lost the Indian vote as well as the votes of all honest and respectable citizens in this district. Eddy's end is drawing near.

The above from the Pelican Rapids Press, a staunch republican paper would indicate that Mr. Eddy was elected to stay at home.

Should not Study at Home.

Notify your child's teacher that no more study will be permitted in your home. See to it that your child is allowed to come home from school with the same satisfactory feeling that the business man feels when he comes home; that his day's work is done. It is over. It is behind him. He is ready to give his thoughts to other things: to clear his mind of the day's work; to calm his brain for a refreshing nights rest, to which he finally goes with thoughts of other things than business. So should it be with the child. His studies should not be the last thing on his mind. He should go to sleep after hours of play and fresh air. Then this sleep will be quiet and refreshing, and his mind, when he awakens, will be clear and fresh for a new day's studies —Edward Bok in the Ladies' Home Journal.

A Home Product.

A Minnesota man should think twice before he buys Illinois butter, or New York cheese, because, in the markets of the world, Minnesota butter and cheese are rated higher than the product of any other state. Some attribute this to the climate, some to the soil. The same climate and soil produce the barley from which is brewed "Golden Grain Belt" beer. No Minnesota household is complete without a case.

"To try it is to buy it and drink it all the time." It is made by the Minneapolis Brewing Company and sold by Alex Thompson, Crookston, Minn.

"Sheep Husbandry in Minnesota."

This useful little book is from the pen of Prof. Thos. Shaw of the University of Minnesota, and the press of the Webb Publishing Co., St. Paul. It has been written, as the author states in the preface, in the hope that it may prove helpful to the farmers. The book which embraces some 216 pages, is strongly bound in paper and is handsomely illustrated, and it covers the whole ground relating to sheep husbandry as adapted to Minnesota conditions But, since Minnesota conditions are virtually the same as those in all the northwest, the book is equally applicable to all the northwest. It treats of every phase of sheep husbandry, as adapted to the conditions of the farm, from the birth of the lamb until it reached the block, in so much that the individual who follows the instructions contained therein will follow a safe guide, although previously unacquainted with sheep husbandry. The book is published and distributed under the auspices of the Minnesota Live Stock Breeders' Association. It was written by the author without compensation and is dedicated to the farmers of the state. A copy will be sent to any farmer in Minnesota who forwards five cents for postage. Anyone outside of Minnesota can obtain a copy who forwards twenty-five cents to the Minnesota Live Stock Breeders' Association. Address Prof. Thos. Shaw, Secretary, St. Anthony Park, Minn.

Running a newspaper, says an exchange, is just like running a hotel only different. When a man goes into a hotel and finds something on the table that does not suit him, he does not get up and kick and raise cain with the landlord, and tell him to "stop his darned old hotel." Well, hardly. He sets that dish aside and wades into some of the many other dishes that does suit him. It is different with some newspaper readers. They find an item occassionally that does not suit them exactly, and without stopping to think it may please hundreds of other readers; make a grand stand play of their supreme asinity, and hasten over to "stop their paper." But the paper don't stop; not much, but this particular kicker's copy fails to reach him the next day, and he runs out and borrows his neighbor's, just to see if the paper is still publishing, you know."

J. L. JOHNSON.

J. L. Johnson, the Peoples Party nominee for judge of probate in Red Lake county was born on a farm in Freeborn county Minnesota 35 years ago. He lived on a farm and attended public school until he was about 7 years of age when he entered Fergus Falls high school and graduated with the class of '85, after graduating Mr. Johnson taught school in Polk county for two years. In 1887 he moved to St. Hilaire and became engaged in the drug business and through his courtesy and honesty made friends throughout the northern part of the county.

J. L. JOHNSON.

Mr. Johnson has at different times been honored by his home town and at the present time holds the office of village recorder which he has held for the past eleven years. He is a safe and conservative man and we warrant to say that by electing him to the office of judge of probate of Red Lake county the public will be honestly and efficiently served.

If men would always live up to their highest ideals, what a delightful place the world would be; and at the same time how weak the characters of men would be. It takes storm as well as sunshine to develop the strength of the oak. It needs trial and temptation and failure and discouragement to perfect the life of the soil. It is from conflict that power comes. If there was not all the time a "war in our members," a ceaseless struggle between the higher and lower tendencies, man must be merely a useful plaything in the economy of creation. No man deserves credit for doing right if he has no inclination to do wrong—not a bit more than water should be praised for running down hill. If there were no possibilities of evil there could be no possibilities of good. Without depths there could be no heights.—Ex.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S BIG BILL

Reward Money For Rescue of Pekin Legations Now Due.

Emperor William of Germany has quite a neat little bill which no doubt he will soon be called upon to settle and in all likelihood, when it is properly presented, he will pony up like a little man. It will make quite a hole in his pocket change and maybe he will have to let two or three new uniforms go unordered and unmade for a few months, for the bill promises to be considerably over $1,000,000, a sum not very small for even an Emperor to pay. The obligation was self-imposed and came about in a manner now pretty well known to the world. At the time when the greatest alarm prevailed with regard to the fate of the foreigners in Pekin the Kaiser, prompted by one of his customary generous impulses, made it known through his naval and consular representatives in China that he held himself ready to pay a reward of 1,000 taels or more for every foreigner then in Pekin who was rescued safe and sound. It must be added that at the time the lot of the foreigners at Pekin seemed absolutely desperate. Now, however, nearly every foreigner shut up in Pekin at the time has been rescued. There are considerably over 1,000 of them, a number of Americans being comprised in the party.

The Berlin newspapers estimate that it will cost the Emperor considerably over $1,000,000 to pay the full amount, and, assuming that their monarch intends to settle, they are urging him to restrict the award of the money to the German officers and men who took part in the relief of Pekin. Unfortunately, however, for this line of argument, the American, English, Japanese and Russian troops were first to reach the Chinese capital, where the German contingent did not arrive until the legations had been relieved and the city had been already two days in the possession of the allies.

Charity of an Editor

How a New York Fresh Air Scheme Was Carried Out Despite Weather

During the recent hot spell in New York, it occurred to the editor of one of the papers in that city that a little charity to the sweltering children of the tenements would look well on the front page. So he packed a squad of the dirtiest little girls and boys available and sent them down to Coney Island.

They were put in charge of a "cub" reporter from the country, who had orders to "take them out, keep them going, and get in a column a day, top-head." The weather changed in the night and the week turned out to be the coldest known in New York in many a summer. Nevertheless the "bright young man" had his orders. He dragged his victims out, carted them to the island, handed around pails and set them to digging and wading. All that week the farmhouses of Coney Island were besieged by barefoot children with pails and shovels begging a chance to come in and get warm. Before they were comfortably settled at the fire the newspaper man would rush in and drag them off to the water.

"Here, here," he would say, "you have come to dig in the sand and splash in the water, and you've got to do it."

At the end of the week, when he returned his squad and started in to get a new supply, the inhabitants of the "sweltering tenements' rose enmasse, laid him out with clubs and rocks and defied philanthropy. Worst of all, the paper had to pay the resulting doctor bills in order to hush up the story.

Savagery of Philipinos

Stripped Dead Americans and Built Fires on Their Breasts.

Lieut. William Weaver of the Thirty-second United States volunteers, who has just returned to Kansas from the Philippines, tells of barbarities practiced by Filipinos upon American soldiers. He says that outside of the Macabebes, who are friendly to the Americans, the Filipinos are most cruel.

"Six men were killed in Dinalupijahan," said Weaver, "and I do not think there was a man that had fewer than 10 bullet holes in his body. In the case of one American soldier, it looked as though the muzzle of the revolver had been placed right in his eye and fired. He was stabbed also in the neck and breast with bayonets.

"Here is another example of their cruelty. Harry Easter of Emporia and McDonald of Iowa, two of my company, were killed instantly. Harry Easter was shot in the neck and the other man was shot in the back of the head. Only about 20 of the company were with them and they were attacked by about 250 Filipinos. The Americans fought the Filipinos an hour and forty minutes. They had to leave the dead, and when they came back the rebels had stripped their bodies of all their clothing. They had built a fire of sticks and grass on their breasts. We rescued the bodies, however, before they were burned."

SIMULATED ABNORMALITY.

Power a Negro Who Deceived Many Physicians.

An aged colored individual, in making the rounds of the physicians' offices and hospitals, exhibiting himself as a man with two hearts. He also claims to be able to displace his hearts into the abdominal cavity. He has traveled widely in this country and has been in Europe. There is no evidence whatever that the man has two hearts, nor is there any sign that an aneurism exists. When he is about to "dislocate his heart" he asks the examiner first to listen with the stethoscope or phonendoscope over the normal cardiac area for the heart sounds, says the Philadelphia Medical Journal. He then twists and contorts himself in various ways, using actively the muscles of the anterior abdominal wall. As he does this there is seen to rise suddenly in the left iliac region a rounded, pear-shaped prominence, which is pulsatile and to which he now asks the examiner to apply the stethoscope. An obscure rhythmic sound is heard over the area, which is the size of a large fist, and which conveys to the palpitating hand a sensation of throbbing. He can produce a similar swelling, though less prominent on the right side. With a great show of effort he holds the prominence on one or the other side for about twenty seconds. If the examiner, instead of listening over the supposed heart, places his stethoscope in the normal situation of the valve points, he readily detects the heart sounds in practically undiminished intensity. Moreover, percussion over the supposed hearts, gives a more or less tympanitic note. The man has evidently by long practice gained a peculiar control over the superficial abdominal muscles—such as some persons have over the scalp and ears—by means of which he is able to throw a certain section into prominence and to produce a rhythmic vibration that closely simulates, both in character and rate, the pulsation of the heart.

Bareheaded Man Next.

A Spruce street doctor was commenting upon what has become known as the shirt waist fad. "Now, that the shirt waist man has become an assured fact," he said, "I suppose that the next innovation, prompted by newspaper publicity will be the bareheaded man. Really, I am not jesting. Just as soon as the weather becomes cooler it would be a wise thing to exploit and encourage the bareheaded man. Of course, it wouldn't do for a man to go without any covering for his head this kind of weather; being unused to it, he would probably suffer from sunstroke or heat prostration. Men wear their hats too much. If they wore them less there would be less headache and nervous exhaustion and far fewer bald heads. There's the point to emphasize. A man cares less about a headache than he does about his hair falling out. Advocate the bare-headed man on the plea of saving his hair and he will become even more popular than the shirt waist man. This is really a sensible suggestion."—Philadelphia Record.

Mr. Gladstone's Retort.

Mr. Gladstone was not usually regarded as a wit, and he certainly did not set up for one, yet I have heard him say, at one time or another, things which I consider to be witty. Many years ago, when residing in Liverpool, I was present one evening at a meeting at which Mr. Gladstone appeared as the advocate of the candidate of his brother-in-law, Sir Stephen Glynne, who was at that time standing for the representation in parliament of a neighboring county. At the moment when Mr. Gladstone had finished his speech a shabby-looking, unkempt and ragged man thrust himself forward to the front of the meeting and insisted on asking Mr. Gladstone a question. He wanted to know whether Mr. Gladstone would not hold his brother-in-law bound to follow him in every course he proposed to take whenever he, Mr. Gladstone, should become prime minister. The object of the man's question was obviously to discredit Sir Stephen Glynne and to show him up as the mere nominee and instrument of his illustrious brother-in-law. There were some angry interruptions, and there were also many scornful cries of "Don't answer him" from the audience. But Mr. Gladstone, having first stilled the noise by a wave of his hand, and then fixed his eyes on the rude questioner, said in his blandest manner: "I shall hold my brother-in-law bound to follow me when I am prime minister so long as I adopt a course which tends to the welfare of the people; and I shall hold him bound to follow you, when you are prime minister, so long as you adopt a course that tends to the same great result." I need not say that the interrupter thereafter remained silent.—Chamber's Journal.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

CHARLOTTE JOHNSON

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.

"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flowing. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.

"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness. I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

A Trick of the Trade.

The managers of many of the theatrical companies which tour in India, and in India only, have a clever way of dispensing entirely with two of the most important members of the cast, thereby saving salary expenses, and at the same time of insuring that the house shall be crowded. A week or so before, let us say, A's company is due to arrive in, say, Allahabad, the officer in command of the garrison there, or else some citizen who is equally influential, receives a courteous letter from A to the effect that two of the leading members of his (A's) theatrical company have been suddenly taken ill, and asking the Important Personage whether he could, by any possibility, induce two well known town residents who have histrionic talents to play the parts, adding, slyly, that if he cannot succeed in doing so it will be useless for the company to visit the town. As a rule, the Important Personage falls into the trap.—Spare Moments.

Marine Note.

The new reporter had been assigned to a "feature story," on the incidents of seafaring life, and discovered this interesting note:

"Capt. Yardarm, of the schooner Blue Blazes, found himself in a peculiar predicament off the coast of Florida last Saturday morning. On Friday night the ship encountered a violent gale, which blew away the wake of the vessel, and it required the hardest effort of the night watch to arouse the sleeping crew that morning."—Baltimore American.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh. Public men of all parties recognize in Peruna a national catarrh remedy of unequaled merit. MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

IT IS UP TO M'KINLEY.

PERTINENT INTERROGATION ON TYRANNY OF GOLD.

A Question for the President—Do Victims of a Trust Deserve Less Sympathy than Victims of a Flood?—Thousands Threatened with Hunger.

Mr. McKinley's response to suffering in Texas was prompt and admirable. The war department was ordered to relieve distress as far as possible and to spend money freely to that end.

Mr. McKinley's action in the Klondike and at Cape Nome, when American citizes by thousands were threatened with starvation, was equally commendable. Government steamers were dispatched to bring back to civilization unfortunates stranded because of foolish, thoughtless impulsiveness. With the steamers went provisions to feed the needy.

We heartily indorse the action of the president in the distress in Texas and in the delusive gold fields.

Thousands of citizens being threatened with great danger, the president justly decided that he could brave the bogy of "paternalism" and send relief at the expense of the nation.

We now ask Mr. McKinley a very serious question in regard to another large body of citizens threatened with starvation, oppressed with a danger, permanent and therefore more formidable than storm or cold.

In the coal fields of Pennsylvania half a million human beings, victims of a law-defying trust, are threatened with starvation as winter come on.

The trust has no single sympathizer, no single ally in all creation, except hunger, but it wants and needs no other or better ally.

On HUNGER the trust relies to win its victory over half a million men, women and children.

Mr. McKinley, what are you going to do when hunger drives those hundreds of thousands of citizens to desperation?

Will you allow the Coal Trust to make good its boast, and with hunger's help to subdue and enslave those citizens whom you are sworn to protect from injustice?

Will you permit the trusts, which have defied the laws that you are sworn to enforce, to overrule the promptings of humanity?

Breakers of the law are oppressing half a million people.

They rely on poverty, on starvation, and, Mr. McKinley, on your SLUGGISHNESS for success in their attack on human rights.

Are you going to realize the hopes of law breakers?

Are you going to watch hundreds of thousands hopelessly fighting against unlimited money and villainy—or will you send to victims of the trust, as you sent to victims of the storm, help that shall carry them through their troubles?

These men and women now suffer because you have permitted the trusts to grow strong and defiant during the past four years.

You can diminish their sufferings, if you will, and bring the trust to terms, if you will.

Will you send supplies to the relief of the Pennsylvania miners, as you did the victims of the Texas storm and the northern gold fields?

Are you more interested in HALF A MILLION POOR MEN or in HALF A DOZEN very RICH men?

We believe that your reply to this question may have a certain bearing on your future career.

JUST HOW IT IS.

Miner—Say, look here, boss! The coal trade is prosperous just now; don't you think that we ought to share in that "McKinley prosperity" the papers tell so much about? We ought to have more pay.

Operator—What are you fellows always kicking for? We are doing the best we can for you. We buy labor in the labor market. When the market is full we don't have to pay much; when it is empty we can import all the men we want to fill it; so, you see, we don't have to pay more wages than we are paying now. Besides, the royalty has gone up. You wouldn't deprive the mine owner of his share of prosperity, would you?

Mine Owner—That's right, these ungrateful fellows are never satisfied. What would become of them if we didn't allow them to work our land? They've got work, what more do they want? I'll see my partner, who has command of the militia. He'll be on hand in case these fellows talk too much.

I do not fear that McKinley will proclaim himself king next year should he be re-elected. I fear not that the United States will be a monarchy in five or ten or twenty-five years. But I fear that in the course of time, if we pursue this policy of imperialism, we will find ourselves descending on a toboggan slide of national degradation. We cannot violate the eternal principles of liberty in the far east without at the same time striking a blow at our Democracy at home. We cannot long retain self-government in its purity for ourselves if we should deny it to others. We cannot command the respect of the other nations if we belie our own professions. We cannot deserve the health of the republic if the bacillus of despotism dwells in any part of our own domain.

The peace treaty was not binding until it was ratified by the United States senate and by the Spanish cortes. The senate ratified it Feb. 6, 1899. The cortes ratified it April 11, 1899. And still, in December, 1898, McKinley had the audacity to assert American sovereignty over the Philippines and call upon the inhabitants to submit or be shot. If they ask you who fired the first shot tell them it was William McKinley. His infamous proclamation was a declaration of war. If patriotism in our congress could have risen above partisanship William McKinley would have been impeached for this unprecedented arrogation of power.—Sigmund Zeisler.

LABOR'S GREATEST ENEMY.

The New York Central Labor Union has received letters from over one hundred representatives of labor organizations in Porto Rico, stating that they are imprisoned in San Juan by military authority, the chiefs of the American army suppressing all labor organizations which they can discover. These victims of McKinley's despotism include the presidents and secretaries and members of arbitration committees of nearly every labor union on the island. And yet the president, in his letter of acceptance, with characteristic hypocrisy, claims that "Congress has given to this island a government in which the inhabitants participate, elect their own local legislature, enact their own local laws," etc., every word of which is false, as the legislature which congress provided for electing has not been elected and has only been granted advisory power.

Thus the administration antagonizes labor wherever it can, from the frozen Coeur d'Alene to the tropics, by palpably unconstitutional means. Russia excels it only in barbarity, but not in despotism. Let Americans realize before it is too late that administration rule in these localities is but the prelude and warning of what may soon be reproduced all over the country if McKinley should be re-elected.

I think the only real question before the American people in this campaign is the question of the right of self-government. President McKinley and his supporters seek to set aside the doctrine of self-government and to establish in its stead the ancient heresy of the right of government by brute force. For me, no other interpretation of our attitude toward the Filipinos is possible.

The only difference between a republic and an empire is this: In a republic of sovereign equals all of the people participate in the government on equal terms; in an empire subject and dependent colonies are ruled by the home government without their consent or participation. Which principle shall we adopt? I believe that we will be true to the democracy of the golden rule rather than to the autocracy of the rule of gold.

It has been said that our government was conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. This does not mean all Americans; it means all of the people of the round globe; and let me tell you, workingmen of America, that only by standing in solid phalanx for equal rights for the little brown men of the Philippine Islands can you make your own liberty permanent and secure.—Mayor Jones of Toledo.

"If Senator Beveridge is not aware that the ill-feeling of Cubans against Americans is growing more tense every day, he ought to be," says the New York Evening Post. "The native press is more and more outspoken. Returned army officers privately admit that the Cubans hate us worse than they ever did the Spaniards. Some who know the island well even predict an armed revolution. There doubtless would be one if the thing were not so hopeless. But there can be no doubt that public opinion in Cuba is inflamed and exasperated to a high degree. And this is the time a rising young statesman chooses to trumpet forth our intention first to lie to the Cubans, and then to seize their land! More in anger than in sorrow, we say to Senator Beveridge that he is playing the part of an incendiary in Cuba, at a time when policy, to say nothing of honor, calls for every possible act and word of conciliation."

"The coal miners of Pennsylvania, and incidentally the laboring men everywhere," the Atlanta Constitution says, "might do well to let their imaginations picture the treatment the strikers would receive at the hands of federal authorities and federal troops were Roosevelt in the presidential chair. The hoodlum campaign being waged through the west by this mouthful advocate of the 'strenuous' life is a fair example of his methods. Yet the prospect of a Rooseveltian president is one of the awful possibilities involved in Republican victory this year."

The new plant erected less than a year ago at Coshocton, Ohio, by the Coshocton Rolling Mill company, and recently sold to the American Sheet Steel company (trust), is shut down and will be dismantled. The town gave a bonus of $20,000 to secure the mill, but was far-sighted enough to stipulate for its return if the works should close, and the trust will refund the money rather than continue the factory. Mills are also being dismantled at Leetonia, Haselton and Warren, Ohio.

"There are no trusts that injure the people," said Mr. Hanna a few days ago. But when there was a prospect that the hard coal trust might injure Mr. McKinley it was different. Mr. McKinley is sacred; the people are nothing.

MONEY IN GAS.

Few people on the outside realize or even dream of the enormous profits of the gas monopoly. Once in a while some of the facts come out and the public obtains fleeting glimpses of the astonishing truth. A few years ago daylight was let in on the gas monopoly of Washington and the country was started by the disclosures. There have been like revelations from time to time in Chicago and New York and elsewhere and now we are treated to an exhibit of gas profits in Springfield, Mass., a city of some 50,000 population, which will rank with the most striking on record.

From the books of the Springfield Gaslight Company, as shown in a report of its own, the profits of the business are and have been phenomenal. In 1851 the concern had $25,000 invested in a plant. This is substantially all the money which has been invested in the enterprise. Since that time the company has paid $1,682,473 in dividends; and it now has a capital stock of $500,000, and paid out of these dividends. Whenever an issue of stock was made a corresponding dividend was declared to offset it. Consequently for every dollar put into the plant originally, it has yielded $67 to its fortunate holders. It is now paying $30,000 a year, or 120 per cent on what was originally paid in.

This enormous profit is the result of an exclusive ownership of the streets. As there seems to be no practicable way of securing competition in gas service, on account of cost of laying mains, the remedy for the extortion is public ownership of gas works, which would cut down the price of gas to one-half or one-third of present price and still pay a profit on the money invested.

TREATMENT OF PORTO RICO.

In his letter of acceptance President McKinley referred to Porto Rico, as follows:

"Congress has given to this island a government in which the inhabitants participate; elect their own legislature, enact their own local laws, provide their own system of taxation. . . . The generous treatment of the Porto Ricans accords with the most liberal thought of our own country, and encourages the best aspirations of the people of the island."

These statements are of the kind of half-truths which are worse than whole lies. Correct as far as they go, they yet convey an impression, as the president intends, far different from the actual state of affairs. For example, while the inhabitants elect their own legislature, Mr. McKinley omits to state that every act of the legislature can be vetoed by the governor general, who is appointed by the president, and removable at his pleasure. Nor does he add that the governor's veto can only be overridden by a two-thirds vote of the executive council, whose members are also appointed by the president. In view of these facts, the president's partial statement of the truth becomes a wilful misrepresentation which of itself would be enough to stamp his whole letter as unreliable even where it purports to quote facts.—Justice.

Grabbing the Land-Grabbers.

In 1896 the New Zealand parliament empowered the government to take possession of any large estate at the assessed price even though the owner refused to sell, and divide it into small farms to be let out on perpetual lease. This is what the large land owners kick about. They raise a big hue and cry about the government having no right to set aside the "vested rights" of a private citizen or corporation. The kick did no good and the people are talking—through the government—estate after estate where the original land-grabbers had established miniature monarchies among their tenants and laborers.—People's Paper.

Abraham Lincoln hated war and its horrors, although his presidency was one long war. When a general objected to the pardoning of twenty-four deserters, all of whom had been sentenced to be shot, Lincoln answered: "Mr. General, there are already far too many weeping widows in the United States. For God's sake, do not ask me to add to the number, for I won't do it." What would Lincoln have said to the Anglo-Republican policy of imperialism which would fill the land with mothers and widows weeping for sons and husbands, not killed in defending the nation's life, but in expeditions to distant lands in war upon those who have done us no injury?—Eastern State Journal.

As John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, has given several professors their walking ticket from the Baptist University for thinking for themselves and teaching the students to do likewise by allowing them to study socialistic questions, and as he recently forced his minister in New York to resign for being too outspoken, a writer in the Chicago Public has suggested that he use the doxology in a revised form, as follows:

"Praise John from whom oil blessings flow,
Praise him oil creatures here below,
Praise him above, the heavenly host,
Praise Bill and John, but John the most."

The workingman who can be influenced to vote for McKinley by threats of starvation may be driven to the polls in 1904 at the point of the bayonet to vote for Hanna. It would be the logical conclusion of present methods.

VICTIMS OF STORM

TORNADO SWEEPS EVERYTHING BEFORE IT.

Six People Killed Outright and Three Others Are Missing and Supposed to Be Dead as the Result of a Tornado That Struck Lodi, Texas — Feared Further Loss of Life Has Resulted in the Country—Great Damage to Cotton Crop and Other Property.

Atlanta, Tex., Oct. 22.—A tornado struck about half a mile west of Lodi and fifteen miles west of here at 7 o'clock last evening. The path of the tornado was 200 yards wide and the wind swept everything before it. One house in its path, occupied by colored people, was destroyed, six people being killed outright and three others are missing and supposed to be dead. The cyclone traveled from the southwest to the northeast, crossing the Texas & Pacific railroad at Campbell Spur, a lumber loading station two miles north of Lodi. The lumber was scattered in all directions. It is feared further loss of life has resulted out in the country. A hard rain fell here. The result will be considerable damage to the cotton crop remaining ungathered in this section.

FAMOUS WRITER IS DEAD.

Charles Dudley Warner Is Taken by Heart Disease.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 22. — Charles Dudley Warner died suddenly late Saturday afternoon, leaving Mark Twain the only survivor of the trio that gave Hartford a literary reputation. Mr. Warner took luncheon at the house of A. C. Dunham. He was in the best of spirits. After luncheon he went to the office of the Hartford Courant, of which he was editor, and from there to the house of Robert Smith, a negro, in whose family Mr. Warner took much interest, frequently giving them books and assisting them. He complained of illness and lay down, asking to be awakened in ten minutes. When the ten minutes was up he was dead. The medical examiner decided that heart disease was the cause of death. Mr. Warner was seventy-one years old. He leaves a wife and one brother, George H. Warner, engaged in literary work, who is married to a sister of William Gillette, the actor.

FOUGHT BY BUCKET BRIGADE.

Fire Threatened the Business Part of a Town.

Laurel, Neb., Oct. 22.—A fire which threatened the entire business portion of this town occurred last night. Fought only by a bucket brigade, $30,000 damage was sustained before it was extinguished. Earl Scott suffered a fractured rib and several people were slightly burned and three or four overcome by heat, but no one seriously. The fire is believed to have been caused by an incendiary and a suspect has been arrested.

Killed by a Ruffian.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Thomas Griffin, a clerk employed by N. K. Fairbanks & Co., was shot and instantly killed while attempting to protect Miss Fay Gilbert from the attack of a strange man in front of No. 2220 State street. When the stranger saw that Griffin was about to interfere with his designs on Miss Gilbert he drew his revolver. Unmindful of the threatening muzzle of the weapon the clerk grappled with the assailant. In a moment he fell to the sidewalk with a bullet through his heart. The murderer escaped.

Massacred by Mussulmans.

Berlin, Oct. 22.—A special from Constantinople to the Petite Bleu says new and frightful massacres of Armenians have just occurred in the district of Diarbekir. The Musselmans, it is asserted, pillaged, outraged and killed during five days without the intervention of Turkish troops. Eight villages, it is added, were entirely destroyed and burned.

Indians in Council.

Dennison, Tex., Oct. 22.—The Creek full-blood council has been joined by the Choctaws, Chickasaws, Cherokees and Seminoles. They are armed with Winchesters. All declare they will stand by the treaty of 1866 and will not take allotment of lands. Col. Sheenefele, agent of the five civilized tribes, is confident that he can handle the situation.

Fell to His Death.

Quincy, Ill., Oct. 22. — Joseph E. Tallis, a newspaper man of Tennessee, who wrote under the name of Ray Raymond, was killed by falling from a third story window of the Occidental hotel. The presumption is he fell asleep on the window sill, as the body was found in an alley arrayed in night clothes and with the skull crushed.

PLANNED DOUBLE MURDER.

Man Arrested in Chicago for Attempted Murder.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—S. I. Morris was arrested for an alleged attempt upon the life of John W. Gates, ex-president of the American Steel and Wire company. When searched at the police station two large revolvers were found concealed in his pockets. It is asserted that Morris also had designs upon the life of W. J. Brimson, general manager of the Kansas City & Southern railroad, whom Morris, it is alleged, had enticed to this city by means of a telegram purporting to have been signed by Gates, but which he himself had sent. Manager Brimson arrived at the Grand Pacific hotel in accordance with the appointment made in the telegram. Failing to find Mr. Gates he called upon him in his office in the Rookery building. After a hasty consultation the two men decided that Morris originated the scheme, both having received threatening letters from him. Morris was captured near the offices of the Illinois Steel company in the Rookery building. He was formerly in the employ of Gates and maintains that the latter owes him $50,000.

GIVING THEIR MITES.

Inmates of Poorhouse Contribute to the Relief of Galveston Sufferers.

Chicago, Oct. 21. — The inmates of the Dunning poorhouse and insane hospital have raised $804 as their contribution to the Texas relief fund. Thirty of the inhabitants of the poor house formed a relief society and gave up smoking and other luxuries to swell the fund. Commissioner Reynolds, secretary of the Galveston relief committee, has telegraphed Chairman McVitchie, of the general relief committee at Galveston, that a draft for $30,000 had been mailed to him. Gov. Sayers was also notified at the same time that a draft for $1,162 had been mailed him for use in relieving the sufferers outside of Galveston.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 21.—Four, and probably five, persons met death by drowning in Golovin bay, off the town of Chenik on Sept. 26, as the result of the capsizing of a life boat of the San Francisco steamer Albion. Eighteen people entered the life boat to ride from Chenik to the Albion, which was a mile away. The boat was rigged with a sail. The wind was strong. Two hundred yards from the Albion the life boat capsized. The Albion's crew went to the rescue and saved all but four or five.

The candidates for delegates to congress are: Samuel Parker, Rep.; Prince David, Dem.; Robert W. Wilcox, a native Hawaiian.

KEEP CHINA INTACT

GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY FORM AN ALLIANCE.

Most Important Diplomatic Event in Almost a Generation—Neither Power Will Seek Teritorial Advantage in the Chinese Empire—Means a Readjustment of the Balance of Power in the World—Thunderbolt for France and Russia—Other Powers Invited to Join.

London, Oct. 22. — Germany and England have formed an alliance to maintain territorial integrity of China and to keep ports open. The terms of this agreement, which was arrived at on Oct. 16 between Lord Salisbury and Count von Hatzfeldt, German ambassador to England, are officially given out as follows:

"The German government and her British majesty's government, being desirous to maintain their interests in China and their rights under existing treaties, have agreed to observe the following principles regarding a mutual policy in China:

"First—It is a matter of joint permanent international interest that the ports on the rivers and littoral China should remain free and open to trade, and to every other legitimate form of economic activity for the people of all countries, without distinction; and the two governments agree on their part to uphold the same for all Chinese territory, as far as they can exercise influence.

"Second — Both governments agree that they will not on their part make use of the present complication to obtain for themselves any territorial advantage in Chinese dominion, and will direct their policy toward maintaining undiminished the territorial condition of the Chinese empire.

"Third—In case of another power making use of the complications in China in order to obtain under any form whatever such territorial advantages, the two contracting parties reserve to themselves the right to come to a preliminary understanding regarding the eventual step to be taken for the protection of their own interests in China.

"Fourth—The two governments will communicate this agreement to the other governments interested, especially Austria-Hungary, France, Italy, Japan, Russia and the United States, and invite them to accept the principles recorded in it."

This announcement signifies the most important diplomatic event in almost a generation. It implies far more than its application to the Far Eastern problem. It means nothing less than the readjustment of the balance of power in Europe and the world. It is a virtual thunderbolt to France and Russia. It has been believed in Paris and St. Petersburg that Germany secretly desired to use a special grievance, based on the murder of Baron von Ketteler, to exact territorial indemnity from China, and both Russia and France were not unwilling to see this ambition gratified, chiefly because it would offend Great Britain. This note not only dispels this illusion, but proclaims an Anglo-German alliance in Far Eastern affairs strictly on the lines of British policy.

Meets Approval in Berlin.

Berlin, Oct. 22.—An inspired article in the North German Gazette regards the Anglo-German agreement as a "reassuring sign for the peace of the world," and says that Great Britain, just as Germany does, expressly denounces all idea of making use of the complications in China for her special advantages, and in economic aims adheres to the principle of equal rights for all.

YOUTSEY GUILTY.

Third Man Implicated in Shooting Gov. Goebel.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 22.—"We, the jury, find this defendant guilty and fix his punishment at life imprisonment."

This verdict was returned by the twelve men who were selected to try Henry E. Youtsey, formerly Gov. Taylor's stenographer, on the charge of being a principal in the shooting of William Goebel. The vote was unanimous that Youtsey was guilty. Then the degree of punishment was taken up. On this question the jury was somewhat divided, but finally agreed on the life sentence.

Henry Youtsey is the third man to be found guilty of connection with the shooting of Goebel. Caleb Powers, tried for complicity in the case, was sentenced to life imprisonment, while James Howard, tried on the charge of being a principal in the shooting, was sentenced to death. The defense filed a motion for an arrest of judgment, and Judge Cantrill set it for hearing on the second day of the February term. Therefore Youtsey will not be sentenced until next year. Youtsey was ordered removed to the Frankfort jail.

PRINCE HOHENLOHE RESIGNS.

Count Von Buelow Is Appointed His Successor.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—The Kolnische Zeitung asserts that Prince Hohenlohe has tendered his resignation as imperial chancellor and that it has been accepted. According to the same authority Emperor William has designated as the retiring chancellor's successor Count von Buelow, minister of foreign affairs. Although rumors have been current for several days that Prince Hohenlohe intended to retire, little credence was given to any of them, since such reports had returned periodically for several years past. The fact is that neither the foreign office nor any other government department in Berlin knew until last evening of Prince Hohenlohe's retirement or Emperor William's approval of it. The reasons which induced the prince to insist upon retiring were, in the main, his rapidly growing infirmities and his distinct disapproval of the emperor's personal policy in China.

here that the peace negotiations at Pekin will be indefinitely prolonged by the uprisings in the interior and southern provinces of China, necessitating expeditions and perhaps continued clash of arms. Yesterday's cabinet meeting was unproductive of any more definite clews regarding the diplomatic situation toward China. The final cabinet meeting before election, at which the president will preside, will be held Friday, but no new correspondence or restatement of policy is looked for by the state department. The French note is just now the center of negotiations, and advices indicate that nearly all the European powers are in accord with the provisions of the decree. This government is not prepared to accept it without reservations. But these are not expected to interfere in a general agreement to the peace negotiations.

FROM KWANG SU.

President McKinley Receives a Message of Thanks.

Minister Wu called upon the president yesterday morning. Upon leaving the White House the minister said he had conveyed to the president a message from the emperor of China, thanking President McKinley for the consideration shown by the United States during the Chinese trouble. The minister also brought a dispatch from Shanghai from the southern viceroys stating that the imperial party had reached Tung-Kuan, only a few miles from Sinan Fu, the new capital, on the 14th inst. Referring to the report from Pekin that the edict for the punishment of certain officials had been forged, Minister Wu said such a story was preposterous and should receive no credence whatever. If any one should issue a false decree of that character it would be very easy, he said, to ascertain his identity, and he certainly would be beheaded.

OUR FLAG A TRUST ASSET

Capital Seeks Its Shelter to Enslave Mankind.

MARK HANNA THE KING HUCKSTER

Political Dominance of the Trusts is the Most Sinister Plague That Can Afflict the Race—Conditions Demand the Overthrow of Present Administration.

Trade, commerce and huckstering large and small are good things in their way and place, and never in the history of mankind have they been so much in the ascendant as they are now. They have aided to make the Democracy conscious of itself; they have acted as a stimulus to science, industry and invention; they have enabled the former serf and slave to earn his own independent living, and they have brought down the aristocrat who was wont to be so proud and despotic and have either made him, too, a shopkeeper or have rendered him dependent upon those who are. From this point of view we may all doff our caps to King Huckster, for, indeed, we are nearly all of us partakers of his blood royal.

But when we get beyond generalizations and figures of speech and come down to the hard fact that the huckster is actually king, with all the powers and many of the outward appurtenances of kingship, and that he is on the throne and directing our destinies political as well as pecuniary at this supreme juncture when the world seems on the point of plunging into that battle of Armageddon, which the prophets have been foretelling so long, why, then, we may have reasonable doubts whether he is altogether the best man in the best place.

The mind of Bacon, conceiving the advancement of learning, laid the foundations of the future Democracy, and started the huckster on his upward career. His progress was rapid, and today he has arrived. Nowhere else so much as in this country and in Great Britain has he so firmly grasped the reins of power. But the original condition of the huckster was low, mean and contemptible, and, unfortunately, in ascending his throne, he has laid aside none of his evil qualities, and, on the other hand he has adpoted none of his noble traits of the aristocracy which he supplants. Of all passions, greed for money is the vilest, the cruelest, the more inhuman. It has no compunctions, recognizes no sanctities, hesitates at no crimes or degradations, spares no one and nothing. Self, in the basest form, is its sole aid and the god of its idolatry. Sprung from the Democracy, it hates and desires to crush its parent; it tramples upon the rights of man and upon the integrity and independence of manhood, as the aristocracy in its worst days had never done.

In America, of late years, the dominion of capital has been greater than elsewhere, and its dominion has been attended with the most sinister effects. This country aimed to be the freest and most enlightened in the world, and because we aimed so high our fall has been lower than that of others. The present Republican party is trusts and capital incarnate, and in it accordingly we see the evil of its apogee. In the mass of our people noble instincts and aspirations still remain, but the captains of trade turn them to their own advantage when they cannot altogether crush them. Thus the popular desire to free the Spanish colonies from oppression has resulted in the imposition upon them of thieves and tyrants appointed by our own capitalistic government, which squeezes and defrauds them as the Spaniards had not the skill to do. The young men whom we sent to fight our battles were starved and poisoned by the agents of the trusts, in order to secure more dollars from corrupt jobs and contracts. The choking off of trade competition has made us a nation of employees, afraid to call our souls our own lest we lose our jobs.

And now the new king is seeking dominion afar. He has tasted the profits of empire and wants to enlarge his holdings and thereby increase his stealings. In China he put forward the missionary to open the way for him, and under cover of introducing Christ's gospel he has cheated and robbed the heathen, until the latter rises in blind rage against all Christendom. And what has rendered the heathen formidable in war? King Huckster himself, who has been diligently selling him these many years the best arms and munitions of war that money could buy, indifferent to the fact that he was thereby sacrificing the lives of his own brothers and sisters, and perhaps setting back for generations to come the clock of human progress. So long as he realized his treasonable profit he cared nothing for aught else. When the members of the legation and the foreign and native Christians stood in deadly peril at Peking he would not send forward a force to rescue them, for fear that some one among the competing nations might gain an advantage over him, and so obtain a larger share of the spoil to come. Honor, honesty, patriotism are to him mere words to juggle with. The flag of his country is but a financial asset. These things would seem incredible did not contemporary history prove them true.

The reign of King Huckster—the dominion in politics and government of the trusts and capitalists—is the most sinister plague that has as yet afflicted humanity. Only the overthrow of the present government at the polls in November can avail to check it.—Julian Hawthorne in Chicago American.

MOTHERS ARE WARNED.

Trusts Deny Business Opportunities to Their Boys.

INDIVIDUAL ENTERPRISE STIFLED

Harper's Bazar Declares That Women Have a Vital Interest in the Trust Question—Young Men Defrauded of Their Birthright—Principle of Liberty Violated.

In a recent issue Harper's Bazar, for many years devoted exclusively to women, gives editorial expression to thoughts on trusts for wives and mothers. This expression is surprising, first, because the Bazar ventures at all into the domain of politics, and, secondly, because of the stand it takes against an evil of Republican origin and growth—a stand so contrary to the policy of all other Harper publications.

The Bazar truthfully says that the mothers of the country have a personal interest in the trust question because, "following upon the formation of trusts in the several industries, there has been a rise in prices of all these articles of household consumption." Figures are presented to prove this statement, and it is justly argued that the low price of sugar and oil does not offset the advance in other articles of daily use. Continuing, The Bazar says: "It is human nature for men to make money, and when a few persons control 90 or 95 per cent of a business supplying the needs of a whole country they will put up the prices just as high as they dare, and they dare do just about what they please, because they are so strong they can crush out any individual resistance."

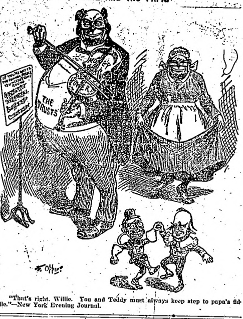
But The Bazar recognizes the serious truth that the increased cost is not the most dangerous feature of the trusts. "Far more serious is the fact," points out The Bazar, "that the field of opportunity for the growing boy is almost entirely removed, the chance for individual effort reduced to a minimum. Take the Standard Oil company, for instance. The profits of this concern for the current year are estimated at $92,000,000. Would not Mr. Rockefeller smile if your son set out to establish a business that would snatch the power to fix prices out of Mr. Rockefeller's hands? Precisely there is where trusts have mothers by the heartstrings. It is not so bad about prices—we may struggle and meet this—but trusts impose upon our sons a future serfdom.

"The individual enterprise that is possible under a reign of trusts is a resort to the economic conditions of the barbarian. The alternative is serfdom—a clerkship, if you will, a managerial position, at a handsome salary in the trust concern perhaps, but he is the minion of the sugar king, the coal baron—the trust that employs him. He is a creature of the trust, with no hope, no future in which he may be master of himself.

"This is woman's cause for hating trusts, for fearing monopolistic tendencies of every sort. Her boy, yours, and yours are defrauded of their American birthright—liberty and independence—while trusts operate to create a royal descent of money kings to rule the common people. Woman's enmity against trusts is not on economic grounds. It stands on the American principle of liberty and equal rights, and the strength of it is the force of a mother's pride in her son."

This is a view of the trust question to which The World-Herald has more than once called attention, but it cannot be emphasized too often, and especially are we gratified to see The Bazar impressing it upon the mothers of the land, for, after all man may do or attempt to do, "the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." If the present generation does not prevail against the great trust curse, the rising generation will do so, if mothers so decree.—Omaha World-Herald.

WILLIE AND HIS PAPA.



"That's right, Willie. You and Teddy must always keep step to papa's fiddle."—New York Evening Journal.

FARMERS THE VICTIMS.

They Suffer Most From the Extortions of Combines and Trusts.

There is no one who suffers more from the growing domination of the trusts than the American farmer. Within the past four years the various controlling trusts have raised the price of nearly every necessity of farmwork and the farmers' home, while there has been no corresponding increase in the price of the products which the farmer has to sell.

If the farmer buys a pound of sugar, a gallon of oil, a pound of nails or any farm implement, he must pay the trust price, but when he sells his butter, potatoes, grain and other produce he cannot fix the price in arbitrary trust style, but he must accept that of a competitive market based on supply and demand.

The trust system works only one way—against the American farmer. Within the past four years trusts have been multiplied and grown all powerful. The Hanna-McKinley administration has been friendly, and monopoly has taken advantage of its opportunity.

The formation of a trust means that competition in the industry embraced is destroyed and the consumer placed at the mercy of the resulting monopoly. Within four years the various trusts, in order to further swell their bulging treasuries and increase their dividends on their stock, have increased the prices on the following articles which are necessities to the American farmer: Barbed and other wire for fencing, nails, barrows, plows and plow points, horse rakes, mowing machines, reapers, furniture, roofing and building materials, men's clothing, dress goods, underwear, coal, glass, cutlery, tinware, wall paper, kerosene oil, leather and leather goods, salt, sugar, brooms, crockery and many other articles.

How long will the American farmer submit to the exactions of the trusts, which are a daily tax upon his pocketbook?

William J. Bryan is pledged to the destruction of the greedy trusts. He has the courage and backbone to keep his pledge. A vote for Mr. Bryan will be a vote to destroy the trusts.

There is going to be a struggle during the next 20 years with these trusts, just as there has been with the railroads. The directors have pocketed the surplus similarly, and thousands of millions in securities have been added to the general volume. Six hundred million dollars have been made in the last three years, but not $300,000,000 of fresh money has been placed in circulation. How are you going to do it? How can business be conducted with all those floating securities? All nations today demand gold. Five thousand millions of silver for business purposes have been withdrawn. If that money could be restored, just look how you could coal up! Look at the consequent depression in India and in the United States of silver.—James R. Keene.

With a few men thus in control they can fix wages, and they can make it so that money is either easy or tight, as they choose. If any other man tries to compete with them, he is simply crushed. The result is that today in the United States there are no more independent men except the farmers.—James R. Keene.

County Commissioners' Proceedings.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., Oct. 2nd, 1900.

3 o'clock p. m.

Special meeting of the board of county commissioners, Red Lake county, Minn.

Pursuant to call dated Sept. 20th, 1900 board met in extra session this day.

Meeting called to order by the chairman.

All members present.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County
Gentlemen:

We, your committee on construction of county jail, beg leave to report as follows:

On Sept. 17th, 1900, the committee received and opened the following bids for $3,000.00 worth of jail bonds, which was found on the estimates submitted by Architect Strassburger to be the necessary amount of funds needed for the construction of said jail, viz:

First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., for a 5 per cent. semi-annual interest, 20 year bond. $3040.

Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., for a 5 per cent. semi-annual interest, 20 year bond $3087.

Trowbridge, Niver & Co, of Minneapolis, Minn., for a 5 per cent. semi-annual interest 20 year bond including blanks, $3165.

Stoddard, Nye & Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., for a 4½ per cent. semi-annual interest 20 year bond, including blanks $3025.

After duly considering all the bids, the committee contracted to sell the bonds to Stoddard, Nye & Co.

We then let the contract for supplying the stone, delivered at the jail site, to Otto Zaiser for the sum of $4.50 per cord.

We have also let the contract for the construction of the foundation for the jail, including the concrete under the cells, to Dan Linnihan for the sum of $198.00.

The following bids were received for the construction of the jail above the foundation, viz:

James Brady $1447.
J. J. Rue $1435.
Frank Mageau $1594.

After considering all the bids and taking into due consideration the responsibility of the bidders we recommend that the contract be awarded to James Brady.

Respectfully submitted,
K. M. Hansen
Wm. C. L. Demann
J. B. Hebert,
Committee.

Commissioner Hansen offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

Resolved, that the foregoing report of committee on jail be approved.

Brady for construction of jail, according to plans and specifications upon his filing with the county auditor the proper bond in the sum of $1500, which resolution was seconded by Commissioner Hebert and on motion carried unanimously the same was adopted.

On motion duly carried, a recess was taken to 7 o'clock p. m.

TEXAS SOLOMON.

How the Ownership of a Hen Was Judicially Determined.

Texas has always been noted for the remarkable decisions of some of its minor judiciaries, which, while often showing ignorance of the letter of the law, contained a good deal of rude equity and appreciation of what was right between man and man, says the Mexican Herald. Some of Justice I. P. Franklin's decisions at Brownsville, would have done credit to the wise cadi in "The Arabian Nights." One case I recollect in particular. Two women came to him one morning claiming the ownership of a hen, valued perhaps at 25 cents. Each had a crowd of witnesses, who swore point blank up and down, one lot that the hen was the property of one of the women and the other gang that it was the property of the other. Here was a quandary. Franklin thought awhile and then ordered that the hen be left with the court, and said he would render his decision later. Just about sunset that afternoon "Jip," accompanied by the constable, who carried the hen in a soap box, a couple of policemen and two or three of the court hangers-on, appeared in front of the dwellings of the rival claimants who lived just across the street from each other. The police and the hangers-on were ordered to clear the street and to keep all passers-by and curious urchins back, while the rival occupants of the residences were ordered to stay within doors. Then the constable put the box containing the hen at the point in the roadway midway between the two houses, and as the setting sun was tinging the clouds in the west with its last rays he removed the cover of the box and retired on tiptoe. Biddy jumped up on the side of the box, shook her feathers, hopped into the street, picked in the dust for a moment and then, calmly marched into the yard of one of the claimants, proceeded to fly up into a tree to go to roost. Calling the woman of that house to the door, Franklin told her that he had decided that the hen was hers, and, in turning to the other, who had come out, said: "And if you give me any more trouble about that hen I will assess you $2.50 for costs." All the neighbors were well satisfied as to the justice of the decision, and Franklin's reputation as a judge was much enhanced thereby among the native population. He had very shrewdly thought that if no one else knew to whom the hen belonged probably Biddy herself would be the most certain witness in the case.

As Others See Us.

We have a way of generalizing in the most superior fashion in regard to more ancient races. This, however, is a boot for the other foot—a quotation from a certain Chinese essayist, who thus describes the American people: They live months without eating a mouthful of rice. They eat bullocks and sheep in enormous quantities. They have to bathe frequently. The men dress all alike, and to judge from their appearance, they are all coolies; neither are they ever to be seen carrying a fan or an umbrella, for they manifest their ignorant contempt of these insignia of gentlemen by leaving them entirely to women. None of them have finger-nails more than an eighth of an inch long. They eat meat with knives and prongs. They never enjoy themselves by sitting quietly on their ancestors' graves, but jump around and kick balls as if paid to do it. They have no dignity, for they may be found walking with women.—Youth's Companion.

Not Uncommon.

THE THIRTIETH CENTURY

It is now the forty-second day of the spring season, in the year 3000 A. D. My name—C-234-M. G.—tells the reader my residence, family and the phrenological classification.

I am a clerk in the Bureau of carpet tacks, department of house furnishing of D continent (formerly North America). Although my labor is credited to Guthrie (the governmental center of D continent), I prefer to reside on C continent (formerly Africa) by reason of its superior climatic advantages, as well as the greater selectness of its single tax areas.

Having recently finished my proportion of individual labor for the common good during the current year and received government tickets for the same, I determined to devote my vacation to making a slow journey throughout the world.

My first destination I had determined should be the newest continent of all—continent H (formerly Antarcticapa)—and the slow passage thither on an airship freighter was a novel sensation indeed. Under the most favorable conditions a speed of over 100 miles an hour was impossible, and the voyage, although enlivened by numerous well told legends of ships that sailed on the water, seemed interminable. When we flew over the gigantic system of mirrors that by deflecting the rays of the sun have made a semi-tropical country out of this erstwhile ice bound coast, the air became rather oppressive, but in a very few minutes we had reached the elevated landings. Rapidly spreading my wing planes, I jumped outward from the deck and soon reached the ground in safety.

The moving sidewalk carried me rapidly to a place of amusement, where a man informed me that a company would give a faithful reproduction of the wonderful American allegory entitled "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He then stated that in the days of Mark Antony (or Mark Twain, as he was sometimes erroneously called) and McKinley Bill immense audiences gathered to witness this pagan spectacle and that thousands of negroes were torn to pieces by savage bloodhounds for the delectation of the assembled populace. In accordance with the rudely drawn pictures to be found in the extant copies of a curious publication called a comic or conic weekly the part of Little Eva was played by a woman of advanced years, and the cakes of ice were represented by specially constructed and labeled soap boxes.

On leaving the public theater I kept on the moving sidewalk for a few miles and then stepped off and walked for fully 20 minutes on the roadway. This unaccustomed exertion was rather fatiguing, and as night was drawing near I made haste to find a place of shelter.

On my right hand I noticed what looked like a human habitation, although it was not constructed of cut glass with inside shades, as is our universal custom. The house, if such it could be called, was seemingly built of painted wood, with square holes in which a few small pieces of glass were set. Attracted by the possibility of an adventure, which of course is very rare nowadays, I walked at once to the door and entered. Almost at the threshold I met the owner and greeting him cheerfully announced my intention of making a brief stay with him. Much to my surprise he seemed to demur, but soon recovering his self possession ushered me into a room and introduced me to his daughter. I was rather embarrassed to perceive that she was dressed in the picture custume of antiquity, but presumed that it was merely done in a sportive mood. Yet truly she looked a vision of loveliness. There was something almost picturesque in the braided hair, full skirt and jaunty, huge sleeved waist, with czarina collar, and although for practical purposes our present universal dress is much better adapted for both sexes I cannot but wish that, in the bosoms of their families at least, women might deign to wear the beautiful costume that historians ascribe to the Parkhurstian period.

On engaging the young person in conversation I was astounded to find that her name was Gladys. Who could believe that this name of the past was worn by a native of the thirtieth century?

But my wonder was further increased when, still wearing the ancient garb, she spread a white cloth upon a table and placed thereon several vessels of the chinaware similar to that now in our school museums. Instead of receiving their portions of the condensed food in gluten capsules from the public food factories this family had evidently returned to the old time custom of preparing their food themselves in primitive style.

Much as I marveled at this, I took my place at the table with the twain and joined in their unique repast. Strange as it may sound, the roast slices of meat and vegetables boiled in water tasted extremely well, but the trouble and time required to prepare and eat them must become exceedingly monotonous.

After the strange meal was over Gladys' father left us, and I engaged the maiden in conversation.

She was entirely dissimilar to all the women of my acquaintance. Aside from the wearing of such strange drapery her voice was low and even instead of having the usual womanly harshness, and her gliding walk and composed manner bore no resemblance to the manners of the brusque, excitable women who lead the van of advanced thought in our world councils.

When I ventured to ask his reasons for returning to barbarism in eating and dressing, he turned on me fiercely and said: "Young man, I'm tired of being a machine. I'm a radical. I believe the good old days were the best, and I'm working as a missionary to endeavor to get the people to vote them back again."

Astounded, stupefied by this madman's ravings, I retired to my bed, but not to sleep. This benighted family did not use the water mattresses, which, yielding to the slightest movement, allow every muscle to relax and sleep, so I tossed the livelong night on a crude feather arrangement and vowed that I would return home at once and give notice of this dangerous conspiracy to the world.

And so I have done.—Exchange.

FOR THE FARMER.

To insure pure milk the atmosphere in which the cows are milked must be pure. Putting down hay or cleaning out the stable just before milking is a bad practice. The milk in passing from the teat to the pail through an atmosphere laden with stable odors and dust may become sufficiently contaminated to materially affect the flavor of the butter. For similar reasons we hear milking in the barnyard condemned, especially in dry, dusty weather. I noticed in England the farmers had makini sheds in or near the pasture fields and that the men had long linen ulsters which they slipped on when going to milk. I thought this a good idea, as it tended to cleanliness in milking and also to a saving of the clothes. Before starting to milk, the flanks and udder of the cow should be wiped with a damp cloth to remove all loose hairs and dirt which otherwise might fall into the milk pail. It is found a good practice to cut off the cow's switch and clip the hair from the hind quarters when putting her in for the winter. Endeavor as far as possible to have the cows milked by the same person, at the same hour, in the same place and in the same order. Milk with dry hands, vigorously and exhaustively. Nothing will prolong the milking period more than by getting the last drop, and, remember, the first pint has but 1 per cent butter fat, while the last pint has 10 per cent. Bacteriologists tell us the small amount of milk which has collected in the teat abounds with injurious forms of bacteria, while the remaining portion of the milk is practically germ free, and they recommend not allowing the first stream to go into the milk pail.

Stamp Your Honey Packages.

It is a good plan for all apiarists to put their name and address on all packages of nice honey, either in combs or extracted. A rubber stamp, with plain letters three-eighths of an inch high, is best to mark sections, but bottles or cans of extracted honey must have a printed label pasted on. The marking of first class honey or good goods of any kind is a help to everybody who handles it. If the jobber has any fault to find he can easily trace it to the producer. If the grocer likes it he will be apt to remember the name and buy some more of it, while the consumer will do the same.

If you are producing a superior article in quantity, marking it and selecting a reliable jobber and sticking by him, it will be a profitable undertaking, but it won't pay to change jobbers every year or to put your name on anything but a good grade of honey. The ground is taken by jobbers that they do not want the honey stamped, because putting the producer's name on it leads the retailer to deal direct with the producer to the demoralization of the market. They should more truthfully say, to the loss of their profit. Manufacturers of clothing, of wagons, fancy butter and many other lines of goods put their name on the goods, and the jobber is helped thereby. Darlington butter brings 75 cents per pound because it is Darlington butter. If Tom Jones takes extra pains in handling the carload of fine honey which he produces every year there is no harm in letting the people know that it is Tom Jones' honey and that it is worth 1 cent per pound more because it is as represented.—American Agriculturist.

Rye as a Farm Crop.

Rye is one of the best paying crops, as far as dollars and cents go, raised in Columbia county, N. Y. We have paper mills that use a good deal of straw, and several large flouring mills that use the rye, taking it from year to year. The same acreage of rye brings us more money than hay, and the quantity is on the increase, if anything. The average yield of rye per acre for our county is estimated to be 16 bushels, but a great many reach 20 and more. I had a field of less than eight acres that had 187 bushels of grain and 12 tons of straw. The machines for thrashing rye, cleaning and measuring at the same time, are used entirely. They leave the straw in nice shape, all bound and ready for the market. To have a bountiful crop, it needs to be protected through the winter and spring.—George W. Higgins in Rural New Yorker.

Hog Prospects.

Those who are in position to judge do not anticipate large supplies and bad breaks in the hog market before the opening of the winter packing season, Nov. 1. Reports from all over the country indicate that numbers of hogs to be finished this summer and fall are not large. In spite of a big corn crop ahead it is very likely that the winter season will open with hog prices well above those of last year, and, moreover, that prices during the coming winter will average well. A bumper corn crop usually means very cheap hogs, but this condition promises to be modified next winter by an excellent demand for provisions. Definite calculations are impossible at such long range, but there is every indication of a healthy hog market next winter at prices comparing favorably with values of corn.—National Stockman and Farmer.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN WHO INFLUENCES GERMANY'S EMPEROR.

What Two Women Saw—Social Functions For Women—The Ruling Passion—Needs No Chaperon—Does Coeducation Educate?

In his telegram to President McKinley the German kaiser said that the Countess Waldersee, wife of the field marshal who has gone to China to command the allied forces, is an American woman.

As a little girl Mary Esther Lea played among the flour barrels and currant boxes of her father's grocery store on Front street, New York. But that was many years ago. Now the little girl is a white haired and regal lady, with the title of princess. More than that, she it is who is the power behind the German throne, who is known as the "female Bismarck" and who, it is believed, brought about the kaiser's marriage. Her title is Princess von Noer, and she is a powerful influence in the great palace at Berlin.

Her history is most interesting and unusual. Her father left Connecticut in 1810 and began a small grocery business in New York. Though he was financially successful, when he died in 1853 he left but a very small fortune to his family. Mrs. Lea, unable to afford the expensive living in New York, bundled up her little family and went to Stuttgart. Here the eldest daughter married Baron von Waechter. He soon became embassador from Wurtemberg to Paris, and in due course of time Mrs. Lea and her other daughters found themselves in the social set of the great French capital. Other important marriages came about.

Mary Esther, the youngest girl, found a fast and affectionate friend in Princess Louise of Sleswick-Holstein. Through her she formed the acquaintance of the father of the princess, an old widower, who immediately fell desperately in love with the beautiful and bright little American girl. To compensate for marrying the daughter of a grocer the prince gave up his title and accepted the simpler designation of Count von Noer, which was given to him by the Austrian emperor. The groom was 64 years old, the bride 24. Six months later the venerable husband died, and his rich and youthful widow settled down in Vienna. There she won the esteem of the Austrian emperor, and he created her princess of Noer in her own right.

A few years after being made a princess the one time daughter of a grocer met Count von Waldersee. A marriage between them took place in [illegible]. These two brilliant and tactful people went to Berlin, and in a few months the countess was a social power.

Her particular ambition was to marry her grandniece by her first marriage, Princess Augusta Victoria of Sleswick-Holstein, to Prince William of Prussia, the present emperor of Germany. The mother of the prince raised great objections, but the Princess von Noer was persistent and tactful and planning, and the wedding was celebrated. Prince William and his bride were both devoted to the one who helped along the rough way of their courtship, and their gratitude has been unceasing. When Princess Augusta Victoria became empress, she was more than ever under the sway of her American aunt.—Boston Herald.

Mumps.

Onct I took the mumps, and, my,
Didn't I look funny! I
Made the people laugh and roar
When they peeked in through the door.
But ma didn't laugh, and she
Was jes' awful nice to me,
Even though I had the "grumps,"
For that always goes with mumps.

And I couldn't swaller good;
So she fed me all she could
With a spoon on soupy stuff.
Jiminy! I got enough
Of that sort of thing, you bet!
Soup's too watery and wet.
And pa had to do the chores,
'Cause I dassent go outdoors.

I was down in bed three days,
Sick in lots and lots of ways,
And they promised me some figs
And new boots and guinea pigs
And some more that I forget,
But I haven't got 'em yet!
And I foun'—jes' think of it—
Two whole loads of wood to split!

Cattle, sheep, wool, wheat, in fact all farm products but flax—which two firms control the price of—goes down in price. This is prosperity. All trust goods go as high as the trusts demand, regardless of the supply and demand. This is also prosperity—for the trusts. If you want to help them along, vote for McKinley.

The punishment of a child should be proportioned to the offense and grow out of it as a natural consequence. A child who is lazy in the morning and persistently late for breakfast should be deprived, not of a proper amount of food, but of something he particularly likes and might have had if he had been in time, as sugar on the oatmeal, or syrup on the griddle cakes. If he has been promised that he should go for a drive, or a walk, or some expedition, and is not ready at the time for starting he should be left behind. The bitter disappointment will teach him, as nothing else can do as effectually, the value of punctuality. If he is sent on an errand and does not return promptly he should not be allowed to taste the nice things made with the sugar or eggs he was so long in bringing. If his errand were of some other nature he should be made to stay alone in his own room for as long a time as he has kept his mother or any one else, waiting.—November Ladie's Home Journal.

President or Emperor, Which?

On the 6th day of November next every freeman in the United States will stand confronted with the above question. Are you going to meet it like men, like patriots, or will you stand cringingly before it and cast your ballot for empire and for just because "there's money in it?" First satisfy yourself that there's danger in the present situation by comparing the acts of the present administration with the public acts of the great presidents, Washington, Lincoln and the great leaders of the old republican party, Blaine and Garfield and then determine what must be done to be saved.

If you believe that your liberties and your sacred rights are threatened, have you not manhood enough left to cast aside your old party affiliations and associations and vote as you think, vote for the prepetuation of a government? Or will you accept the bribe Mark Hanna proffers and see the republic you profess to love strangled before your eyes, the standard of freedom and equality thrown down, and the hated emblem of autocracy raised in its place? Vote as you think, not as the enemies of free government dictate. The question is a momentous one and every man holding the right to vote is put upon his honor as never before.—Cass Lake Times.

Bread and Beer.

The whole strength of a loaf of bread is concentrated in a bottle of "Golden Grain Belt" beer, brewed of pure barley malt and hops by the Minneapolis Brewing Company and sold in Crookston by Alex. Thompson.

Do not forget that the entire county ticket is well worth your support at the polls. There is not a man on the list that is not well equiped to perform the duties of his office, if elected, in such a manner as to produce the best possible results. Look it over carefully and you will be forced to this conclusion. Full ticket is printed on second page.

Alexander Van Prag, was in the city to-day, says the St. Cloud Times "Van" said "Lind" will be re-elected by 25,000. Daly has a sure thing for congress in the Seventh district, and Bryan will be the next president. As to Minnesota sentiment, Van travels the entire state and has good opportunity to judge. He says that where four years ago the traveling men were all working for McKinley, they are silent now, or for Bryan. They know the trusts, and knowing them, fear them.

Echoes of the big Bryan meeting held in Madison Square gardens, in New York City, will reach the remotest section of the country, and the enthusiasm there aroused will spread until it takes on the qualities of a democratic tidal wave, which may be great enough to sweep the trust ridden administration out of power, or may just fall short of that much to be desired accomplishment. No man can say in advance what the result of it will be, but let it be what it will, it is admitted, even by McKinleyites, that no such out pouring of the masses as that which honored Mr. Bryan has ever before turned out in than city to hear my candidate; and old campaigners, who were there, declare that they were astonished at the intensity and the amount of enthusiasm aroused by Mr. Bryan and the other speakers. It was a revelation to New Yorkers and it opened the eyes of many who have heretofore refused to believe that Bryan and Stevenson and a chance to carry the state of New York. One enthusiastic Washington democrat who attended the big meeting said: "That meeting was worth a million democratic votes. It would have been an absolute impossibility in that town during the campaign of 1893."

Vote Consistently.

Willmar Tribune: It should be borne in mind by all who indorse the administration of Governor Lind that the railroad and warehouse commission is the most important factor in carrying out the reforms he stands for. Hitherto this has been appointed by the governor, and therefore the last year Lind had a commission that has been in full sympathy with his ideas. But the last legislature, in order to defeat the proposed reforms, made the commission elective. They figured on getting a republican commission because the republican ticket, with the exception of the candidate for governor, has always had a good majority in Minnesota. The second step was the nomination of republican candidates for commissioners that were in thorough sympathy with the big-elevator companies and the railroads. If they are elected they will restore the old Clausen system of giving the farmers a low grade for their wheat and letting owners of terminal elevators have the correct grade and the profit of the difference in grade. The splendid work of the present commission in bringing the railroads to terms will be undone. The elevator companies and the railroads will strain themselves to the utmost to elect the republican candidate for commissioners

It therefore behooves the farmers and all interested in fair transportation rates to work for the election of Messrs. Ringdal, Knox and Owen. They are men in whom the people of Minnesota can repose perfect confidence. With such men as railroad commissioners and with Lind as governor the rights for which the Farmers' Alliance for so many years will be secured. If you vote for Lind don't vote to tie his hands by voting for railroad commissioners hostile to him and to your interests. Vote for Ringdal, Knox and Owen.

"We are prosperous says" the Republican literature. "McKinley is responsible for it" says their speakers. "We're just wallowing in good times" say the buttonhole politician. "Money to burn say the flaming posters and still there are mighty few of us who are not wondering where the money is to come from to pay taxes and interest and some don't even hope to do that, but will be pleased if they can get enough to live on for another year. Hang such prosperity.—Pink Paper, Bathgate N. D.

Brief But Beautiful.

A preacher the other day delivered a very brief but beautiful and sensible funeral sermon. Here it is:—"A word to all: Post mortem praises and love are in the air. People kiss their dead who never stop to kiss their living they hover over open caskets in hysteric sobs but fail to throw their arms about loved ones who are fighting the stern battles of life. A word of cheer to the struggling soul in life is worth more than the roses of Christendom piled high on the casket covers. The dead can't smell the flowers but the living can; scatter them broadcast in their pathway, therefore, and pluck out the thorns before it is too late.—Ex.

ALTGELT ON CONGRESS.

"There is a vast difference between a republican congressman at home and the same man when he is down in Washington and finds out what Mark Hanna wants him to do. If you desire legislation which will benefit you send men to Washington over whom, Mark Hanna cannot wield the party lash. Send men who vote there as they talk here. The republican congressmen, including your own representative, voted every time, according to the congressional records, on the side of the trusts. If you send a republican back to Washington he will vote as the caucus tells him, and that will do the bidding of Hanna."

LAUGHLIN SPEAKS

PROFESSOR POLITICAL ECONOMY AGAINST M'KINLEY.

Famous University Man Tells His Classes He Will Not Vote for Republicans This Year—He Opposed 16 to 1 in 1896.

Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, who was one of William McKinley's most energetic supporters four years ago, and who took a prominent part in debates with "Coin" Harvey, advocating the single gold standard, has announced to his classes at the University of Chicago that he cannot cast his ballot for the McKinley administration. Prof. Laughlin gives as his reason for the defection President McKinley's attitude on the question of imperialism.

"The course of the present administration is opposed to the very origin and genius of our institutions," he insists, "and I cannot vote for McKinley."

Prof. Laughlin is head of the department of political science at the University of Chicago. He believes that American commerce can never be increased by the methods of imperialism alone.

"Trade does not follow the flag," he insists, "but on the contrary, the flag follows trade. When American ability to compete in foreign markets is proved there trade will go and later the protecting flag will follow.

"There is no need of words how we came by the Philippines. The war on those islands was due to some one's blunder. They tell us that we must stay on the islands to obtain markets for our manufacturers; that the Philippines will provide a basis of trade with the Orient. They tell us that we ought to conduct the war to this end even at a cost of countless lives and millions of dollars.

"The argument that this course is an effectual means to trade expansion is fallacious. Go back to the years between 1883 and 1890 and you will find that the total annual value of the exports and imports in the Philippine islands was $34,000,000. Supposing that this trade was all under American control and that it paid a fair rate of profit, say 10 per cent, it would be insufficient even to pay the interest on our war loan.

"Increasing trade will not depend on our owning the Philippines. After we get them we must open the doors of trade to other nations on about the same conditions as we ourselves enjoy. Then to sell goods to the islanders we must make the prices as low as those of other nations. Our ability to compete with these other nations will depend upon the industrial conditions at home.

"The fact that the value of American exports has reached a sum never equaled before refutes the claim that need foreign ports to sell goods. America shall sell to the Fil- h or little depends upon inders can produce to offer our ability to supply the ey desire cheaper than any r nation. If American manufacturers wish to sell goods on the eastern markets the conditions at home must be looked after.

"The ability to sell depends upon America's natural resources, on the efficiency of labor and the organization of industries. Also on the low cost of transportation, the knowledge of foreign markets and the adaptability to the customs and the prejudices of buyers.

"America has taken the lead in iron and steel trade because of the abundance of ores, the improved machinery for loading and the capacity of transports. European contracts for bridge building and railroad construction come to Americans because advantages similar to those enumerated enable them to do the work cheaper and better and faster than the British firms. And so I say that trade with the Philippines depends more on the smoking chimneys of the south than on the rapid-firing guns of the army.

"It is the laboring man and the taxpayer who defray the enormous cost of exploiting a new country for the benefit of a favored few who obtain industrial concessions there. The only commercial gains by conquest go to the few at the expense of the workingman and the taxpayer. The course of the present administration in exploiting the Philippines is opposed to the very origin and genius of our institutions.

"Imperialism is the government of a colony which has no equal share in controlling the policy of the parent state. This is exactly the system which the American republic once repudiated.

"It is the very elementary principle on which the constitution is based, and that principle is being betrayed. If there is any historic sense in the American people they will reverse the policy of imperialism, as the hope lies not so much in presidents as in the houses of congress.

"President McKinley declared at Atlanta two years ago that 'the flag has been planted in two hemispheres, where it remains the symbol of liberty and law, of peace and progress. Who will withdraw from the people over whom it floats its protecting folds? Who will pull it down?' In the Philippines we are now mowing down the natives with rapid-fire guns—'nigger-hunting,' it is grewsomely expressed. The flag does not protect those over whom it floats. It is there to Filipinos the emblem of tyranny and butchery.

"The common sense of the people knows that the flag cannot be immediately withdrawn, but the moral sense of the people demands that so long as it remains its folds shall provide for white men and brown men alike a free and independent government and assurance from outside aggression. As a nation of freemen all equal under the constitution we are stultifying ourselves morally and politically. We are showing to the world that our principles of government are as nothing in comparison with grasping land, because it is said by our legislators to be fertile and rich.

"The baseness of this philosophy should bring its own punishment and dishonor. The base greed for gain which has led strong interests to obtain the promise of special privileges in return for political support is apparent in the whole business. 'The appeal to the cupidity of the dishonest element in the country has been openly proclaimed by some of our legislators, notably by Senator Beveridge, who advocates the conquest of the Philippines because they abound in gold and hemp."

M'KINLEY'S HEALTH.

Mr. McKinley, we must regret to say, is a man in feeble health. Much care was used by the trusts and Hanna in selecting the vice-presidency because of the fear that Mr. McKinley might fail to live out his term.

The idea was to carry forward the idea of changing the form of government now existing here—a form that now makes trusts and their profits depend on an election, and is, therefore, insecure.

Roosevelt was selected to run for vice-president.

If anything should happen to Mr. McKinley, the trusts would be quite content to see Roosevelt in the White House.

How would the average thinking citizen like that?

We do not ask the opinion of the citizen whose personal physical timidity leads him to worship a magazine-made hero. We ask the thoughtful men—men brave enough to do their own fighting if cause should arise, men who do not hand over their thinking or governing to a magazine blusterer:

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE ROOSEVELT IN THE WHITE HOUSE?

Roosevelt stands for a huge permanent army, and for using it against those who should fail to agree with him.

He has said that this way of treating those with whom he disagreed politically would be to "stand a few of them up against a wall and shoot them."

He is a man who would use the country and its citizens for his own stupid ambition and big-toothed glory. He could conceive no better use for young men than to make the tough ones rough riders and the tender ones rough taxpayers—the rough riders to build up his fighting fame and the rough taxpayers to foot the bills.

Some peaceable frogs—not much more intelligent probably than the average Roosevelt enthusiast—wanted a stork to rule them. The stork accepted and had fun. The frogs did not have fun.

How many voters want Mr. Stork Roosevelt to come along and dispose of their destinies for his greater glory?

How many want to be rough riders or rough taxpayers without their own consent?

If you vote for Roosevelt for vice-president you are not necessarily voting to give an ornamental job to an ornamental blowhart. You may be voting to make of a dangerous, ambitious braggart a president of the United States.—San Francisco Examiner.

SOAP AND STARCH TRUSTS.

The Indianapolis Sentinel in commenting upon the co-operation of the soap and starch trusts in Indiana, says:

The soap trust commands a capital of $25,000,000, and the starch trust about half that amount—the two trusts having a capital of about $35,000,000. These two trusts, to a certain extent, supply the same class of consumers—though the soap trust does vastly the largest business. In the homes of the people they operate together, and by advancing prices reap rich harvests.

Soap is said to be pre-eminently an article of civilization because cleanliness is the fundamental basis of all physical refinement, and it has been proposed to estimate the progress of civilization by the consumption of soap, the formula being to divide the total quantity of soap consumed in a given time by the total population consuming it, the quotient expressing the civilization of the community. And this formula is offered by a modern scientist of distinction and gives to soap an importance and dignity of special significance. Hence, it may be affirmed that the manufacturers of soap may be classed among the world's greatest philanthropists and benefactors.

To make soap cheap it appears is essential to civilization and refinement; to make it dear is to obstruct the march of progress, civilization and refinement and promote ignorance, filthiness and barbarism, and that is just what the soap trust is engaged in doing.

INDIANA'S CONSUMPTION OF SOAP.

Indiana is distinguished for her civilization and refinement, and measured by schools, churches and the consumption of soap, she is in the van of progress. The estimate is, taking hotels, laundries, factories and homes, that the annual consumption of soap in Indiana will reach 100,000,000 pounds or an average of forty pounds per capita of the entire population of the state. Before the soap trust began plundering the people of Indiana this 100,000,000 pounds of soap would have cost, at three cents a pound, $3,000,000, but the trust advanced the price to 4¼ cents a pound, making the cost $4,250,000 a year, an increase of $1,250,000, or 50 cents per capita for every man, woman and child in the state. And while robbing Indiana of $1,250,000 annually the trust pockets from the whole country by its looting and free-voting policy not less than $40,000,000.

It is estimated that the laundries and the homes of Indiana consume annually 20,800,000 pounds of starch. Prior to the advance forced upon consumers, starch was purchased at two cents per pound, the cost of the Indiana consumption amounting to $416,680. The trust advanced prices to 3 1-3 cents a pound, making the cost to the people $728,890, the advance amounting to a clean steal of $312,810 a year. Assuming that Indiana has a population of 80,000,000 the starch trust would secure by its piracies $9,981,120, an amount equal to its capital stock.

The two trusts are filching money from every home in Indiana and from every hotel and boarding house, and from every laundry, and they are able, by their operations, to rob the people of Indiana annually to the extent of $1,562,810, and make the whole country pay them a spoliation tribute of $49,998,120, equal to their entire capital stock of $35,000,000, with an overplus of $14,981,120.

This tribute is taken by ceaseless petty larcenies, but in the aggregate swelling to a grand larceny of astounding proportions.

WAS JAMES G. BLAINE A DEMAGOGUE?

Where is the McKinleyite who will say that James G. Blaine was a small American? Where is the McKinleyite who will say that he was in favor of a policy of scuttle and cowardice? Who will say that Blaine would have given away to Great Britain a large slice of United States territory in Alaska.

In his letter of acceptance, July 15, 1884, Mr. Blaine said:

"Happily removed by our geographical position from participation or interest in those questions of dynasty or boundary which so frequently disturb the peace of Europe, we are left to cultivate friendly relations with all, and are free from possible entanglements in the quarrels of any.

"While the great powers of Europe are steadily enlarging their colonial domination in Asia and Africa, it is the especial province of this country to improve and expand its trade with the nations of America. No field promises so much. No field has been cultivated so little. Our policy should be an American policy in its broadest and most comprehensive sense—a policy of peace, of friendship, of commercial enlargement."

Does that spell imperialism? "A policy of peace, of friendship, of commercial enlargement." Not one, but all three. Not commercial enlargement by force and at the price of blood, but commercial enlargement with peace and friendship. Not trade expansion at the point of the bayonet and the muzzle of the rifle, but with peace and friendship.

WAS CHARLES SUMNER A SCUTTLER?

Charles Sumner was a great republican statesman. But he was not an imperialist; he was not an advocate of expansion at the price of blood. In a speech on the acquisition of Alaska he said:

"But I cannot disguise my anxiety that every step in our predestined future shall be by natural process, without war, and, I may add, even without purchase. There is no territorial aggrandizement which is worth the price of blood."

Sumner was in favor of expansion by natural process only. He was not an advocate of expansion by purchase, and was absolutely opposed to expansion by force of arms. He was in favor of the natural expansion that places the constitution at once over the new territory, and that makes the new territory an integral part of the United States of America.

Was Charles Sumner a scuttler?

It is estimated by conservative Republican leaders that Col. Roosevelt's strenuous tour of the far west has cost McKinley the states of the two Dakotas, Wyoming and Utah, even had there been a chance for him in the four commonwealths. Besides this, the self-laudatory hero of San Juan has increased Bryan's majority in all other western states. McKinley's hopes have therefore found a tomb in Roosevelt's cavernous mouth.

Postmaster Sullivan of Cripple Creek, who made the so-called Victor mob to order, is now calmly awaiting his reward. Investigation shows that he instigated a feigned attack upon Governor Roosevelt for the purpose of exciting partisan sentiment. The Republican party appears to be in hard lines for argument this year.

It has developed that the New York ice trust is wholly controlled by Republican politicians. This explains why Governor Roosevelt has refrained from shooting the New York ice trust in the back.

The panic scare and starvation cry will not win this year. Workingmen have sounded the depths of the full dinner pail and tested the breadth of trust prosperity.

CENTER OF SILK TRADE.

Lyons Is a School for Teaching the Manufacture of Silk.

In a recent report of J. C. Covert, American consul at Lyons, France, it is stated that Lyons is a school for teaching the manufacture of silk, as well as a great center of the silk trade. Young men come here from all countries to learn to make silk, acquiring the language while learning an important branch of commerce. In the silk department of the commercial school there are generally from 250 to 300 pupils. The price of tuition is 800 francs ($154) per year for Frenchmen and 1,200 francs ($231) for foreigners. All kinds of silks, velvets, plain and figured goods are made by the learners under the superintendence of skilled workmen, with the most improved machinery. Some of this machinery bears the mark of a Philadelphia or Paterson manufacturer. A Singer sewing machine sews the pattern cards together. Thirty looms are run by hand and twenty-five by steam. The municipal school, on the Croix-Rousse hill, the traditional home of the weaver, admits only Lyonnese youth. It is sustained by the municipality. Any boy 15 years of age, with the residence qualifications, can here learn the theory and practice of silk weaving, designing and making patterns for 9 francs ($1.73), the total registration fee for the three departments. The day course of study is ten months. In the night school, provided for children who are employed during the day, a course of three years' study is required before graduating. Among the 300 or 400 pupils are the children of the rich and poor, some kept there at a sacrifice on the part of their parents. Each learner is required to keep a carefully written diary of his work, with abstracts of lectures, patterns of silk, designs of machinery, diagrams, etc. A presentation of this book to a silk dealer invariably secure him a situation. The directors, Mr. Guigardot, informed me that for several years he has not been able to respond to all the demands for young men made by the large silk houses of Lyons. Everything is taught here, from the breeding of the silkworm to the weaving of the finest stuffs for wearing, upholstering, mural decoration and artistic embroidery. The product of the school, which is sometimes defective, is sold at nominal figures.

SALT-WATER BLOOD.

"Blood-Washing" as Substitute for Blood-Transfusion.

Transfusion of blood is a procedure that must have been employed by physicians in very early times. Ovid tells of Medea bringing back youth to the aged by the injection into their veins of the blood of young men, and doubtless the same means was employed by physicians for less fantastic objects. The injection of the blood of one person into the veins of another was until recently done to save life after severe hemorrhage and in various forms of blood poisoning. Sometimes a direct communication was made between the veins of the donor and of the recipient by means of a tube; at other times the healthy subject was bled into a bowl, and the blood was beaten to remove the fibrin before it was passed into the blood vessels of the patient. The procedure is a dangerous one, however, although many lives have been saved by it, and it has now been almost entirely abandoned, a much safer plan being used. It is found that the blood when defibrinated is no longer a living fluid, and the corpuscles it contains serve no useful purpose when injected, but rather act as foreign matter which must be got rid of. Accordingly physicians now use distilled water, in which a definite proportion of common salt and other chlorides has been dissolved. This solution is warmed, and is injected slowly into a vein at the bend of the elbow, about a quart being used. Often it is not even necessary to pour the fluid into a vein, but simply to inject it through one or more hollow needles in the tissues beneath the skin of the abdomen or the thigh. This is done not only to supply an equivalent for fluid lost in hemorrhage or cholera but also in certain diseases in which blood-poisoning exists. In this latter case a large amount of fluid is injected slowly, and being taken up by the blood, is almost immediately excreted through the kidneys, carrying with it much of the poison which the blood was unable to rid itself of unaided. This operation has been felicitously called "blood washing," for this is what it really is, and to the process humanity owes the savings of many lives.—Youths' Companion.

Torrence on Reforming Boys.

At the National Prison Congress, George Torrence of the Pontiac reformatory declared that at least 85 per cent of all young men and boys who have committed crime, "if taken charge of in time and subjected to proper treatment, will become good citizens." He estimated that not more than 10 per cent of the criminal classes are so through heredity.

An Irishman went to a lawyer with a case, but the attorney wanted a retainer. The Irishman was poor, and finally the lawyer said he would take the case on a contingent fee.

It was settled; but the contingent fee part of the agreement bothered the client. He confided his ignorance to his friend, Paddy, and asked for an explanation.

LIBBY'S FOOD PRODUCTS LEAD

The Grand Prix d'Honneur and two gold medals have been awarded by the International Jury of Awards at the Paris Exposition to Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Chicago, for the purity, excellence and superiority of their canned foods. Here in America, the "Libby" Brand has always been recognized as typical of the highest standard of excellence attained in the preservation of meats and it is a noticeable fact that the products of Libby, McNeill & Libby have received the highest awards at every Exposition held in the United States during the past two decades. This firm issues a book "How to Make Good Things to Eat," which will be mailed free on request. Drop a postal to Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago, Ill., for it.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

Attracted by Laundry Work.

A great social change is going on in London in an imperceptible manner. While young women in humble circumstances are forsaking the laundries for typewriting and such "genteel" occupations, ladies of education are entering the ranks as laundresses. The work is hard, but the pay is good—much better, in many instances, than they earned as amanuenses, shorthand clerks or telegraphists, and those who have found moral courage enough to enter upon this occupation find it not only more remunerative, but, on the whole, healthier than the sedentary life in offices and small rooms they were formerly accustomed to. We have long been familiar with "lady helps," and it seems but a small step to the "lady cook," "lady housemaid," or "lady maid of all work," vice the old-fashioned servant, who, every year, shies more and more at domestic service.—Newcastle (Eng.) Beds Are Scarce in Russia.

Beds are quite an innovation in Russia, and many well-to-do houses are still unprovided with them. Such little innocents Dutch children look! But, in reality, they are the most mischievous little rascals in the world. They would wait in swarms outside my hotel in Holland, and follow me to my workshop, clamoring for coppers, which they generally managed to get. Some of them would get tipped twice over—they are so much alike in their general get-up that it is difficult to distinguish them. I once had a little model posing for me all day, and the next day she did not turn up, so my friend went around for the reason that he was surprised to hear from the indignant mother that I had only given her daughter about twopence. I discovered afterward that this was the case—but I had given five shillings to another little girl who had been standing in my light all day.—Magazine of Art.

REBELS ARE ACTIVE

SEVERAL ENGAGEMENTS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Insurgents Lose Heavily and the Americans Also Suffer Some Casualties—In One Engagement the Americans Were Forced to Retire in the Face of Overwhelming Numbers—Force of Filipinos Commanded by a Deserter From the American Army Has a Sharp Fight With American Troops.

Manila, Oct. 29. — While scouting near Looc a detachment of the Twentieth and Twenty-eighth regiments, under Capt. Beigler, were attacked by 400 insurgents armed with rifles, under the command of a white man whose nationality is not known to the Americans. The insurgents for the most part were intrenched. After a heroic fight Capt. Beigler drove off the enemy, killing more than 75. The fight lasted for two hours. Capt. Beigler and 3 privates were slightly injured and 2 of the Americans were killed.

An engagement took place Oct. 24 between detachments of the Third cavalry and the Thirty-third volunteer infantry numbering 60 and a force of insurgents including 400 riflemen and 1,000 bolomen. The fighting was desperate. Finally, under pressure of overwhelming numbers the Americans were compelled to retire on Narvican. Lieut. George L. Febiger and 4 privates were killed, 9 were wounded and 4 are missing. Twenty-nine horses are missing. A number of teamsters were captured by the insurgents but were subsequently released. The enemy's loss is estimated at 150.

A civilian launch towing a barge loaded with merchandise near Arayat was attacked by a force of 150 insurgents under David Fagin, a deserter from the Twenty-fourth infantry. The American troops on hearing the firing turned out in force before the boat could be captured and looted. Fagin, who against his former company, was in command. Of the twenty men who were captured four were returned. One whose body was recovered was horribly mutilated. Fagin sends a message to his former companions threatening them with horrible fate. One of Fagin's former command who was captured was Lieut. Frederick W. Alstetter, who is still a prisoner. Gen. Salles, though it discovered no traces of the enemy, encountered great hardships on the march. Several Chinese porters died and 40 men were sent to the hospital. Reports from Gen. Young's district shows a daily increase of insurgent activity. While a detail of the Thirty-third infantry was returning from Bangued it was fired upon by insurgents and a sergeant and two privates were killed.

The measure has taken on a new and international commercial interest and the course of the commission is heartily commended here.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Rebel Captain Found Guilty of Burying American Seaman Alive.

Manila, Oct. 29.—The rebel captain, Novicio, has been tried by a military commission at Baler, Northern Luzon, charged with burying alive a seaman named McDonald, of Lieut. Gillmore's Yorktown party. Novicio was found guilty and sentenced to death. The commission's sentence is now in the hands of Gen. MacArthur for approval. Testimony was produced at the trial showing Novicio also caused the death of Veuville, another member of Lieut. Gillmore's party, by delivering him into the hands of the native tribesmen known as Iloggotes, who, under the pretext of going fishing, lured Veuville into the woods and murdered him with two Spanish friends who were Veuville's fellow captives. The tribesmen bound Veuville, opened his veins and sucked his blood until he was dead. The evidence also showed that Novicio killed a Filipino named Rodriguez, who was suspected of being friendly to the Americans. Gen. Wheaton has approved the commission's sentence.

These gentlemen constituted a board of medical officers which investigated contagious diseases in Cuba. Dr. Lazear himself died of yellow fever last month. The paper was read at the recent meeting of the American Public Health association in Indianapolis.

TRACKS WASHED AWAY.

Portions of Wisconsin and Minnesota Are Flooded.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—In twenty-four hours preceding 8 o'clock yesterday morning seven and one-quarter inches of rain fell. As far as reported no other point had such a rainfall. The storm in its severest form did not extend over fifty miles east, south and west, but further north. The Milwaukee road suffered the worst track trouble. No trains arrived from the east for twenty-four hours preceding 6 o'clock last evening, when the regular train came through. All previous trains went via the Omaha from Camp Douglas to St. Paul. The worst trouble was between here and West Salem, on which section hundreds of men were at work yesterday. The Burlington road had some tracks undermined at Grand Crossing, but traffic has not been delayed. The Green Bay road has a washout on the marsh thirty feet wide and ten feet deep which will require at least three days to repair. On the Southern Minnesota division the track was buried by earth so deep in some places that teams with scrapers were required to clear it.

Special Marshal From San Francisco Has Alex in Charge.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 29.—The transport Lawton brings advices from Nome to the effect that the Roanoke arrived on the day the former vessel sailed, and that the special United States marshal who was sent from San Francisco by the circuit court to arrest Receiver Alex McKenzie of North Dakota had made the arrest and taken charge of the $250,000 of gold which McKenzie had in his possession, placing a soldier sentry in the bank to guard against its being removed. It was expected that McKenzie would be brought down on the Lawton, but the marshal did not get ready by the time she sailed. He will probably be brought down on the Roanoke.

Plough, formerly vice president and general manager of the St. Paul & Duluth railway, and one of the best known railroad men in the West, died at 11:40 o'clock Saturday night. Following the fatal relapse, which occurred three weeks ago after a period during which he showed marked signs of improvement, he sank steadily, almost without even momentarily improvement.

EASY ONE FOR MINNESOTA.

Flickertails Not In It With the Gophers.

Minneapolis, Oct. 29.—Minnesota, 34; North Dakota, 6. With a team which was not in some particulars the strongest the state university can put out, Minnesota defeated the University of North Dakota on Northrop field Saturday afternoon much more thoroughly than even the score indicates, and by exhibiting a form which improved steadily and rapidly throughout the game gave the followers of the maroon and gold every reason to believe that Wisconsin will be defeated by Minnesota next Saturday.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 29.—The wife of Iver Bagstad, the richest man and leading citizen of Gayville, while temporarily deranged through illness, escaped from her home at night and was found by searching parties in the morning along the railroad track where three heavy freight trains had passed over her. THEY MUST ALL DIE

PUNISHMENT FOR INSTIGATORS OF THE REBELLION.

Foreign Ministers Hold a Harmonious Meeting at Pekin and Discuss the Question of the Punishment of Chinese Officials Responsible for the Rebellion and Agree to Demand the Death of All of Them —A Move That May Lead to the Destruction of the Dynasty.

Pekin, Oct. 29.—The ministers of the various powers held a meeting at the house of the Spanish minister. The only question discussed was as to the punishment of the Chinese officials who were responsible for the Boxer outbreak. The meeting was very harmonious, and there was no serious disagreement as to the extent of the punishment that should be meted out. It is said that they will demand the death of the instigators of the rebellion. The intention is to hold further meetings before a conference is held with the Chinese peace commissioners. At this conference the ministers have agreed to unite on the policy to be formulated.

Much alarm is felt here over the reports of the intention of the Chinese to depose the viceroy of Nankin and Chang Chi Tung, the viceroy of Wuchang, who have been very friendly to foreigners during all the recent troubles. Mr. Conger went to Li Hung Chang and asked whether this was true. Earl Li replied that the report was not only not true, but that such action was furthest from the emperor's thoughts. The report was repeated to Mr. Conger and he formally protested to Li Hung Chang against the deposing of these officials. The belief here is that if these viceroys are deposed by the court such action will permanently block the peace negotiations and possibly lead to the destruction of the Manchu dynasty.

Li Hung Chang memorialized the throne on Oct. 23, demanding the punishment of the parties guilty of fomenting the recent uprizing and causing all of China's present troubles. Emperor Kwang Su answered as follows:

"In reply to your last memorial asking for the further punishment of certain officials, I can do nothing more until the board of punishment acts on the order to punish the officials who were degraded by a previous edict."

The emperor further orders Earl Li to memoralize the throne freely as to what he believes should be done, and promises that adequate justice shall be meted out.

MANCHURIA FOR RUSSIA.

Anglo-German Agreement Does Not Affect Russia's Interests.

Berlin, Oct. 29. — The Berliner Post publishes an inspired article devoted to showing that the Anglo-German agreement will in no way interfere with Russia's interests in Manchuria. "If England had not arrived at an agreement with Germany," says the Post, "she would have been compelled to do so with Russia. This would have been a serious blow to German trade. Germany, in her capacity as an honest broker, has served Russian interests."

THE TRICKY CHINESE.

Reports of the Suicides of Prominent Boxers Believed to Be False.

London, Oct. 29. — The Standard's Shanghai correspondent says there seems evidence to believe Kaingi, president of the board of war, and Yu Hsien, formerly governor of Shansi, who were reported to have committed suicide, are only officially defunct, and that the reports of their deaths are being circulated in order to induce the powers to abandon their demands for their heads. The correspondent predicts that a report that Prince Tuan has committed suicide will shortly be invented for the same reason."

AWFUL BUTCHERY.

Man Murdered in a Most Diabolical Manner.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—With a bullet in his brain, his throat cut from ear to ear, his face hacked almost beyond recognition, and one eye gouged out, Anton Lizl, a Bohemian florist, brother of the burgomaster of Prague, Bohemia, was found dead in a ditch near Forty-third court on the north branch of the Chicago river. Twelve hours later Joseph Dolirski, a Polish florist, was arrested for the crime. When arrested his clothes were covered with blood. Mary Lizl, wife of the murdered man, is also being detained by the police.

ROOSEVELT ON "DUTY ABROAD."

The Loud Talking Candidate Shrank From Performing "Plain Duty" Toward Cuba.

Governor Roosevelt's absurd denunciation of his political opponents, in which he charges that the Democrats stand for "license and disaster at home and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad," is not receiving the enthusiastic approval of the Republican press which he perhaps expected. His offensive and unwarranted abuse is for the most part passed over in silence by the organs of his own faith, but in some instances he has been severely rebuked for his gratuitous insult to at least one-half of the American people.

Does Roosevelt suppose his hearers have entirely forgotten the history of recent events when he accuses Democrats of cowardly shrinking from duty abroad? Does he refer to things just preceding the hostilities with Spain? He was at the seat of government at the time and must have known what was transpiring. He knew that for months the Democrats in congress persisted in efforts to induce the Republican administration to perform its plain duty in Cuba and that the vast power of the executive, re-enforced by that of the Republican speaker of the house, was required to restrain his own party in congress from uniting with the Democrats and compelling the performance of our "duty abroad." But the Republican policy of shrinking from duty prevailed until the original incentive to the war—the starving reconcentrados—had vanished from the island. Even after the destruction of the Maine the department of which Roosevelt was then second in command exerted all its influence to continue the shrinking policy and avoid hostilities. This is a subject in connection with which good taste should prompt Mr. Roosevelt to keep exceedingly quiet.

The paramount issue of today is what it was in 1800—the preservation of a democratic republic from the insidious encroachments of class rule.—Toledo Bee.

It Was a Blank.

Candidate Roosevelt fired the first shot of the campaign while attending the Rough Riders' convention. It was a blank cartridge.

We have had a period of four years of extraordinary excitement, which is now on the ebb. That kind of business cannot live when the excitement is over. You have that overcapitalization to look at in the eye.—James R. Keene.

No Middle Ground.

There is no middle ground for the Populist any more than for the Democrat or the Republican. It is the constitution and popular government against imperialism and usurpation. Let the Populist make his choice in the light of what reason and sanity Populism has left him, but let the Democrats waste no more time on him. There are other things of greater consequence that demand their attention.—Rochester Herald.

In America today we may say 200 men control the manufacturing and prominent businesses of the country.—James R. Keene.

BUSINESS DEPRESSED.

Overproduction Is Closing Down Factories.

LARGE INCREASE OF FAILURES.

Evanescent Prosperity Rapidly Petering Out—Labor Troubles Spreading—Uncle Mark Hanna Getting Tired of Roosevelt's Antics—Next House Will Be Democratic.

[Special Washington Letter.]

There is no escaping the fact that there is a marked business depression. The Republicans are shouting "Prosperity!" just to keep up their courage. Factories are being closed down for indefinite periods because of overproduction, and the number of idle men thus thrown on the market lessens the prospect of unloading big stocks manufactured under the stimulus of an evanescent prosperity. The idle workman is practically a nonconsumer. There are thousands of nonconsumers being manufactured every week.

Dun's review for the week is worded in a most conservative manner, but it shows a total of 1,530 failures in all branches of business for July, with total liabilities of over $17,000,000. It comments on this showing as follows:

"The total shows a heavy increase in comparison with the corresponding month last year, which is mainly due to phenomenally sound conditions existing at that time."

It tries to explain away the manufacturing failures by saying:

"Moreover, about 70 per cent of the large total in manufacturing failures last month occurred in three branches of business, and 11 concerns were responsible for the bulk of these liabilities."

The present concentration of industry into large concerns makes it quite probable that a numerically small number of failures may throw thousands of men out of employment and spread disaster and ruin among those dependent upon great industries.

Your uncle Mark Hanna is getting very cross over the antics of Roosevelt. The rough rider is getting cross too. It was bad enough to be shelved in New York by being forced on the ticket with McKinley, but Roosevelt is sadly coming to the conclusion that he is to be shelved by the Republican campaign committee also.

Hanna is aghast at the results of Roosevelt's St. Paul speech. It has done much to put Minnesota in the doubtful column, as well as to hurt the prospects of the party everywhere. Roosevelt is insisting upon promoting his rough rider circus. Hanna knows that in so far as he is permitted to do it he gives the Democrats the object lesson they want in order to show the drift toward militarism. Roosevelt must be kept out of New York state if there is to be any hope of saving it for McKinley. The hope is not great anyway.

Roosevelt will listen neither to reason nor argument. He is getting ready for business by having his throat treated, his teeth polished and his rough rider hats laid in by the dozen. McKinley lies low at Canton and watches this strenuous creature frittering away the prospects of success with an agony of spirit that can be appreciated even by a political opponent.

Reports from the Philippines show that the Filipinos are more active than ever. Perhaps they are encouraged by the prospect that troops may have to be withdrawn to meet the Chinese situation.

The administration is saying very little about the Philippines now. It is rather glad that the Chinese situation affords a distraction. The day of reckoning comes in November just the same. It is not so much what the Filipinos think and feel that influences the citizen of this country; it is the thought that imperialism means a government that is partly free and partly imperial. Such a government cannot stand.

The Republicans are practically conceding that the next house will be Democratic. They are quite right, but the Democrats are relaxing no effort. When the Republicans grow melancholy and talk conservatively about their prospects, then they are getting ready to do business in earnest.

The Republicans will leave no device untried to entice and mislead voters, but it is admitted on all sides that there is a painful lack of Republican enthusiasm. The business classes profess to be too much absorbed in their pursuits. The laboring masses listen languidly to the praises of prosperity which they have not.

The record of the last congress divides the machine workers. It seems impossible to heal the differences which arose over the Porto Rican bill.

Altogether the Democratic prospects are excellent. The enthusiasm for Bryan and Stevenson is taken into local matters and the various state organizations are arranging a splendid campaign.

L. A. WHITE.

Bridging the Chasm.

The list of Americans who voted for McKinley in 1896, but who will vote for Bryan in 1900, grows with each day's report. The "converts" were headed last week by Richard Olney, who was secretary of state under Cleveland, and was supposedly the farthest removed from the Kansas City platform of all the members of that cabinet.

One bridge crosses the chasm—Americanism. Mr. Olney is not at home in the Anglo-American combine, headed by McKinley and Hay; no real American can be. Before Nov. 6 they will all be on the right side—our side.

Encouragement to Rascality.

With Neely carefully tied up by Republican judges so that he escapes extradition to Cuba, and with Rathbone out on bail furnished by an accommodating Spanish gentleman who admires him because he was so highly recommended by Mark Hanna and his other friends, and with the Republican majority of the senate committee absolutely refusing to begin an investigation into the Cuban scandals, there is every encouragement for those Republican henchmen who have gone into the "colonial" branch of the government service to hold high carnival.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Democratic principle is maintenance of the citizen's rights and the national honor at home and abroad. Roosevelt and his Republican associates, under cover of upholding the nation's interests abroad, would reduce the ordinary citizen to slavery at home.—New York News.

WELLINGTON'S WORDS.

The Maryland Senator Opposed to Imperialism and McKinley.

To set at rest the many published rumors that Senator Wellington would support Bryan, the senator was seen at his office and asked to state his correct position in the present campaign. He said with much warmth:

"I am unalterably and forever opposed to imperialism, which I shall fight with all my power. I am opposed to President McKinley because he has deceived me in national affairs, and I shall oppose his reelection. I am not prepared to state just what part I shall take in the campaign, but I will attend the liberty congress at Indianapolis."

He was then shown a dispatch appearing in a Washington paper which stated that it was rumored that he would take the stump for Bryan, and he was asked if it was correct. He said that it was to a certain extent true, but there were some things about Bryan that he did not like very well. Wellington says that he is still a Republican, however. The fact that he will support the man against whom he carried Maryland four years ago has created great enthusiasm among the Democrats, who admit that, had he not opposed the re-election of Lowndes last fall, the state would have gone Republican. He has a large German following throughout western Maryland.

> In this campaign on one side stand Hanna and the corruption fund contributed by the trusts; on the other side stand the principles which have vitalized this republic for more than 100 years and made us people the glory and envy of mankind. Under which flag will the true American range himself?

OUR REVENUES ARE ABUNDANT.

Says Mr. McKinley, but He Didn't Tell Who Pays the Taxes.

In one of his speeches made during a western stumping tour, President McKinley said, "Our revenues are abundant."

So they are.

But why did the president stop with that statement?

Why did he not explain to the people how it comes that the revenues are abundant? Why did he not explain that in order to secure abundant revenues to maintain a large army, to pay the cost of wars not yet declared by congress, to make good the losses sustained by reason of dishonest contractors, it is necessary to maintain an odious stamp tax? Why did he not tell who pays the bulk of the taxes that make our revenues abundant?

These revenues come out of the earnings of productive labor. They are burdens the people have to carry, and they get nothing in return.

Express receipts are taxed, and who pays the tax? The shipper, not the express companies.

Telegrams are taxed, and who pay the tax? The senders, not the telegraph companies.

Patent medicines—the poor man's doctor—are taxed, and who pays the tax? The buyer, not the manufacturer.

Imports are taxed, and who pays the tax? The consumer, not the importer.

Why is it necessary to lay this added burden of taxation on the shoulders of the people? Because of war.

What per cent of the revenue goes to pay the expenses incurred on account of war? Eighty per cent.

Mr. McKinley may not have had time to dwell on these facts, but he must not mistake the fact that the people have the time and are dwelling thereon. They have to foot the bills.—Jackson (Mich.) Patriot.

PHILIPPINE ATROCITIES.

Eighty-nine Peaceable Tagalos Killed Like Rats in a Trap.

When it is considered that McKinley is willing that his present policy in the Philippines may be continued indefinitely, is it not time for the people to call a halt? When it is considered that the cruelty of the American troops there is equal to that of the Boxers of China, is it not time to protest against this country gaining a reputation for bloodthirstiness not exceeded by the most barbarous of nations? When the president approves the slaughter of all the people in a village because one of their number was guilty of a crime, is it not time to take young American soldiers from under an influence that teaches them only rapine and murder? Some of the reports from the Philippines lead thinking people to believe that the war there is surely enough to be one of extermination. When all these things are considered is it not evident that imperialism is the great cause? The New York World says:

"Two American soldiers were buying supplies in a native store in Oroquieta, a village of Mindanao, the island second in size to Luzon. They were attacked by insurgents, and one of them was killed and decapitated. His companion escaped and returned with a company of United States infantry.

"They opened fire not upon the murderers, but upon the village. When they ceased firing, 89 villagers were dead, 30 in a single house. Then a gunboat came and shelled the village into ruins, burning its warehouse.

"'The war is over' in Oroquieta—Oroquieta that was a peaceful village and is a smoking desolation where the vulture feasts. And imperialism would have us believe that that vulture is the eagle!

"Imperialism is indeed 'the paramount issue.'"

> It has been nine years since the Standard Oil company was cited to appear before the supreme court of Ohio to defend its charter. The case has never been disposed of, and during these nine years the trust has openly defied the court, violated its orders and has even demanded and obtained the political head of the attorney general who dared to bring the action. Ohio is a Republican state—the state of Mark Hanna and William McKinley. Are the trusts amenable to the laws? Not when Republicans are on deck.—Wheeling Register.

A Crisis In Our History.

This is a critical period in the national history. Covetousness has brought in its train the imperialistic spirit, and the Republican party bases its hopes for continued support simply and solely upon its belief that a majority of the people are blinded by the glamour of the very dubious sort of glory which it brings. Verily the "paramount issue" of the campaign is whether we shall cling to the honest, safe traditions of the past or pursue the territorial acquisition will-o'-the-wisp into the sea of imperialistic militarism.—Boston Traveler.

DESERVE YOUR VOTE

People's Party Candidates Who Should be Elected to Office on November 6th.

KEEP THEM IN MIND.

And be Sure and Mark an X Opposite Every One of Their Names on the Official Ballot.

ADAM ZEH

Canditate for County Auditor on the Peoples Party Ticket.

Adam Zeh, auditor of Red Lake county and candidate for re-election, is one of the oldest settlers in this vicinity, having settled in the town of Lake Pleasant in May 1878, he is well known throughout the county and one of the most popular candidates before the people of Red Lake county. He has during his time as county auditor, demonstrated his abilities and has filled this important office with the utmost satisfaction to the taxpayers of the county. Mr. Zeh has been identified with the reform forces in politics ever since he was old enough to take an active interest in public affairs. He is an ardent supporter of W. J. Bryan and the peoples party state and county ticket. You will make no mistake in voting for Adam Zeh for county auditor on November 6th and thereby endorse the good work of a faithful officer.

FRANK JEFFERS

Candidate for County Superintendent of Schools on the Peoples Party Ticket.

The above is an excellent portrait of Frank Jeffers, who has held the office of county superintendent of schools with credit to himself and almost universal satisfaction to the patrons of the office for the past four years. He was the first incumbent of that office in the county, having been appointed by the commissioners at the time of organization. Two years ago he appeared before the people for an endorsement of that appointment and was elected by the largest majority of any candidate in the field, and is again the candidate of the peoples party and democrats to succeed himself. Supt Jeffers is one of those men who has the courage of his convictions and is ever ready to do battle for what he deems to be right. The affairs of his office during his administration have been conducted in that fearless manner so characteristic of the man, and he is most admired by his friends for the few enemies he has made. Since reaching his majority Mr. Jeffers has taken an active interest in all public matters, especially in politics where he has always been found supporting the cause of the common people. He is a Minnesotian by birth, having been born on a farm in Richland, Rice county, in 1870. Ten years later he came north with his parents, who settled near Crookston where he resided until 1883 when the family removed to this county where he has since made his home. He began teaching at the age of 16 and the whole of his life since that time has been spent in school work with the exception of two years, when employed in the railway office at Larimore, N. D.. His long experience in an educational line most ably fits him for the office he now holds. His early education was attained in the public schools of Faribault and although he has not had the advantages of the higher institutions of learning, he has advanced by his own efforts to be one of the front rank among the school men of the state. He is a thorough organizer and the marked improvement in the schools of the county since they have been under his charge, is the best recommendation of his ability for the position, and we can assure the voters of the county that no better or more grateful man than Frank Jeffers could be found for the position of superintendent of schools.

F. A. GRADY

Candidate for Attorney on the People's Party Ticket.

The subject of this sketch is a native Minnesotian, having been born and reared and educated in this state. He is purely a Minnesota production. His birth place was in Olmsted county, and he is now 30 years of age. After attending the common schools of the state, he was at a very early age admitted to the State University, and graduated from the law department in the class of '95. He at once established an office for his practice at Thief River Falls, where he was a successful practitioner for two years, and then moved to Red Lake Falls, where he has been for the past three years. He has been more than ordinarily successful as a practitioner, and even at this early point in his career, is placed by those best able to judge of his abilities in the front rank of attorneys in this judicial district. He was one of the first attorneys to take up the cause of the Farmers Alliance in this state, and he has been one of the strongest and most outspoken advocates of the cause of reform ever since. Mr. Grady's election as county attorney means the recognition of ability and integrity in the administration of Red Lake county's legal affairs, and he should be given a rousing vote on November 6th.

JOSEPH BELAIR

Candidate for Coroner on the Peoples Party Ticket.

Joseph Belair, nominee for coroner, was born in New York state, September 28, 1854. With his parents he removed to St. Paul, Minn., in 1862 and in 1876 he came to this county, establishing himself on a farm near Red Lake Falls where he has since resided. Mr. Belair has identified himself with the reform movement in politics since 1870 and was one of the prime supporters and workers in the alliance and peoples party. At the oaganization of this county in 1896 Mr. Belair was selected as coroner, which office he has creditably filled to this time, having been elected without opposition in 1898. Mr. Belair is a man of wide experience and has filled several important offices notably that of chief of police in the city of Red Lake Falls for over three years and is a man well and favorably known and his election will insure the efficiency of the office for which he has been nominated.

O. T. TANDBERG

Candidate for Treasurer on the People's Party Ticket.

O. T. Tandberg, the unanimous choice of the people's party convention for county treasurer, was born in Norway 44 years ago. He came to Minnesota in 1870, and settled in Houston county, where he worked upon a farm, and employed his spare time in the study of the common English branches, and so well did he apply himself that six years later, when he removed to Rochester, he was accepted as a student in the high school in that city. In '81 he began teaching school and continued in that profession the greater part of his time until 1898, when his friends knowing his ability and honesty forced upon him the nomination of county treasurer, to which office he was elected with a handsome majority. During his incumbency of the office, he has proven himself to be a most competent official. His records have been accurately kept, and the funds securely guarded. Recognizing these virtues, his friends have again placed him before the voters of the county as their unanimous choice for the office he now holds, and there is little doubt that he will succeed himself.

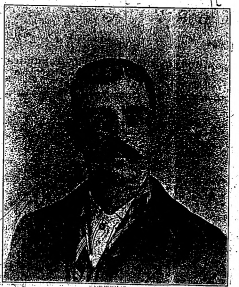
P. O. HAGGLUND

Candidate for Surveyor on the People's Party Ticket.

P. O. Hagglund, people's party nominee for county surveyor, is well known to all as an old settler and citizen. Mr. Hagglund is a native of Sweden, where he was born in 1849. He served there in various public capacities, having been game and timber warden one year and sheriff of his county for three years. Mr. Hagglund took part in the survey of a proposed line of a railway through Sweden and Norway into Russia, which road was later built. Immigrating to this country in 1881, he took up a homestead in the township of Black River that summer, and was one of the pioneers who settled in northwestern Minnesota. He held office of supervisor and other offices of trust in the township, all of which he filled with satisfaction and efficiency. In December, 1896, when Red Lake county was set off, Mr. Hagglund was appointed to the office of county surveyor by the board of county commissioners, and again in 1898 was nominated by the people's party, and elected to the same office. Mr. Hagglund is again before the voters of Red Lake county as the candidate of his party for re-election, and from his past record merits the support of his party and friends. While he has not always found it convenient to attend personally to the duties, he has used the best of judgment in his appointments of deputies.

SAMUEL GIBEAU

Candidate for Register of Deeds on the Peoples Party Ticket.



Samuel Gibeau, the peoples party candidate for register of deeds, was born near Chicago, Illinois, on April 3, 1868. He received a good education at St. Boniface College, St. Boniface, Manitoba. In 1890 he established a mercantile business in the village of Lambert, this county, and has claimed that village as his home ever since. As a public man Mr. Gibeau is well and favorably known. He was identified with the alliance and later the peoples party since he attained his majority, and was secretary of the Polk county alliance central committee for several years. He has served as town clerk of Lambert township in this county from 1888 to 1898. At the orgaization of Red Lake county, he served as chairman of its board of commissioners and continued to be a member of the board until his election as register of deeds in 1898, which office he now holds. Mr. Gibeau has preven himself to be a faithful, competent and obliging official, experienced in the duties of his office and especially careful in allowing no defective instrument to go upon record, his knowledge of the laws of conveyance and his experience enables him to put this important office on a high plane of excellence. His party has recognized his worth by nominating him for re-election, and the voters of Red Lake county, appreciating the importance of this office and the necessity of reliable records of title, will make no mistake by voting to retain Samuel Gibeau as register of deeds of Red Lake county.

J. L. JOHNSON

Candidate for Judge of Probate on the Peoples Party Ticket.

J. L. Johnson, the nominee of the peoples party for the office of judge of probate, was born in the year 1865, in Freeborn county, Minn. He was raised on a farm and attended the public schools until he arrived at the age of seveneeen, when he entered the high school at Fergus Falls, Minn., where he graduated with honor in 1885.

Having completed his education he entered educational work and taught school in Polk (now Red Lake) county for a period of two years. He then became engaged in the drug business in the village of St. Hilaire, Minn., and by his honesty and curtesy made a host of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Johnson has been honored at various times by his fellow townsmen with many of the best offices within their gift, which offices he filled to the satisfaction to the electors and with honor to himself. He is at present village clerk of the village of St. Hilaire, which office he has held for the past eleven years.

Mr. Johnson has ever since his advent into this community been an ardent supporter and a constant worker for the principals advocated by the peoples party; and it is the duty of every person who is loyal to the principals of the peoples party to see that he and his friends put an "X" after the name of Mr. Johnson on election day, by so doing you will elect a man to the office of judge of probate in Red Lake county who will not only be a credit to the peoples party, but to every taxpayer and freeholder in the county.

S. A. SWANSON

Candidate for Representative in the 61st Legislative District on the Peoples Party Ticket.

The above is a fair representation of S. A. Swanson, who was unanimously nominated for representative in the 61st legislative district comprising Red Lake and Beltrami counties.

Mr. Swanson is a native of the state of New Jersey, born June 26th, 1874 in the little village of Fort Lee.

In 1881 he came with his parents to Minnesota where his father filed on a homestead in Black River township. Here Mr. Swanson spent about 12 years on the farm attending school during the winter months, acquiring a good common school education.

From 1893 to 1896 inclusive he was engaged as teacher in the common schools in what was then Polk county, and upon the organization of Red Lake county was made the first register of deeds for the new county. Here he showed himself equal to his undertaking in the laborious task of transcribing the Red Lake county records which occupied a period of eighteen months of his time.

In 1899 he launched out in the abstract and real estate business in the city of Red Lake Falls with farming as a side issue as before.

While quite young and before he was entitled to a vote, Mr. Swanson took an active part in politics and from the organization of the Peoples Party in Polk county his efforts have been with that body. He has always been a close student of the economics of the country and although young in years is mature in judgment and his successful management of his large business interests in the faithful way in which he has conducted his public charges in the past is the best guarantee to the voters of this district that the conduct of their legislative affairs will be safe in his hands.

THOMAS BELAIR

Candidate for County Commissioner From the Second District on the Peoples Party Ticket.

Thomas Belair, nominee for county commissioner from the second district was born in New York state on the 22nd day of February 1850. He went to St. Paul in 1862 and wishing to secure a home in the Red River Valley he came to this county in 1876 and secured a fine farm 1½ miles west of Red Lake Falls on which he now resides, being one of the very first settlers here. While in St. Paul he served one year on the police force of the Sixth ward at its organization.

In this county he was elected for seven consecutive years and is now occupying the office of chairman of the board of supervisors of Red Lake Falls township, which office he has held for the past thirteen years.

The executive ability and judgment of Mr. Belair is proven by the excellent standing of his town and the estimation in which he is held by his fellow townsmen. Mr. Belair's mature judgment and experience in municipal affairs well qualifies him for the responsible position of county commissioner of this county, and the voters of his district can well trust the direction of county affairs in his hands.

E. A. MORAN

Candidate for Sheriff on the Peoples Party Ticket.

E. A. Moran was born in the year of 1858, at Delaware, Ohio. When a boy but seven years old he moved with his parents to the state of Minnesota, where he has since resided.

For more than eleven years past Mr. Moran has been a resident of the territory now Red Lake county, and it can be truthfully said of him that he is one of the hardest workers and most ardent supporters that the party has today. He has labored untiring for the past eight years for the success of the Peoples party, and this is the first time that he or his friends, in his behalf, have asked the party to support him.

Mr. Moran has held many positions of trust, he has purchased wheat in the city of Red Lake Falls for four years and in Thief River Falls for two years, has been elected assessor various times; and for the past three years was and now is a constable in the city of Red Lake Falls. There is no question but that Mr. Moran is preeminently fitted for the office which he seeks. As an officer of the law he needs no introduction to the voters of Red Lake county, and the tax payers may rest assured that they make no mistake in voting for Mr. Moran for sheriff, and if elected his office will be run on that plane that the rich and the poor; the north and the south; the east and the west shall be treated fairly and impartially. This is the man that every taxpayer should vote for sheriff.

M. J. DALY.

M. J. Daly, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress in the Seventh district, was born in St. Paul on March 31, 1861. In 1866 the family moved to Carver county. With one or two winters of study away from home, young Daly remained on the farm until he was 21 years of age. He

WILL SUPPORT LIND

He Writes a Letter Telling Why Lind Should be Re-Elected.

Frank O'Mera, one of the prominent business men in the southern part of the state, has come out in support of Governor Lind's re-election and in the following letter to the St. James Journal, gives his reasons for doing so:

My sentiments in regard to the reelection of Governor Lind are known wherever I am known. I am in favor of Lind first, last and all the time. In St. Paul there is a class of democratic professional politicians who are against Lind, and they will do their best to defeat him. They will try to beat him out for the very reason that he should be re elected—because he has been an able, fearless, incorruptible governor. They will try to beat him because he would not let them run him and his office; would not appoint their incompetent friends to important offices, nor let them use him in any way. To offset this political defection there are many business men who will cast their first vote for Lind this fall. These men will support him on his administrative record. They appreciate the fact that he, has made a start toward the equalization of taxes. Why, since Lind has been in office, the assessed valuation of the street railways of the Twin Cities has been raised from $700,000 to $4,000,000. The iron mining corporations of the range had their assessments raised 22 and a fraction per cent by the state board this year—adding a million and a half dollars to the assessment rolls of the state. Heretofore these big corporations have practically evaded taxation, but Gov. Lind's untiring energy and labors are bearing good fruit. When these big corporations are permitted to shirk their burden of taxation, the farmer and less fortunate business man must make up the deficiency.

Business men take no stock in republican charges of mismanagement of the prison twine plant. They are absurd on their face. No man on earth can keep the expenses of a manufacturing institution below those of the preceding year when the output is increased 25 per cent, and the cost of raw material is nearly doubled. This is all there is in those charges of mismanagement.

The matters of grain rates and grain inspection are of especial importance to farmers. I take it that the inspection of grain is more satisfactory now than under former administrations, judging by the raking over Clausen's department got from the last legislature. If that report was true, and I have not heard it questioned, the farmers were deliberately fleeced out of hundreds of thousands of dollars every year by the arbitrary raising of the standard of grades at the beginning of each season. Every time a bushel of wheat was knocked down a grade it took from 3 to 4 cents from the pocket of the farmer, or from the independent buyer, and transferred it to the coffers of the big line elevator companies. That is not being done under the present administration.

It is true that the inspection fee has been raised from 15 to 20 cents a car, and I was told today of an intelligent farmer in this county who was opposing Lind because of that raise. It doesn't seem possible that any man could be so foolish. If he knew anything about the matter at all he would know that such fees under former administrations have been shoved up and down and no one ever thought of questioning it. But if he had examined into the subject he would have found that 15 cents never in the history of the department covered the cost of inspection. My attention was called the other day to the records in this matter, and they impressed me so forcibly that I kept a copy. Here it is in the briefest possible space: Crop of 1892-3—fee 15 cents, loss $41,000; crop 1893-4—fee 20 cents, loss $37,000; crop 1894-5—fee 25 cents, loss $5,000; crop 1895-6—fee 25 cents, gain $67,000; crop 1896-7—fee 15 cents, till Jan. 1, then reduced to 15 cents, gain $15,000; crop 1897-8—fee 15 cents, loss $38,000; crop 1898-9—fee 15 cents, loss $25,000.

You see that on just two of the seven crops the department made money, and lost on the other five. It lost on a 15 cent fee and on a 20 cent fee. One season money was lost when the fee was 25 cents. In the light of these facts, this five cent howl is funny.

Personally I like Capt. VanSant, and I am more intimately acquainted with him than I am with Gov. Lind. I favor the latter solely on the record he has made in his office. He is an exceptionally efficient officer. He has exercised as careful a supervision over the construction of the new state capitol as he would if building it at his own personal cost. He has improved every department of state administration, and is entitled to another term.

NOT ON THE TICKET.

H. H. Aaker's Certificate of Nomination Not Filed in Clay County.

The name of H. H. Aaker of Moorhead, prohibition nominee for congressman from the Seventh district may not appear upon the official ballot for Clay county. The reason for this is that the mayor's certificate of nomination has not been filed with the county auditor, while the last day for filing was Tuesday Oct. 16. The general election law of the state of Minnesota fixes the third Tuesday preceding election as the last day upon which certificates of nomination can be filed. Application, however, will be made to Judge Baxter on Monday for an order directing the placing of Mayor Aaker's name upon the ballot, and it is the opinion of some of the local attorneys that the law covers cases of this kind and that the judge will order his name on the ballot.

The omission was due to a misunderstanding between Mayor Aaker and Chairman B. B. Haugan of the committee.

VAN SANT WEARIED THEM.

"Captain" Van Sant said in his speech on Saturday night that he acquired his title while he was commander of a stern wheel steamboat on the Mississippi river. He then proceeded to attack Governor Lind's administration through the statement that he bought raw material for the manufacture of binding twine at Stillwater when such material was high in the market, and the finished product was left on the state's hands. The natural inference to be drawn was, that this showed a lack of management that reflected upon Governor Lind's administration.

The effect upon Van Sant's hearers, was however, altogether different. The farmer portion of his audience could not but be thoroughly disgusted with such clap trap.

None know better than the farmers that the laws of supply and demand account for the conditions that Van Sant urged against Governor Lind. Everyone of those farmers would have been only too glad to have done his share toward reducing that surplus of manufactured twine had the crop conditions warranted.

VanSant would have made just as much of an argument had he accused Governor Lind of causing the drouth of the early summer and the excessive rain fall during and since harvest.

Other manufacturers of twine have a surplus on hand, and other manufacturers bought just as this state did even though it was high in the market.

When Captain Van Sant's stern wheel steamer left Winona for a down river trip to Dubuque with half a dozen passengers, and five tons of freight when the capacity of the boat was twenty times greater, did he tie up at LaCrosse, discharge his crew and walk home disgusted because the fuel he was burning cost more than the revenue from his traffic? Hardly. Yet that is a course similar to what he would have Governor Lind pursue. No wonder the farmers in his audience looked disgusted, and the republican campaign managers stopped swearing at the speaker that preceded VanSant for using up so much time, and began to sweat blood for fear there was enough time left to enable the "captain" to hang himself with binding twine.—Crookston Times.

IMPERIALISTIC TENDENCY.

History is like the Bible in this, that clever casuists can twist its precepts in almost any direction; but if there be one lesson which history clearly teaches, it is this: That free nations cannot govern subject provinces. If a free nation is unable or unwilling to admit its independencies to share its own constitution, the constitution itself will fall in pieces from mere incompetence for its duties.

A commonwealth ought to be immortal and forever to renew its youth. This is true in theory, but in fact, commonwealths have proved as unenduring as any other national object. The life of a nation, like the life of a man, may be prolonged in honor into the fullness of its time, or it may perish prematurely, for want of guidance, by violence or internal disorders. The story of national revolutions is to statesmanship what the pathology of disease is to the art of medicine. The doctors cannot expel disease after it has hold upon the constitution; they may check its progress and they can save life sometimes at the cost of an unsound limb.

The wisest politicians of our day wish to shun the rocks of the Philippines, of Cuba, of Porto Rico. The doctors of the state know that these constitute the unsound limb which will have to be lopped off before the constitution of these United States renews itself according to theory.

There are courses of action which have uniformly produced the same results; one of them is the slow death of every powerful nation which became the mistress of conquered races to whom she could not or would not extend her privileges. Rome died from the illness; England we have seen struggling mightily last winter against the noxious fever. The imperial tendencies of the present age in America which it is scarcely too much to say, are equal to the love of liberty, will, if persisted in, lead this unhappy country over the same course to the same end.—N. Y. Telegraph.

Over 800 persons have taken out naturalization papers in Beltrami county during the past two years. It is estimated that there will be at least 2,600 votes cast in that county this year.

P. M. RINGDAL.

P. M. Ringdal, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner with four years term of office, was born in Goodhue county, Minn., in 1861. He attended the public schools of his native county, and St. Olaf's academy at Northfield, Minn. In 1880 he entered the railroad service as telegraph operator, continued in the service in various capacities until 1890, when he engaged in the manufacture and sale of marble and granite at Crookston, Minn., in which business he is still engaged at the present time.

In politics Mr. Ringdal was an independent up to 1890, when he joined the Alliance movement, and has been active in the work of the Peoples Party ever since it organized. The strength of his party in his part of the state is due in a large measure to his energetic and efficient work.

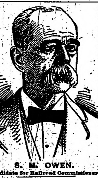
INDUSTRIAL SLAVERY FOR PORTO RICO
CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTY FOR PORTO RICO

"Resolutions by the 7th district republican county conventions."
"Resolved, that we are proud of the record made by Hon, Knute Nelson."
"Resolved, that we take especial pride in Hon. Frank M. Eddy.

In 1894 Mr. Ringdal was elected to the state senate. In 1896 he was the candidate of the Peoples and Democratic parties for congress from the Seventh district, but was defeated. In January, 1899, he was appointed member of the railroad and warehouse commission for a three years' term of office. The commission having been made elective by the last legislature, his term was incidentally reduced to two years, in order to make possible the election of the whole commission, two members for four years, and one member for two years. In recognition of his effective work in behalf of the people of the state while serving on the railroad commission, Mr. Ringdal was nominated by the Democratic and Peoples parties for one of the four-year terms to succeed himself. Mr. Ringdal is at the present time chairman of the railroad and warehouse commission, and it is largely due to his energy and efficiency that the commission has been able to accomplish such excellent results in the interests of the people of Minnesota.

S. M. OWEN.

S. M. Owen, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner for two years, is so well known to the people of Minnesota that an extended notice of his life, his sentiments, his sympathies and his work is not necessary here. Two campaigns as candidate for governor of the state, and one for congress in his district, all of which were close and exciting, failed to reveal anything in his life, his record or his character that in the remotest degree reflected upon him unfavorably, or evidenced his unfitness in any respect for the high positions for which he stood.



S. M. OWEN.
Candidate for Railroad Commissioner.

There are issues involved in this campaign peculiar to the people of Minnesota that demand earnest consideration. Taxation, care of public lands, administration of grain service and regulation of railroad rates are all questions demanding that careful administration which the past two years have demonstrated they will receive at the hands of John Lind, to whose able efforts should be added those of every nominee on the ticket of the allied parties. Voters of Minnesota secure this by voting for every man on the ticket whose biography is given briefly herewith.

went to school winters and during the summers took his full share of the farm work. It was during this formative period of his life that he imbibed those feelings of respect for the farmer's calling and of sympathy for the hard conditions which surround him and that desire to do all in his power to relieve those conditions, which have ever since been such a marked characteristic of Mr. Daly's career.

When he was 15 years old he went to Minneapolis to school, attending the Minneapolis high school and the well known Marvin academy.

He entered the law department of the state university of Iowa, at Iowa City, worked hard and graduated the following year. He was admitted to the bar in 1886 with high honors. Immediately afterwards he opened an office at Perham, Otter Tail county, and has lived there ever since.

In 1898 he was nominated by the reform forces for state senator, in the senatorial district of Otter Tail county, and elected in spite of a coalition against him, led by ex-Congressman H. E. Boen, who induced an independent candidate to run in the hope of defeating him. His record in the state senate was a good one. He took high rank from the outset, and was on the side of the people against corporations and rottenness from start to finish.

T. J. KNOX.

T. J. Knox, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner, was born at Covington, in the state of Pennsylvania. His parents removed to the state (then territory) of Minnesota when he was a small boy and settled on a farm in the county of Fillmore, where he grew to manhood. Later he studied law at Rochester, Minn., first in the office of C. T. Benedict, Esq., and later in the office of Stearns & Start, and was admitted to the bar at that city in October, 1871.

In 1873 Mr. Knox removed to and began the practice of law at Jackson, Minn., where he has ever since resided, attending closely to the work of his profession. While he has held a number of county offices, he has never taken an active part in politics and has never been an applicant for office.

At the expiration of the term of Judge Mills in January last as railroad and warehouse commissioner Mr. Knox was appointed by Governor Lind as his successor, which office he has since held.

Governor Lind's popularity outside of Minnesota is attested by a correspondent of the Fargo Forum, and the report of his meeting at Abercrombie, North Dakota, is well worth reproducing:

"Yesterday was a gala day in the history of this village when Gov. John Lind of Minnesota crossed the Red River of the North and delivered a non-partisan address to 800 people. The distinguished visitor was greeted with that true courtesy and generous hospitality for which our people are famous. His remarks were those of the genial traveler who stops at the wayside resting place, and is greeted with the sweet savor of roast ox, done in all the grandeur of charming barbecue. That Gov. Lind was delighted was seen by his expression; that his auditors were of the generous class who believe in that God given blessing—liberty of speech—was evidenced by their attention. As a speaker Gov. Lind is calculated to make an impression anywhere. He has a loftiness of poise and perfect enunciation of terms. Coming without political ambitions into our midst, he was greeted by men of all political creeds and affiliations. The loyal members of this largely republican precinct vied with each other in making the occasion one of the most pleasant kind. The introduction of Minnesota's governor was most happy and complete and Colonel Schuler, democratic candidate for district attorney, spoke in a most genial and pleasant manner.

"After the music by the band the company of every political faith partook of the savory meat of kind. "Old Glory" waved in the breeze, and every zephyr sang 'Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men.' The flag is still there!'

THE Fargo newspapers, and some of the leading republicans of North Dakota are inclined to question the statement made by the Grand Forks Plaindealer as to what Senator Nelson said to the Grand Forks republican committee concerning Hansbrough and Alexander McKenzie, and Senator Nelson's refusal to speak in Grand Forks. The Fargo papers and leading republicans of North Dakota might hear of something that would dispel all doubt in their minds by dropping a line to senator Nelson himself. To a leading republican of this city, and in the hearing of several people on the train which bore Senator Nelson away from East Grand Forks he volunteered the statement that he had told the committee what they afterward read in the Plaindealer, and one of his auditors on that occasion who is in the senator's confidence subsequently gave out the statement that the attitude of Minnesota's representative in the upper house at Washington would cost the party 5,000 votes in North Dakota.

LET republican politicians throw as much dust as they please and try as hard as they may to befog the minds of the people, it still remains true that the exploiters of labor, the great corporations and syndicates and trusts are, with scarcely any exception, supporting McKinley, and it is from them that Mark Hanna is securing the slush fund with which he intends to buy the election for the man whom he made president in 1896. To refuse to vote for Bryan is to give aid and comfort to the capitalistic class that stands behind McKinley.

IF people's stomachs are full, if they have prosperty, the Hanna republicans argue that the people should be contented, and be satisfied with any old kind of a government. That is what the masters in the south used to say to their slaves, and yet the slaves didn't like it then any better than a free American white man likes it now.

Verily the campaign orator has a hard assortment of luck to contend with. C. J. Berryhill of St. Paul, who is spellbinding for the republicans up in this section gets in to the Grand Forks prints as Mr. Berry Hill the slang wanger.

OFFICIAL FIGURES AS TO TWINE PLANT

Report of Board of Prison Managers Nails and Refutes Every Lie Sent Out By the Republican Henchmen.

Instead of the Alleged Deficit of $300,000, the Balance Sheet Shows Net Profit of $16,000 for the Year.

The Report of the Board of Prison Managers is a complete and splendid refutation of all the charges made against the state twine plant by the opposition. Glaring falsehoods fabricated out of whole cloth cannot deceive the people.

THE DETAILS OF THE REPORT.

Lack of space will not permit of giving the report in full, but we quote the following:

"The twine statement shows that Aug. 1, 1899, the prison had on hand in manufactured twine 1,820 pounds of pure manila, 91,605 pounds of mixed, 1,020 pounds of standard and 1,320 pounds of sisal, in all 95,765 pounds, worth $6,623.66. There was manufactured during the year a total of 6,119,465 pounds, and the sales were 6,027,555 pounds, leaving on hand at the inventory Aug. 1 last 40 pounds of pure manila, 64,320 pounds of standard and 123,315 pounds of sisal, a total of 187,675 pounds, worth, at 6 cents a pound (a low valuation), $11,260.50.

"In connection with the inventory for Aug. 1, 1900, it is explained that the valuation of the twine raw material on hand at that date is lower than the current market value at that time, but it was taken as a basis of estimating the profits of the institution, as it was what in the best judgment of the board was a fair price, fibre prices for some time having been raised by temporary causes, chiefly the war in the Philippines."

The inventory on hand Aug. 1, 1899, plus the expenses of the entire year up to Aug. 1, 1900, amounted to $662,039.07. The inventory of stock on hand Aug. 1, 1900, plus the amount of sales made during the year equals $678,050.58, leaving a net profit of $16,011.51 for the year.

THE TWINE TRUST AND THE COST OF FIBER.

Last spring the Fibre Trust and the Twine Trust between them had cornered the market of fibre and raised the price several cents per pound. In this connection the report says: "The raw material for the year 1900 cost $559,000, as against $314,000 for the year 1899, an excess of $245,000." And now the opposition would blame the administration for being obliged to pay $245,000 more for the raw material this year than last and the previous, when the notorious fact of it is that a Republican trust had cornered the market of fibre and had raised the price to suit itself, and in this way robbed the farmers of the state of several hundred thousand dollars, and now the trusts have sent their Republican lackies abroad into the land to tell the people that they are no trusts, and that they should be given a chance to run the country so as not to interfere with the interests of the trusts.

THE PRICE OF TWINE.

The law requires that the price of twine for the entire season shall be fixed by the 1st of March and shall not be changed at any time during the season. In this connection the report says: "The price of twine had been fixed on Feb. 8th, 1900, at 10 cents per pound for sisal, at which time the price of raw material in New York was 9 cents a pound, to which was to be added freight, cost of twine, oil (increased in price 200 per cent from the previous year), the allowance of 50 cents a day for convict labor, and all expenses of the manufacturer." Almost the entire output of the plant for the season was sold to farmers during March on orders for future delivery at 10 cents per pound, while at the same time the price of the twine made by the trust was from 1½ to 2½ cents per pound higher. During harvest time the trust did indeed cut prices and throw some inferior grades on the market at a great reduction, yet no twine of the same grade as that made by the prison twine plant was sold at a lower price than that fixed by the Prison Board.

THE TWINE TRUST, ITS PURPOSE AND ITS HENCHMEN.

The prison twine plant saves to the farmers of Minnesota thousands of dollars every year. As long as the prison plant sells twine to farmers at a reasonable price the trust will have to sell its product at the same price. If the trust could discredit the prison plant in the eyes of the people and get a pretext for having it shut down, the farmers would have to buy all their twine of the trust and pay whatever the trust saw fit to ask. In pursuing this object the trust can well afford to hire orators and buy up newspapers. If the trust could only get the prison twine plant back again into the hands of its Republican friends, it would soon manage to have it run in such a way as not to interfere with the interests of the trust or even have it shut down completely, as the Republicans did with the prison twine plant in Kansas.

The farmer will find that nearly every Republican politician and dealer in twine, is howling about the way the twine plant at the prison has been mismanaged. By selling directly to the farmers the prison twine plant has incurred the ill will of the dealers, and it is their object to destroy this competition so that they can help the twine trust to rob the farmers as it was done in former years.

There is, however, one thing that the farmers of this state would like to know—they would be very much interested to hear Tams Bixby tell how much money the twine trust has contributed to assist Republican orators and newspapers to destroy the prison twine plant.

WEIGHMASTER'S REPORT

Unequalled Records by Weighmaster Ed. O'Brien for the Year Closed.

The following, from the weighmaster's report, refutes Republican charges of gross mismanagement:

"The total number of cars weighed during the year was 214,490, and the revenues accruing from all sources was $53,993.50. Covering the same period the expense account was $53,069.23, showing a surplus of $929.27. The total number of bushels of grain weighed during the same period was 173,311,380.

"A comparison of last year's figures with the above will not be out of place here. Shortly after I came into this office in 1899, the duty devolved upon me of furnishing you with the fourteenth annual report. In that statement it was shown that 202,293 cars had been weighed and that the revenues from all sources was $34,485.41. The expense account for that year was $57,448.68, indicating a deficiency of $22,958.27. Total number of bushels of grain weighed, 160,940,006. In some respects the showing thus made was an excellent one, but the large deficiency was an unpleasant feature to record.

"Shortly after the beginning of the present grain year, in October, 1899, your honorable board raised the price for weighing cars from 15 cents to 25 cents, thus adding largely to the receipts of the department. It was one of the necessities and though some fault was found with this, the justice of it soon became apparent to all. The board of appeals, created by act of the last legislature, added from $18,000 to $20,000 to the expense of the grain department and this, if no other reason existed, would have justified the advance. Then, too, there is a vast difference between the car of ten years ago, or even five years and that of today. The capacity of the former would not average but little over 600 bushels, while the latter, built in these times, will average from 200 to 300 bushels more. The thousand bushel car of the present time is becoming quite common. With these changed conditions the weighing of a car of wheat now, in reality, is almost as reasonable as it ever has been.

"The year just closed, it is gratifying to state, sees the department self-sustaining. The deficiency of almost $23,000 in 1899 has been turned to a surplus, small though it be, of $929.27 in 1900.

"Going back to the birth of the department in 1885, but one year has excelled this in the number of cars weighed. That was the big crop year of 1897. I desire to say, too, that while the number of cars weighed during the past year was 12,197 more than during the previous year, still the expense account of the department was less by $4,269.45. To be more explicit, the year ending Aug. 41, 1899, showed an expense to the department of $57,338.68, while the year which closed Aug. 31, 1900, showed an expense of $53,069.23."

An example of the increased strictness and general efficiency achieved under the present administration is shown by the statistics of the weighing department. Minnesota export wheat is weighed out at Duluth and weighed in on arrival at Buffalo, the other end of the lake route. Comparison of the Duluth and Buffalo weights, therefore, shows the accuracy of Minnesota grain department officials in weighing. The following table tells a significant story. The loss in pounds per 1,000 bushels for the past seven crop years follows:

Crop year.	Loss per 1,000 bu.
1894	35 lbs.
1895	36 lbs.
1896	30 lbs.
1897	17 lbs.
1898	20 lbs.
1899 (Last Republican year)....	17 lbs.
1900 (Lind Administration)	8 lbs.

In other words, the loss in weight during the Republican administration of the Duluth department ranged from 17 to 36 lbs. per 1,000 bushels, as against the bagatelle of 8 lbs. under Governor Lind's new regime. The average loss in six years of Republican administration was 25 lbs., which is three times that of the first year of the new control. This shows that the new broom sweeps clean in weighing as in inspection, while being a less heavy burden upon the taxpayer, and a source of far greater justice to the producer and general business public.

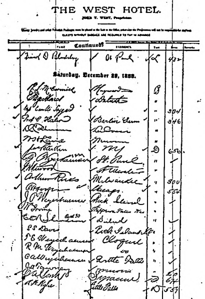
Issued by the Minnesota Democratic State Central Committee, St. Paul, Minn., L. A. Rosing, Chairman; Geo. S. Canfield, Secretary.

ELECTORAL TICKET.

Voters should be careful as to how they vote for Presidential electors. Put your cross marks opposite the nine electors where it is marked on the ballot, "VOTE FOR NINE."

Also Bryan voters should be careful to vote ONLY for those NINE ELECTORS, and be sure not to make the mistake of also putting a mark opposite the "Social Democrat." To do so might lose your whole vote.

TAWNEY'S CONVICTION



THE WEST HOTEL.

JOHN T. WEST, Proprietor.

Continued

Saturday, December 29, 1888.

Proof Positive of the First District Congressman's Connection With the Minneapolis Lumber Combine.

One of the salient points of attent again Congressmen J. A. Tawney, of the First District is his connection with and subserveney of the Northwest Lumber Combine. When he denied serving the combine to get the $2 tax on lumber, the boys who are after him overwhelmed him with the record of his vote and official action at Washington. When they charged him with being the main stay and chief advisor of the Mississippi Lumberman, he denied, and the friends of L. L. Brown, Tawney's, popular opponent, produced the most positive proof. Finally they ran Tawney down to having been present at Minneapolis at a meeting of the lumbermen when Mr. Tawney was present. Tawney vigorously denied it, and declared that he was not in that part of the state on the occasion mentioned, and now the boys don't do a thing but reproduce in fac simile the page of the West Hotel register, showing the names of the lumber barons and Mr. Tawney registered in their own hand writing.

Examine the above and be convinced.

CLAUSEN vs. REISHUS

Clausen's Fatal Admissions Under Republican Investigation.

Investigations report, by the Jacobson committee, Jan., 1899. This was to investigate specific charges that under Clausen "the department of grain inspection has become corrupt; that the inspection has been conducted in the interests of the buyer as against the shipper and producer; that grain would be inspected in as No. 2 or 3, and inspected out as No. 1; that the dockage has been unreasonable, unjust and excessive; that the department has employed incompetent and corrupt men as inspectors."

The report: We find from the evidence produced that the grading of wheat has not been uniform; that prior to the month of October, the new crop of wheat had not been graded solely on its merits, it being the policy of the inspection department to give lower grades than later.

That the system of appeal from the inspector's decision is impracticable and of little benefit.

That it appears that some of the inspectors have been incompetent or careless.

That the weighing of the grain at the terminals is carried on in a loose manner.

From the investigation had before this committee, it clearly appears to this committee that wheat inspections have not been uniform throughout the year; that the grading of wheat has been rigid during the first three or four weeks of each season, and less rigid during the balance of the year, and we cannot in too strong language condemn this practice, as it must necessarily result in GREAT LOSS TO THE PRODUCER. FROM THE FACT THAT A LARGE PROPORTION OF THE CROP HAS BEEN MARKETED BEFORE THE CHANGE TAKES PLACE, AND ON ALL WHEAT SOLD PRIOR TO THAT TIME, THE LOSS MUST NECESSARILY FALL ON THE PRODUCER.

Clausen's admissions, when on the stand to meet the charge that "early in the season the inspection made by your inspectors was very severe against the producer, and that subsequently, later in the season, somewhere about the middle of October, and from that on, much more liberal grades were given." Clausen's explanations were not satisfactory to the committee of investigation, and contained such admissions as these (pp. 5-7, Appendix, House Journal, 1899):

"A. I will concede that statement is true to a certain extent, but it is true of every crop of wheat we have ever handled since the department started in 1885.

"A. I thought I made myself clear on that; I want to say here that the tendency from the beginning of the year to the close is to press the grades down, press them down, and in order to have a little margin, one on which we can carry our crop through on, without exercising apprehension on the part of eastern buyers, we start out not knowing what we have to contend with; in other words, we take the benefit of the doubt on the line wheat.

"Q. You don't give the farmer early in the season the benefit of the doubt?

"A. We take the benefit of the doubt until we get started, because we don't know what we are getting into; if we should start out in any other way with the pressure that is brought to bear on us we should get the grades down so low they would be below the standard, and if we once get below we cannot tighten up, we can never get back. There was never known such a thing as tightening up a grade.

"Q. In other words, the rule never worked both ways?

"A. No, sir."

Mr. G. H. Tunnell, then chief deputy inspector at Minneapolis, was placed on the stand.

"Q. You have testified that early in the season you have to inspect closer?

"A. Yes, at the very start."

The committee in closing its findings from the evidence produced before it, made this statement:

"From this it appears that NEARLY ONE-THIRD OF THE CROP HAS BEEN MARKETED EACH YEAR BEFORE THE FARMER IS ENABLED TO GET THE GRADE THAT HIS CROP MERITS."

OUR STATE CANDIDATES

The Entire List Appeals to All Voters Who Want the Cause of Good Government in Minnesota to Go Forward, and Not Backward.

Governor Lind in himself presents the chief question of approval of reform administration. He is making a wonderful canvass. His clear, earnest, concise exposition of national and state issues, has made him hosts of new friends wherever he has spoken and has strengthened the old ones. The people see in him more than ever the champion of their interests and of their rights, the opponent of dishonest corporations and grasping syndicates.

Thomas J. Meighen, Democratic-Peoples candidate for lieutenant governor, has also been making hosts of friends. His active and efficient work as a member of the state board of equalization in forcing certain corporations and syndicates to bear their honest share of the burden of taxation, is becoming better known and making friends for him every day.

The confidence which the laboring men have in M. E. Neary, Democratic-Peoples candidate for secretary of state, and which they have in former times expressed by electing him to positions of trust and honor in their organizations, has been growing constantly and will make him a strong candidate with the people throughout the state.

The large circle of friends which Henry C. Koerner, Democratic-Peoples candidate for state treasurer, has in every county of Minnesota, gives him an advantage such as few men possess. In every county of the state Mr. Koerner has personal friends, irrespective of party, that will stand by him and work for his election and the election of those on the state ticket with him.

The reputation which Robert C. Saunders, Democratic-Peoples candidate for attorney general, has won as an attorney in advancing the rights of the people and enforcing the laws of the state, especially in the enforcement of taxes against standing pine on exempt land grants, is appreciated by voters, irrespective of party, and makes him a tower of strength for the entire state ticket.

Among the things to which the present administration points with special pride, and which more than anything else have proven it to be the friend of the people of the state, the champion of their interests and welfare, there is none which deserves greater praise than the work of the present railroad and warehouse commission. P. M. Ringdal and T. J. Knox are members of this commission. They have reduced the freight on grain from a large section of the state to the markets. This reduction will save the farmers of Minnesota about $400,000 per year.

During six years previous to their administration, Duluth weights on grain fell short at Buffalo an average of 25 pounds per 1,000 bushels. Since they took charge, this shortage has only averaged 8 pounds per 1,000 bushels. If you want this kind of service to go on, vote for them. They are candidates for re-election, and vote also for S. M. Owen to keep them company. He is editor of The Farm, Stock and Home, and so well and so favorably known, that anything we could say would be superfluous.

GOT HIS REWARD.

It is timely to warn the people against the roorbacks and campaign lies that are likely to be sprung by the Republican managers just before election day.

Two years ago Mr. Vandiver, the present head of the Republican Press Bureau, published in the St. Paul Dispatch a bogus speech of Governor Lind, for which The Dispatch was afterwards fined and obliged to pay to Governor Lind $600 indemnity.

For this feat Tams Bixby appointed Vandiver head of the Republican Press Bureau and there is nothing so low and contemptible in the way of campaign lies and roorbacks but what the people may safely expect it from that source.

COST OF WAR

Especially those of Conquest, are Ruinous to People Who Work for a Living.

From Gov. Lind's acceptance speech: The total cost of our military and naval establishment, for the past two years of war in the Philippines, was $225,000,000, not including cost of the troubles in China.

THIS SUM OF $225,000,000 IS SO IMMENSE THAT THE ORDINARY HUMAN MIND CAN HARDLY GRASP IT. LET US EXPRESS IT IN THE LEADING PRODUCTS OF THE NORTHWEST. ACCORDING TO THE LAST REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, THE STATES OF MINNESOTA, IOWA, WISCONSIN, NEBRASKA AND THE TWO DAKOTAS, IN THE YEAR 1899 PRODUCED:

	Bushels.	Farm value.
Minnesota—
Wheat	68,000,000	$37,000,000
Corn	31,000,000	7,000,000
Iowa—
Wheat	18,000,000	10,000,000
Corn	242,000,000	55,000,000
South Dakota—
Wheat	37,000,000	18,000,000
North Dakota—
Wheat	51,000,000	26,000,000
Wisconsin—
Wheat	11,000,000	7,000,000
Nebraska—
Wheat	20,000,000	10,000,000
Corn	224,000,000	51,000,000

THE TOTAL VALUE OF THE CROPS NAMED OF ALL THESE STATES FOR LAST YEAR WAS ONLY $221,000,000, LESS THAN WE ARE PAYING ANNUALLY FOR OUR ARMY AND NAVAL ESTABLISHMENTS UNDER THE IMPERIAL REGIME.

The entire amount expended for education in the United States for the year 1898, which is the last year for which I have authentic figures, was $189,000,000. Our average consumption of wheat is less than five bushels per capita. Assuming our population to be 75,000,000, our consumption of wheat would be 375,000,000 bushels.

AT THE AVERAGE FARM PRICE, WHICH DOES NOT EXCEED 60 CENTS, THE COST OF THE NATION'S BREAD IS $225,000,000, THE SAME SUM THAT WE PAY FOR OUR ARMY AND NAVY.

HAS NO OPPORTUNITY

Under Trusts the Young Man of Today Has Little Chance for Progress.

On this point ex-Senator Washburn used the following language in an interview in the Chicago Times-Herald, Sept. 11, 1899:

"When I was a young man—I am now sixty-eight—I had the world before me, and there was absolutely a fair field for me. Take all of our most successful business men of today and their experiences were like mine. They entered the race without a handicap, and their grit and capacity won. Now, this building up of trusts puts a stop to fair and equal opportunities for the young men of today.

"THE YOUNG MAN JUST OUT OF COLLEGE HAS NO OPENING, AS A RULE. HE CANNOT BEGIN BUSINESS ON HIS OWN ACCOUNT AGAINST ORGANIZED CAPITAL. HE MUST JOIN THE PROCESSION: HE MUST CONTENT HIMSELF WITH BEING A MERE CLERK, AND THE CHANCES ARE THAT HE WILL NEVER GET ANY FURTHER BECAUSE THERE ARE SO MANY IN HIS CLASS.

"This makes the situation a serious one, and I am sorry for the young man of today. I have studied the situation, and I am sure of what I am saying."

GRIP OF THE TRUSTS

What the Farm Crop Will Buy of Trust Goods.

(From Gov. Lind's acceptance speech.)

Taking the farm value of a bushel of wheat as worth at an average throughout Minnesota 10 cents less than the Minneapolis cash price, ten bushels would buy, at the wholesale prices quoted by the Commercial Bulletin, the official trade journal of Minneapolis jobbers, the following goods on the dates named:

Kerosene oil (Minnesota state test), Jan. 1, 1898, 101 gallons; Jan. 1, 1899, 70 gallons; Jan. 1, 1900, 56 gallons.

Granulated sugar, Jan. 1, 1898, 157 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 118 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 104 lbs.

Common salt, Jan. 1, 1898, 9½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1899, 6½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1900, 5 bbls.

Lumber (16 ft. 2x4), Jan., 1898, 723 feet; Jan. 1, 1899, 536 feet; Jan. 1, 1900, 418 feet.

Wire nails, Jan. 1, 1898, 4 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1899, 3 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1900, 1½ kegs.

Barbed wire (common painted), Jan. 1, 1898, 435 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 310 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 133 lbs.

The above figures are based on the wholesale prices of oil, salt, sugar, lumber, nails and barbed wire at Minneapolis. Freight, handling, and retailer's profits would probably make these articles cost, on the average, at the farm, about 20 per cent more, and the amount of each of these articles which ten bushels of wheat would buy would be correspondingly less.

TEN BUSHELS OF WHEAT, LIKE ANY OTHER PRODUCT, ARE WORTH WHAT THEY WILL BUY. THE PROSPERITY OF THE FARM IS NOT MEASURED BY THE VOLUME OF ITS PRODUCT, NOR EVEN BY THE MARKET VALUE OF THE PRODUCT, BUT BY THE NET PURCHASING POWER OF THE COMMODITIES PRODUCED.

USED THE SENATE

To Defeat the Railway Gross Earnings Bill.

While Senator E. T. Young fumes and raves at being charged with responsibility for defeat of this bill, for which his reward came duly—let him answer whether the following is not absolutely true:

"It has been the custom of the railroad companies for years to let the lower house of the legislature go and make their fight in the senate. The lower house, therefore, has been the barometer of the popular pulse, and the senate has been the index of railroad power. It was thus for three sessions on the bill to tax railroad lands, and it was the same on the measure here in question, H. F. 25, to increase the gross earnings tax rate. The sentiment of the state was shown in the vote in the house, where the bill passed by the overwhelming majority of 99 to 5. The railroad power was exerted in the senate, where a coterie of 31 and later 34 senators, of whom 29 were Republicans, formed an effective bulwark in the interests of the railway lobby and in defiance of the people.

"The Republican membership of 44 out of 63, had the power to carry this measure by a majority of 25 votes, even had every Democrat and Populist vote been cast against it. But the Democrats and Populists were three to one for the bill, while the 44 Republicans stood two to one against it and sealed its fate."

REPUBLICAN RAILWAY AND TAX RECORD.

The Republican state senate, over which the Republican lieutenant-governor presided, was notorious for two facts: (1) For the slaughter of all reform measures to which the railroad lobby was opposed; (2) for the defeat of nearly all important reforms looking to the increase of the state's revenue and greater justice of taxation.

GOV. LIND AND RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS

BIG GRAIN STEALS.

Evidence that the Elevator Companies are Cheating the Farmers.

ATTEMPTING TO DISCREDIT INSPECTION.

Rob the Farmers in Order to Attempt to Create a Sentiment that Would Place the Robbers in Control.

The bureau has positive evidence that certain line elevator companies are undergrading the wheat received from farmers on the plea that the grades have been stiffened by the State Grain Inspection.

Their object in so doing is to attempt to discredit the work of the inspection department in order, if possible, to defeat the present railroad and warehouse commission in the election and thus again secure the control of the department as they enjoyed it under Clausen. Besides, it pays them to do this, because the difference goes into their pockets.

The charges that grades have been stiffened are unqualifiedly false, as any fair-minded man can ascertain by investigation. NOT ONE SINGLE COMPLAINT HAS BEEN LODGED WITH THE CHIEF INSPECTOR WHICH WAS NOT DETERMINED IN A MANNER SATISFACTORY TO THE SHIPPER. It is therefore plain that these elevator companies are stealing from the farmers by means of falsifying the grades and after thus having perpetrated their nefarious frauds upon the farmers they unblushingly charge the state inspection with the outrage.

It becomes the duty of every farmer who takes an interest in maintaining the integrity of the inspection department to rise in arms and assist in running down the thieves. It can be done in this way. Secure the initials and number of every car shipped from your station during the past few weeks. Send them to the inspector's office and it can be shown just what grade and dockage the elevator companies received at the terminals. If the general average is higher than that received by the farmers the fraud is proven. Under the law, the inspection department does not know from which point the cars arrive nor who the consigners are, and therefore cannot begin these investigations.

Go to your elevator agent and demand a list of the car numbers with the initials and date of shipment of each car they have shipped, and send that to the chief inspector, who will promptly give you the grade each car received. This will enable you to judge whether you have been fairly treated or not at your station. If the elevator agent will not furnish it, he must have a reason for refusing. Then go to your station agent. Publish the facts as ascertained in your local newspapers, so your brother farmers may not be induced to vote to support the gang that is robbing them.

During the month of September the records at Minneapolis show that at that point 2,333 cars were found to contain No. 1 wheat, 3019 cars No. 2 wheat, 1888 cars No. 3 wheat and 1,239 cars no grade. REPORTS FROM FARMERS ALONG THE LINES WOULD INDICATE THAT VERY LITTLE WHEAT HAS BEEN GRADED NO. 1 BY THE BUYERS ALONG THE LINES. The following letter speaks for itself.

Duluth, Oct. 25, 1900.

Hon. H. Plowman, Fergus Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Several farmers in the vicinity of Underwood and some living near Battle Lake complained to me about the inspection this year, stating that buyers gave them nothing but No. 2 with a heavy dockage. The buyers claimed they did not get any better grades. I looked at some of the wheat and as it looked all right for No. 1, it struck me that something was wrong, and I obtained a list from the railroad agent at Underwood of all wheat cars shipped from that place since Oct. 1 to date and find in the inspection office that every car but one was graded No. 1. Here is the list of cars and how they were graded:

R. R.	No. of cars.	Grade	Dockage.
N. P.	17,469	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	36,081	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	 3,683	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	 8,339	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	13,663	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	35,854	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	10,395	No. 2	0 lb.
N. P.	30,241	No. 1	½lb.
N. P.	 9,320	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	 5,586	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	36,896	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	 8,305	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	 2,188	No. 1	1 lb.

From the above you will notice that the inspection department is all right, but the wheat buyers are misrepresenting the same, and I think they are doing this all along the line. It works against the present administration and warehouse commission, and for self-protection the matter should be shown up in its true light.

Yours respectfully,

H. P. BJORGE.

Effective means will be found to protect the farmers against the continuance of these outrageous steals. BUT MEANWHILE THERE IS DANGER THAT THE FARMERS WILL BE DECEIVED INTO TURNING THE STATE INSPECTION OVER INTO THE HANDS OF THE VERY GANG THAT IS ROBBING THEM.

V. E. L.

BIXBY-VANDIVER

The G. O. P. Machine and Its Favored Organ.

The following is the portion of Tams Bixby's "appeal" circular, calling on postmasters for money, which has so offended loyal G. O. P. papers, by giving the Minneapolis Tribune the royal preference:

"We need speakers and money to pay their expenses. We have little of either. AS A CAPABLE SUBSTITUTE FOR BOTH, WE WANT EVERYBODY TO READ THE MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE. They generously come to our rescue, and their offer is so liberal and patriotic that it calls for the grateful appreciation and active consideration of Republicans alike, and postmasters in particular. To get Republican results at the election the people must be reached now by honest, sensible arguments; AND THIS THE MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE IS DOING, AND PROPOSES TO DO, AT RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF EVERYONE."

There are scores of its "liberal and patriotic" G. O. P. papers as the Tribune. They do not much admire Bixbian methods.

A SPECIMEN ANSWER

The G. O. P. Trust Defenders Think Much of Standard Oil.

The Republican state central committee has issued a big sheet with a very proper mourning line about it, to offset the very clear statement given in the Democratic Trust Poster, contrasting conditions under trust prices and trust rule with former years before the trusts laid its grip upon everything the farmer buys.

The Republican sheet pretends to compare the purchasing power of certain products in October, 1900, with October, '96, using some of the principal farm products.

THE FIGURES GIVEN ARE IN MANY INSTANCES FALSE AND MISLEADING, BUT THE COMPARISON WHILE PRETENDING TO BE GIVEN FOR 1896 AND 1900 ONLY GOES BACK TO 1898.

It then takes up coal oil, its most familiar trust article, and pretends to show how much more coal oil could be bought in '98 with stated quantities of products more than today.

NOW THE POINT OF THE WHOLE MATTER IS THIS: THAT COAL OIL, THE REPUBLICAN FAVORED MONOPOLY, THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY, HAS A COMPLETE MONOPOLY OF THE UNITED STATES, HAVING CRUSHED ALL OF THE INDIVIDUAL REFINERS—HAS BEEN SLIGHTLY CHEAPENED, BUT THE STATEMENT FAILS TO MENTION A SINGLE OTHER ARTICLE IN WHICH A COMPARISON FAVORABLE TO THE "G. O. P." COULD BE MADE.

What the Democratic poster showed was that for a long list of articles which the farmer must pay for with his crop, the producing power of his crop now is a very large per cent less than it was in 1896, the year with which comparisons were made. This applies to articles of iron, steel, barb wire, tinware, etc., running through the whole gamut.

THUS IS THE G. O. P. REJOINDER A DISMAL FAILURE, SO DISMAL THAT THERE IS NO WONDER THAT THE SHEET WHICH IS ISSUED WAS DRESSED IN A BIG BROAD BAND OF MOURNING.

GOOD REASONS

Why You Should Vote for Ringdal, Knox and Owen for R. R. Commissioners.

P. M. Rindal and T. J. Knox are members of the present Railroad and Warehouse Commission. They have reduced the freight rate on grain from A LARGE SECTION OF THE STATE TO THE MARKETS. THIS REDUCTION WILL SAVE THE FARMERS OF MINNESOTA ABOUT $400,000 PER YEAR.

They are now equalizing the rates on merchandise so as to give the smaller cities of the state a chance to compete for business with the larger cities and thus to grow and build up local markets for farm produce.

UNDER THEIR MANAGEMENT FARMERS HAVE RECEIVED BETTER GRADES FOR THEIR GRAIN, WHILE THE SAME GRAIN HAS STOOD 2c HIGHER IN LIVERPOOL (AS COMPARED WITH FOUR LEADING COMPETITIVE GRADES FROM OTHER STATES), THAN IT DID BEFORE THEY TOOK CHARGE.

During six years before they took charge Duluth weights on grain fell short at Buffalo an average of 25 pounds per thousand bushels. Since they took charge this shortage has only averaged eight pounds per thousand bushels.

IF YOU WANT THIS KIND OF SERVICE TO GO ON, VOTE FOR THEM, AND VOTE FOR S. M. OWEN TO KEEP THEM COMPANY. HE IS THE EDITOR OF "FARM, STOCK AND HOME," AND NEEDS NO INTRODUCTION TO THE PEOPLE OF MINNESOTA.

COST OF IMPERIALISM.

Year.	Per Capita Tax.
1802 (Jefferson, president).....	2.49
1830 (Jackson, president)......	1.90
1860 (Buchanan, president)....	2.45
1901 (estimated).............	9.54
Total ordinary expenditures 1790-1844	$732,022,653
Value of tobacco crop 1896.	24,258,970
Value of tobacco crop 1898.	305,467,041
Value of wheat crop in 1899	319,545,259
Value of corn crop 1899....	629,210,110
Total estimated expenditures for 1901	758,729,475

This table shows that the greed of empire will next year cost the people about $7.00 per capita more than the per capita prior to the Civil War, and $4.53 per capita more than prior to the Spanish War. It further shows that said annual rate of expenditure is nearly $100,000,000 more than the value of our corn crop, far more than the value of our wheat and cotton crops and nearly thirty times the value of our tobacco crop. It also shows that it takes more money now to run the Government one year than it took to run it from 1790 to 1844—a period of fifty-four years.

A Prediction.

We wish to make our republican friends a prediction. If Van Sant and the republican railroad and warehouse commissioners are elected next Tuesday we wish to go on record as predicting that the Great Northern will before January 20th 1901 run not more than three trains a week on the St. Hilaire line for the balance of the winter. Those who vote that way please paste this in your hat for futuer reference.

Bryan is not a calamity candidate. In fact, the shoe is on the other foot. The McKinley managers are trying to win by means of deliberate threats to throw the country into a panic and cause a business crisis if Bryan wins. The whole campaign is bared on terror, intimidation and corruption.

Voters, remember that it was Commissioner Ringdal who helped us to get that daily train two years ago. A vote for Lind, Ringdal, Knox and Owen means state control of railroads. A vote for Van Sant, Mills and Miller means railroad control of the state. Which side do you vote with?

This week the Spectator publishes a supplement in the interest of the Peoples Party county ticket for Red Lake county. We wish our readers would carefully look it over. The times when a man should not drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer are so very few and far between that they needn't be mentioned. Drink it in the morning, drink it at the table, drink it on going to bed; drink it when you are hot and when you are cold, when you are wet and when you are dry. It does you good by aiding the nutrition and strengthening the digestion; made of pure barley malt and hops, by the Minneapolis Brewing Company and sold in Crookston by Alexander Thompson.

Five hundred new national banks have been organized in the last six months under the act of congress giving them as many bank notes as they deposit government bonds, and pay them interest on the bonds too. It is pretty cute to have the government give you interest on bonds and pay you the money for the bonds, too. It is very wise in the people to uphold such a swindle. The bankers are very much opposed to a paternal government! Now these banks will help to increase the wealth of the nation! They will help to make more corn and cotton.—Appeal to Reason.

Grand Master Alex. Van Praag of Minnesota paid our local I. O. O. F. lodge a visit last Wednesday evening. After the lodge was called to order and the routine opening disposed of, the Grand Master's presence was announced. On being admitted, and receiving the welcome accorded to that official the members received instructions in the secret work of the different degrees. Having satisfied himself that all were proficient in the work the lodge adjourned and an informal meeting was held for the members and their friends in which the Grand Master gave a lecture on the benefits of Odd Fellowship. After the lecture all repaired to Hotel Markham where a bountiful repast was served and from appearances was enjoyed by all present. After supper the Grand Master wished to entertain the ladies and did so in a highly enjoyable manner with a few national songs sang as he alone can sing.

OUR COUNTY CANDIDATES.

The head of our county ticket is well and ably represented by the personage of Adam Zeh of Red Lake Falls.

ADAM ZEH.

Mr. Zeh was elected by the Populists in 1898 in a hotly contested election but won out nicely and in the two years of Mr. Zeh's occupation of the county auditor's office all agree that the party made no mistake in nominating him and the people were wise in electing him. He has made a very efficient and obliging auditor and merits the votes of our citizens this fall at the polls.

O. T. TANDBERG.

Of O. T. Tanberg, candidate for treasurer, nothing might need be said as nearly everyone knows him. Mr. Tandberg has held the office for one term and his services were fittingly endorsed by an unanimous nomination in our county convention. He is rigidly honest in all particulars and has well and faithfully performed his duties as treasures and deserves your votes on Nov. 6th as an endorsement of his work the last two years.

SAMUEL GIBEAU.

Samuel Gibeau, candidate for re-election to the office of register of deeds was first affiliated with the Farmers Alliance of Polk county and since the organization of the Peoples Party has been one of its prominent members. In 1896, when Red Lake county was set off he was selected as one of the commissioners. In 1898 he was nominated by the Peoples Party for the office of register of deeds and was elected with a nice majority. Mr. Gibeau has made a very efficient register and we recommend him to the voters this fall as a person eminently qualified and experienced for this very important office.

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON.

Justus L. Johnson, Peoples Party nominee for the office of judge of probate is so well known to the readers of the Spectator that it is almost unnecessary to comment on his candidacy. He has served the village of St. Hilaire for the past eleven years as village recorder. He is a good office man and has given valuable service to the village. If he is elected we predict that he will make one of the most efficient and obliging officials in Red Lake county. The people of St. Hilaire and the surrounding country should stand by Mr. Johnson to a man.

FRANK JEFFERS.

For superintendent of schools, our county and party has been in singular luck to have a well qualified man. Mr. Jeffers has served two terms as superintendent of schools in a gratifying manner and is before you again for re-election, and we can say that we believe he should be elected with a larger majority than before for the services rendered his county and party.

F. A. GRADY.

The business of our county while conducted by the board of county commissioners is always through the legal advice of the county attorney and therefore the people should be sure the man elected to this office have the qualifications necessary to their safety. F. A. Grady is a bright young attorney now taking the lead in his line in the county, and in him we feel is the proper man to fill that position.

E. A. MORAN.

For sheriff, we have a man with all the necessary qualifications. While E. A. Moran has not held the office of sheriff before in our county, he is well known as having been several times a constable and has made a very efficient officer. We think no better choice could be made by the people of Red Lake county than electing Mr. Moran for sheriff. He has always been loyal to his party and his friends and will make a good officer if elected.

S. A. SWANSON.

REPRESENTATIVE 61ST DISTRICT.

S. A. Swanson the Peoples Party nominee for representative is a young man who was raised in this county and is well known to nearly all the voters. Mr. Swanson is a man of good habits is industrious and is well qualified for the position. If elected he promises to represent the best interest of his constituents. Mr. Swanson is closely allied with the Peoples Party of the state and if elected will without doubt vote for the many reforms needed and advocated by that party. His reputation so far clearly indicates that he is a man who can be trusted by the people to do right.

Space will not permit longer discussion, but will incidentally mention that P. O. Hagglund, candidate for county surveyor and Jos. Belair candieate for county coroner have given the best of services in their capacities since in office—four years—and can recommend them to the voters this fall.

On the whole, the Peoples Party has placed an exceptionally strong ticket in the field this year and the voters of this county, laying aside all prejudices and personalities, will make no mistake in voting for and electing the full ticket, some of whom are among the ablest and most prominent men of our county connected as they have been with its official affairs since its organization.

All things have their season and in each even numbered year we are confronted with the proposition of selecting officers to carry on the affairs of our county for two years longer. In facing such an ordeal we very naturally take into consideration the different qualifications of the candidates before us. Their services to the county, if having held office before and last but not least their services to the particular political party to which we attach ourselves and the principles of which we uphold.

Vote for M. J. DALY.

GO BACK ON EDDY.

Otter Tail County Republicans Come Out For Ex-Congressman Boen.

Roseau County Times, Oct. 26.

Upon examining the nominating papers of ex-Congressman Boen, referendum candidate for congress, against Eddy in the seventh congressional district in which Mishael J. Daly is the people's-democratic candidate, we find that Boen's candidacy is endorsed by over 200 republicans in Otter Tail county headed by Elmer E. Adams, who is supposed to be the right hand bower of Mr. Eddy. It is certainly a surprising exhibition of political split up on Mr. Eddy in Otter Tail county. No one would concede Mr. Boen but a few scattering votes in the district, and the action of Mr. Adams and co-republicans in nominating Mr. Boen must be taken seriously, for a man of Mr. Adams position would not stultify himself before the general public. The friends of Mr. Daly under the circumstances existing in Otter Tail county will feel that his election is placed beyond the possibility of a doubt, and Mr. Eddy can thank his fool friends for the result.

Announcement.

I hereby announce that I have withdrawn as a candidate for county auditor on the ground of some irregularities relating to my nomination and that my withdrawal does not favor either side of remaining candidates for the same office.
B. E. Burker.

Boen and Aaker have filed their certificates of nomination and their names will appear on the official ballots as candidates for member of congress from this district. Neither of them expect to be elected, and neither of them represents any principle whatever. Both seem to be running solely for the purpose of getting even with some one. Aaker can no longer claim the support of the Prohibitionists since he offered to throw the Prohibition party overboard and come out for Bryan if the Populists would nominate him for congress. He and Boen are both cheap frauds.—Warren Register.

Vote for Three.

There is quite a lack of information among the voters as to the manner of selecting members of the railway and warehouse commission. Formerly these were appointed by the governor, but at the last session of the legislature the law was changed making the offices elective. This year the people will be called upon to elect three members of the commission, two for four years and one for two. The Democrat-Peoples nominees are P. M. Ringdal and T. J. Knox for the four-year terms and S. M. Owen for the two year term. Vote for all three. If you vote for only one or two of them you lose part of your vote. If you vote for three candidates for the four year term your vote on all is lost; if you vote for two candidates for the two-year term your vote is lost. Remember, vote for three and for the three marked "Democrat-Peoples."

A vote for Eddy is an endorsement of the sentiment that a public officer can disregard public opinion. A vote for Daly is a rebuke to that dangerous sentiment. A vote for Eddy endorses taxation without representation. A vote for Daly is a protest against such a system. A vote for Eddy is a vote for the sugar and tobacco trusts; A vote for Daly is a protest against trust domination of public affairs. A vote for Eddy is a protest for government without constitutional limitations. A vote for Daly is an endorsement of the constitution. A vote for Eddy is a protest against the Declaration of Independence, for he has persistently voted to sustain a policy that denies that "all men are created equal." A vote for Daly is an endorsement of that fundamental principle of our government. With such a choice of principles and with such a clean, able man as Daly to vote for a man ought to be able to rise above party and vote for principles more important than party issues, and at the same time give notice that a man who leads a sober life is preferred to any other.—Willmar Tribune.

Khadija.

BY MICHAEL GIFFORD WHITE.

(Copyright, 1900, Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Seated on his spirited charger in the scarlet and gold laced uniform of the guard, the jamadar Muhammad Husain Khan seldom failed to draw admiring glances from European as well as native female eyes—attentions which he seemed to little appreciate in the deep attachment which he felt for his young wife, Khadija. All had gone well with the Jamadar, and his ambition to be appointed an aide-de-camp to the viceroy seemed in a fair way to be gratified, when a new governor general of India and his wife came up to Simla, bringing with them as an attendant upon the latter, a French maid, Elise Dumont.

From the first this young woman of coquettishly fascinating exterior evinced a discreet partiality for the handsome native officer, casting in his direction stolen glances of admiration, and giving vent to little sighs and exclamations of rapture whenever there was a probability of their being noticed or overhead by the object of her affection.

"Oh, mon dieu!" she exclaimed, upon a certain occasion when the Jamadar stood near by. "He is so—so handsome, that brave Indian sabreur." Then she delivered a cupid's dart from her eyes that went home true to its mark in the breast of Muhammad Husain Khan. The Jamadar looked grave, twirled his fierce moustaches, and then smiled. "By the beard of the Prophet," he thought, "that little foreign girl has a comely form." And the thought abode with him during the rest of the day and brightened his dreams by night.

From that moment in the bungalow home of Muhammad Husain Khan, where previously all happiness had reigned, disquietude took possession.

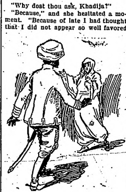
"Thou art away a great deal now, and thy brow looks troubled, my Muhammad," said his wife. "Is not all going well?"

"The new Viceroy Sahib has much for me to do," he replied. "I hope to be appointed one of his aides-de-camp, as the Bisaldar Abdul Hanif is old and will retire soon. These things are upon my mind."

Khadija regarded her husband thoughtfully, and then asked: "Am I growing old too in thine eyes, Muhammad?"

"Why dost thou ask, Khadija?"

"Because," and she hesitated a moment. "Because of late I had thought that I did not appear so well favored before thee. I thought that perhaps thou were going to bring another wife to place over me; and I prayed Allah that it might not be so, for did I not save thee from the cholera, O my husband. Ah! you love me still do you not?" she cried, taking one of his hands and placing it upon her forehead.



"Don't thou not love me a little in return?"

The tall soldier looked kindly down upon his wife as he replied: "I have not forgotten, Khadija. Didst thou think I had done so?"

"I do not know," she returned, "but, O, Muhammad, there is a greater danger than the cholera nigh thee."

Khadija paused as if fearful that she had said more than was prudent, and drawing her chudder about her with a significant glance left the bungalow. The Jamadar thoughtfully regarded his wife's retreating figure, then adjusting his turban, he also left the house, making his way through the Viceregal compound just as darkness was swiftly descending. Avoiding the buildings of the Viceregal lodge, the jamadar finally approached a spot screened by a clump of bamboo, about which he peered in a manner that indicated the keeping of a secret appointment.

Evidently disappointed in his expectations, he impatiently strode back and forth a short distance, when a voice at his elbow caused him to start, for the owner had approached him unobserved.

"Ah! my brave soldier," cried the voice softly. "Surprised at your post. That is not good. I am late, I know, for the rendezvous, but miladi took a terrible time over her dressing tonight."

"If the enemy always surprised in such a form, who would fear the consequences," gallantly replied the native officer, as he salaamed low before a dainty white form.

"Thank you, sir," rejoined the girl.

"Ah, no!" exclaimed the girl, playfully avoiding his embrace. "No, not those things, but yet I would like that you should prove your love."

"Tell me, tell me how?" he besought eagerly.

The Jamadar drew close to her and passionately whispered: "Thou are as beautiful as the lotus bud. I love thee; I would make thee my wife. Ask anything of me, money, jewels, silks. What is it you desire, my treasure?"

"It is such a little, little thing that I would like you to do; and still——"

"Tell me quickly," he interposed.

"Well, hush!" Then starting as the bamboos creaked. "Ah! what was that?" she asked. "What noise was that among the bushes?"

"It is nothing," replied the Jamadar, drawing his sword and thrusting it between the canes. "Perhaps a jackal or a fox. Do not be frightened. Come, tell me the little thing that is to be the price of thy love."

"Listen," said the girl, drawing closer to her companion. "The Viceroy has been busy these two days with some papers that now lie on his table. I am curious to know if the name of a friend is mentioned in them, and—and I want to look at those papers. You understand?"

"Thou wouldst look through some papers of the Viceroy Sahib?" repeated the Jamadar.

"Yes. Do you not comprehend, and I need your assistance to get them."

The Jamadar drew himself up to his full height. "It could not be done," he replied tersely.

"Now, I see," exclaimed the girl. "You do not care for me. I thought so. You swear by your Prophet that you love me, but when it comes to a test, then you say, no, it is impossible. Very well. I do not like such affection, my brave sauvage," and she turned quickly as if about to leave him.

"But listen; listen, my treasure," he pleaded. "Dost know what would happen if I were discovered?"

"A bas! You would not be discovered," she retorted. "It would be so simple if you carry out my instructions. The papers now lie on the Viceroy's table in his study. You can pass in there as if to deliver some reports without causing suspicion. I will wait on the veranda outside the window. Then you can hand the papers to me and by the light from within I can see if my friend's name is mentioned. It will only take five—three little minutes, and is so impossible of harm. You will, you will to please me, my handsome soldier?"

The native officer pondered deeply for a moment, when a soft hand laid caressingly upon his cheek decided the matter.

"Well or ill, for thy sake I will do this thing," he said, "though discovery means—"

"You will not be discovered," interposed the girl. "But there is no time to lose as dinner will soon be over when the Viceroy returns to his room. No, not yet," she protested, as the Jamadar again sought to embrace her. "When I have seen the papers, then you may take your reward. Now go quickly."

So with an amorous parting whisper the Jamadar made his way to the front entrance of the lodge, while the French maid cautiously passed round to the window she had indicated. "When I know what is in those papers," she soliloquized, "will I marry the black soldier? I think not. I will carry my secret to the handsome Monsieur Preloff of the Russian embassy in Paris who has promised to pay me for it with a ring. To think that I could love this black sauvage. Ah, mon dieu! how ridiculous. He is a fine fool. I have tricked him well."

The Jamadar entered the mansion and passed unquestioned into the Viceroy's study. There finding himself unobserved, he took a small packet of papers from the table, and was about to pass them out of the open window, when his hand was thrust roughly back, the window abruptly closed, and a scuffling of feet without followed by a few smothered screams led him to conclude that the plan had been discovered.

Hastily replacing the papers upon the table, he was about to leave the room when he found himself confronted by the Viceroy, who had risen early from dinner to resume work upon some dispatches to the minister at Kabul.

"Ah, Jamadar," said the Viceroy gravely. "You are the very man I wanted to see."

"He is going to order my arrest," thought the native officer, as he saluted nervously. "A court martial will settle my affair with the foreign girl."

"I am about to intrust you with a very important commission," resumed the Viceroy. "Certain dispatches are to be sent by special messenger to Kabul, and you have been selected to command the escort. Should you acquit yourself well, as I have no doubt will be the case, you will be appointed an aide-de-camp on my staff. Here is your commission," and the Viceroy took up one of the papers in question from his table.

The Jamadar was so astonished that he was unable to do more than again salute, and in faltering sentences express his appreciation of the confidence reposed in him.

Returning to his bungalow, he there found his wife, to whom he communicated his good fortune.

"Thou hast seen greater danger tonight than the cholera, Muhammad," she spoke gravely.

"How so?" he asked.

"Hadst thou delivered those papers to the Frenchwoman, thou wouldst surely have been discovered. She was watched."

"Thou knowest then?"

"Aye, I watched thy meeting as a fox from under the bushes. I heard and followed her, and sprang on her as a leopard on the enemy of its own. Ah husband," and she placed her arms about his neck. "Twice have I saved thee. Dost thou not love me a little in return?"

"Truly thou art well named Khadija, my faithful wife," he answered, carressing her affectionately.

Breach of Promise Cases.

Should breach of promise cases be encouraged? On the one hand there is sometimes cruel heartlessness displayed by men, in which cases a verdict of thumping money payments is the greatest punishment to the ill-doer; on the other hand, it is not necessarily the most innocent or the most deserving who choose to go into court. The woman who trusts her fair fame to the tender mercies of her lover knows pretty well the consequences of her act, while the really unhappy and ill-used woman who has suffered most, and whose life is completely shattered, shrinks from dragging her woes into the lurid glare of the law courts. Pecuniary payments can, after all, only soothe outraged feelings, very often the least desirable feelings, those of rage and anger. The tender, confiding female loves on in spite of everything and is probably the last to bear witness against the man who has ruined her prospects. No doubt, ample damages help a future marriage, for, such is the strange irony of fate, an acquitted murderess, or a fair woman in a breach of promise case promptly find numerous applicants anxious to claim her hand.—London Graphic.

In the Island of Know Not.

An American who had occasion to consult a prominent business man in Rio Janiro, tells of his experience in a letter to New Orleans:

"'Senhor Jose has not yet arrived,' the head clerk would say, blandly, when I inquired for the principal.

"'How soon will he be in?' I would ask, innocently.

"'God knows, senhor,' the clerk would reply, still unruffled.

"Then, perhaps after calling five or six times, I would get desperate, and a conversation something like this would occur:

"'Will Senhor Jose be here to-day?'

"'Ah, senhor, I know not.'

"'Well, to-morrow, then?'

"'Perhaps, who knows.'

"'But I want to make an appointment. Do you expect him any time next week?'

"'It is possible, senhor.'

"'Oh! confound it! Will he be here this year?'

"'He may, senhor.'"—New York Tribune.

"Yet you say I am your friend," answered Diggs.

CASTORIA COUNTERFEITERS.

Their Factory Unearthed and the Manufacturers Arrested—A Warning to Imitators.

The Centaur Company of New York city, manufacturers of Castoria, recently learned that their well known preparation was being counterfeited in St. Louis, Mo., and that worthless imitations were being sold.

After a careful investigation by Chas. H. Fletcher, president of the company, it was learned that a preparation in imitation of Fletcher's goods was being prepared by the Palestine Drug Company of No. 107 South Second street, and sold by a few druggists. Warrants were sworn out for the imitators. Yesterday John Bick, president of the offending company, and Benjamin Chireaun, chemist for the concern, were arrested, but later were released on bond.

The cases will be tried before Judge Clark of the Court of Criminal Correction. The Centaur Company has determined to protect the public from worthless imitations of their goods.—St. Louis (Mo.) Republic, Sept. 30, 1900.

HOW WEAK CHILDREN ARE MADE STRONG, VIGOROUS AND WELL

LITTLE MARY McBAY
EVERETT HALLOWS

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, of Peckham St., Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., have cause to thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for restoring to health, and probably preserving the life of their little son. Almost from infancy Everett Hallows was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles, and nothing seemed to help him. Finally Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended and tried with success. A few bottles were sufficient to effect a cure, and to-day the little one is enjoying the best of health. By the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura the sickly child was transformed into a happy, hearty, robust boy.

Dr. Greene's Nervura | for the Blood and Nerves

Thousands of other children can thank Dr. Greene and his wonderful remedy for the strength and health they enjoy. Children to whom it is given have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. Parents should realize that it is their duty to give it to every child who is not in perfect health. There are no diseases more dreaded by parents than fits, epilepsy, and St. Vitus' dance. Yet no child would be troubled by them if Dr. Greene's Nervura were given when the first symptoms appear.

Charles L. McBay, a highly esteemed police officer, who resides at 14 Myrtle St., New Bedford, Mass., says:

"About two years ago my little daughter became run down in health and suffered from St. Vitus' dance. Soon after she was prostrated by rheumatism, which severely affected her low limbs.

"After trying various remedies without obtaining relief, she began taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and experienced immediate benefit. She continued its use, and after taking five bottles her rheumatism was practically cured. Her appetite returned, her pains disappeared, she was again able to walk without lameness, her general health was restored, and she was able to attend school and to play like other children."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the prescription and discovery of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York City, who is the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic complaints, and he can be consulted in any case, free of charge, personally or by letter.

How shall a mother who is weak and sick with some female trouble bear healthy children?

How anxious women ought to be to give their children the blessing of a good constitution!

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six months old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound: and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

ST. PAUL'S BAD LUCK

BIG OCEAN LINER SUSTAINS HEAVY DAMAGE.

Supposed to Have Struck a Derelict, Which Carried Away Her Starboard Propeller and Caused Damage Which Will Probably Amount to Several Hundred Thousand Dollars — Officials Tell Different Stories—Will Take Five Months to Make Repairs.

New York, Nov. 5.—The steamship St. Paul, of the American line, Capt. Roberts in command, arrived in port twenty-four hours late, with her starboard propeller gone and her engine room badly damaged. Statements of different officers vary as to the cause of the accident, but the damage sustained by the steamship will probably amount to several thousand dollars.

The St. Paul left Southampton and Cherbourg on Oct. 27, with a full cargo, 316 cabin passengers and 245 in the steerage. About 8 o'clock in the evening of Wednesday last, while some of the saloon passengers were still at dinner and other passengers promenading, a sudden shock was felt all over the ship, although it was not sufficiently severe to cause a panic. The engines were stopped a few seconds after the shock, but it is said that during that brief time the whirling machinery, free of the weight of the propeller, wrought havoc in the engine room. The officials of the steamship refuse to allow any one to enter the engine room. James A. Wright, second vice president of the International Navigation company, which controls the American line, was a passenger on the steamship, having gone abroad in October to bring back his family. He said:

"I was smoking in my state room when I felt a slight tremor throughout the ship. I thought that probably her head had fallen away a few points and that she had in consequence shipped a big sea. The shock was so slight that the average passenger did not apprehend that anything unusual had occurred. I went below to find out what was the matter. I found that the ship had lost her starboard propeller, together with part of her tail shaft and had otherwise damaged her machinery. Capt. Roberts and Chief Engineer John Hunter are under the impression that we struck a derelict. We were running at full speed at the time, but were not overtaxing the engines or driving the vessel. Chief Engineer Hunter at the moment of the accident happened to be passing through the pantry and immediately turned the emergency valve, thus shutting off the steam. About the same time the assistant engineer happened to be in the vicinity of the tail shaft when the propeller struck something and dropped off, carrying with it a portion of the tail shaft, which broke just inside the stern of the ship. The governing machinery worked splendidly and the engines were brought to a full stop in ten seconds. The St. Paul will leave on Tuesday for the Cramps ship yard in Philadelphia, where the necessary repairs will be made. Meanwhile the Friesland, which sails on Wednesday for Antwerp, will take the St. Paul's passengers, mails and freight to Southampton."

It will take about five months to repaid the damage which is said to amount to about $250,000 or $300,000.

CHANGE IN NORWAY'S CABINET.

Resignations of Several Ministers Accepted and New Officials Are Selected.

Christiania, Nov. 5.—At a meeting of the council the resignations of Ministers Holst, Nysom, Loechen and Thiesen were accepted. Ex-Minister Konow was appointed minister of agriculture, Lieut. Col. Stang was made minister of defense, M. Aurstad was made minister of finance, and Capt. Sparre was appointed a member of the council of state sitting at Stockholm. The Norwegian tariff bill has reached the storthing, changing the duties on a number of important manufactures and raising the duties, especially on steel and steel wire, copper wire, liquid carbolic acid and copper alloys.

London, Nov. 5.—The Argyll family, who are the straightest kind of Presbyterians, are greatly scandalized by the conversion to Catholicism of Miss Leila Campbell, niece of the present duke, who has entered the Carmelite convent. Miss Campbell, whose father is dead, is a beautiful blonde. She was virtually adopted by the duke of Argyll and Princess Louise, with whom she lived, and who hoped to arrange a grand marriage for her.

NEWFOUNDLAND CAMPAIGN HOT.

Approach of Election Day Causes Activity in Party Ranks.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 5.—The campaign for the general election to be held next Thursday is the fiercest in the colony's history. Both sides are working most energetically and straining every nerve. Mr. Morine, the Conservative leader, is canvassing the northern bays with Contractor Reid and his son on Mr. Reid's steamer. It is expected Mr. Reid's influence will sway a large vote in Mr. Morine's favor, though the success of the Bond government is regarded as highly probable.

ACTIVE SCOUTING.

Several Minor Engagements Are Reported From the Philippines.

Manila, Nov. 5.—Last week was devoted to active scouting. The insurgents having failed to crush a single garrison are now experiencing a reaction. Lieutenants Wilson and Dority, of the Forty-fifth volunteer infantry, destroyed large stores of rice, four granaries and a barracks near Bato. Capt. Atkinson, with 34 men of the Thirty-seventh volunteer infantry, attacked 190 insurgents under Col. Valencia, recovering two American prisoners and capturing a considerable quantity of ammunition and supplies. A native orchestra lured the United States troops from their quarters near Dagupan, while the insurgents attacked the rear, killing two Americans and wounding three. To-day Senor Buencamino, representing the principal ex-insurgents in Manila, requested Judge Taft to forward to Washington a signed expression of their loyalty.

KITCHENER IN COMMAND.

Seems Probable That He Will Have Plenty to Do.

London, Nov. 5.—Lord Roberts, according to dispatches from Cape Town, has taken his sick daughter to Johannesburg and Lord Kitchener is commander-in-chief. It seems probable that he will have plenty of work. Gen. Dewet is reported to have made his appearance near Frankfort, in the northwestern corner of Orange River Colony, and small bodies of Boers are harrassing the British. It is said Lord Kitchener intends to stop the pursuit of commandoes and to try to settle the colonies by garrisoning and organizing the towns for rapid raids with mounted troops.

MANY KILLED IN ENGAGEMENT.

Lord Roberts Reports Eight Fights—Boer Losses Are Heavy.

Lord Roberts, in a dispatch from Johannesburg, dated Nov. 2, reports no less than eight fights at different points, all unimportant, but significant of the activity of the Boers. Gen. Kitchener, after a night march, surprised Schoeman's laager at Steenkampsberg, and then pushed on to Schalkburger's laager at Rooikranz. But the British were prevented from following the Boers, who trekked north. Prisoners in the hands of the British say the Boer loss in the fight with Gen. Barton Oct. 25 were 140 killed, wounded or missing.

Indiana Storekeper Kills His Son-in-Law, Who Threatened Murder.

Vincennes, Ind., Nov. 5.—Harris H. Rose, who has a store at Cane Ridge, a cross-roads settlement nine miles south of here, shot and instantly killed John Kessinger, his son-in-law. Kessinger had gone to Rose's house and threatened to kill the entire family, including his wife, whom he had driven away from home, and who had gone to her parents' house for shelter. Kessinger knocked down both of the women, and when his father-in-law interfered Kessinger drew his knife and started at the old man, who seized a shotgun and fired. Mr. Rose surrendered to the sheriff and gave bond.

Volcano Is Restless.

San Francisco, Nov. 5.—The passengers on the bark Rhoderick Dhu report that the volcano of Kilauea, thirty miles from Hilo, was momentarily expected to begin its periodical eruption on account of a series of earthquakes that took place Oct. 10. The first of the shocks occurred about 3 o'clock in the morning and was very violent, lasting about fifteen seconds. There were three more shocks during the day.

COMPARATIVE PRICES

PROSPERITY CLAIM DEMOLISHED BY OFFICIAL FIGURES.

Facts from the Statistical Abstract—Unprecedented Production of Gold Increases the Volume of Money and Atones Somewhat for Lost Double Standard.

The gold standard people asserted in 1896 that the one great need of the country was a dearer dollar, a dollar that would buy more of the products of the farm and the factory. In other words, their contention was that prices were too high, and that the adoption of the gold standard by reducing the amount of money in circulation would reduce prices by giving greater purchasing power to the dollar.

The silver men admitted that the adoption of the gold standard would, by contracting the currency, result in a fall of prices, but asserted that this instead of being a benefit would be a calamity, disastrous to all producers. That a dearer dollar meant smaller prices of all products of labor and that falling prices in the past have always brought ruin and disaster to the business world.

These positions were clearly defined. Both agreed that the gold standard meant lower prices. They disagreed only as to the effects, the gold advocates asserting lower prices to be a desirable thing, the silverites maintaining that a general fall in prices would be a calamity.

The Republicans won, we have the gold standard, but to some extent the predictions of both sides seem to have failed. The silver people still maintain they were right, but that unexpected conditions have temporarily averted predicted results, while the Republicans are now issuing campaign literature showing that we have had an increase in the amount per capita of money in circulation, that we have had prices and that the country is prosperous because of higher prices, forgetting apparently, that they are thereby proving the claim of the Bryanites in 1896.

In spite of the gold standard, it is true we have now more money in circulation than in 1896. In that year the amount was, according to treasury statistics, $21.10. In January, 1899, it was $25.25. It now probably exceeds $26.00, the largest amount since 1865. This has relieved a money stringency and has been brought about probably by the enormous and unexpected increase in gold production which rose from $118,000,000 in 1890 to $237,000,000 in 1898, and over $300,000,000 in 1899, when the Alaskan gold was added and the South African miners doubled their product. The amount of gold in the United States increased from $590,000,000 in 1896 to $861,000,000 in 1898 and the increase since then has been equally rapid. Owing to the vast expenses of the Spanish, Philippine and Chinese wars, this gold has not accumulated in the treasury, but has been paid out and is now in circulation, the amount now in the treasury being much less than it was in 1896.

Steadied Prices.

This increase of the world's gold has steadied prices of those products which depend upon a world's market and prevented a disastrous fall. Other conditions have assisted in this. The greatest famine of the present century has occurred in India, where millions of human beings have actually starved to death. Russia, our principal competitor in wool, has lost 25,000,000 sheep by drought. Our wheat crop in 1897 was the largest in our history, and our exports of wheat in the two fiscal years ending July 1, 1898, were 440,000,000, the largest in our history, but the prices of wheat remained stationary. The treasury statistics show that 59,000,000 bushels exported from New York in 1896 and 1897 brought 75.2 cents in New York, while 104,000,000 bushels exported from New York in 1898-9 brought 75.0 cents. The highest price in Chicago in 1896 was 94⅝c, and in 1899 was 79½ cents. But while the prices of our farm products, which to some extent are regulated by supply and demand and by the world's supply of money, have remained stationary, in the face of an extraordinary foreign demand, as in the case of wheat, corn and dairy ropducts, or have risen slightly in the case of wool, cotton, cattle and sheep, or decreased as in the case of hog products, the prices of those articles controlled by trusts have been arbitrarily advanced beyond all reason. Among these may be mentioned coal, coal oil, gasoline, all iron products, especially wire and nails, and nearly all manufactured articles. This latter advance has not been accompanied by any material increase in the wages of men employed, so that although farmers are compelled to pay higher prices for these articles, laboring men who constitute the chief home market for farm products are unable to purchase more or to pay higher prices. The price of farm products is therefore maintained by the export demand and must fall when the Indian famine and European shortage are over and the world wide war now in progress shall cease. Even now the farmer can buy much less with his products than ever before. What shall be the case when the extraordinary foreign demand is over?

"Prosperity" and the Farmer.

The following is a table of average export prices of the products named for the four years of the Cleveland administration, as compared with the three years of the McKinley administration. It was taken from the statistical abstract of the United States treasury for 1899, on page 436, and was issued by the McKinley administration, hence cannot be accused of being partial in its treatment of the Cleveland period.

As will be seen, it shows that the prices of agricultural staples were higher during the Cleveland administration, than they have been on the average, during the McKinley administration.

In further explanation, it may be said that there have been famine in India and short crops in Europe, which have had an influence in holding up agricultural prices. The drought in Australia has had much to do in holding up the price of sheep and wool, the flocks of that country having been almost totally annihilated; yet, the statistical abstract, page 378, shows that the total value of our sheep has fallen from $125,009,264 in 1893 to $107,697,530 in 1899. The value of oxen and other cattle, exclusive of milch cows, as shown by the statistical abstract, page 378, has risen from $547,882,204 in 1893, to $637,931,135 in 1899. But the value of all farm animals has fallen during this period $500,000,000, see page 378 statistical abstract 1900. This is accounted for by the fact that the number of meat cattle has decreased from 35,954,196 in 1893, to 27,994,225 in 1899. A decrease of 8,000,000 meat cattle has taken place, while the meat-eating population has increased 16,000,000 during practically the same period.

CONCLUSION.

These facts and figures taken from the records of the government, showing that the export prices of agricultural products have been lower under the "prosperity" administration of McKinley, than they were under the panic administration of Grover Cleveland, ought to effectually dispose of the fallacy that the farmers of the United States have been benefited by the policy of the Republican party.

REMEDIES FOR TRUSTS.

"We have a remedy and our remedy is, first, to put every trust-made article on the free-list; second, we propose that congress shall provide that before any corporation does business outside of the state of its origin it shall take out a license from the federal government, and this license shall only be given when the corporation shows that it has no water in its stock and that it is not attempting to monopolize any branch of business. I believe that would be a remedy for the trusts. I believe that no private monopoly could exist."

OLD GROVER IS SILENT.

Perhaps the severest condemnation Bryan's candidacy receives is from the continued silence of ex-President Cleveland. As the leader of the old line sound money Democracy, Mr. Cleveland can have no sympathy with the unsound financial theories represented by Mr. Bryan, and as his political principles will not permit him to affiliate with the Republicans, he maintains a strict silence, which, to those who believe as he does, is quite as eloquent as words.—Philadelphia Ledger.

On the contrary, the greatest glory of Mr. Bryan is that he is hated by Mr. Cleveland. Cleveland's support would be a positive injury to Mr. Bryan. Mr. Cleveland's room is much more to be desired than his company.

DAVIS IS IN DANGER

MINNESOTA SENATOR IN A CRITICAL CONDITION.

To Save His Life It May Be Necessary to Amputate His Right Foot, Possibly His Leg — Serious Changes Develop and a Celebrated Surgeon Is Telegraphed For — Outcome of the Case Is Doubtful—Has Become Thin and Feeble, but He Does Not Realize His Condition.

St. Paul, Nov. 5. — Serious changes were yesterday made known in the condition of Senator C. K. Davis, who since last September has been suffering from a poisoned foot. He abrased his right foot slightly in August. The abrasion was afterward aggravated while the senator was in Maine by the dye from a black silk sock. But he returned to Minnesota and spoke at Duluth Sept. 21 and at Fergus Falls Sept. 22, before retiring from his campaign labors. His foot was then much swollen and extremely painful.

Dr. Alexander J. Stone, assisted by Dr. John L. Rothrock and Dr. Howard Lancaster, performed an operation Oct. 14, and another operation Oct. 24, which removed the swelling and apparently placed the patient on the path to quick recovery. Last Friday, however, the senator became feverish. Saturday a sharp pain in the sole of his foot drew attention to an accumulation of purulent matter at that point. Until then the diseased tissues had centered about the base of the little toe. Yesterday morning the senator was again feverish. He complained of the not only in the sole of his foot but in his heel, and even in his ankle. Dr. Stone said last evening that Senator Davis had developed unfavorable symptoms. The doctor added that he had telegraphed to Dr. Murphy of Chicago, said to be the best surgeon in that city and one of the most skillful in the United States. Dr. Murphy will arrive this morning.

The outcome of the senator's case is uncertain. It is doubtful whether he can avoid the loss of his right foot, and possibly his leg. Should the infection not be promptly arrested the case will tax the utmost surgical skill. An improvement began yesterday afternoon which may happily prove to be more than temporary. The darting pains in the foot disappeared and the fever subsided. The senator ate with a relish and declared himself much better. He is restless from long confinement. He has become thin and feeble, but he does not realize his condition.

ASBESTOS MINING.

Redwood County Discovery to Be Soon Developed.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Nov. 5. — A ninety-nine-year lease to forty acres in section 20, Swede's Forest, this county, given by the owner, Leo Knutson Eide, to Charles Hohmann, Joseph J. Hohmann and Peter Elschen, has been filed here. The lease is for the purpose of allowing the men to carry on mining operations for asbestos. John J. Hohmann is an experienced mirer and has been over the tract in question, and as a result is showing acme magnificent specimens of mineral asbestos, the fiber being long and fireproof. The company is required to be actively engaged in mining the product inside of three months or the lease becomes void. The tract in question lies about eighteen miles northwest of Redwood Falls.

AGENT SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Soon After the Arrival of Company's Representative to Inspect Books.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 5.—William Clemens, agent for the Great Western Elevator company and the White Lumber company at Leonard, in the southwestern part of the county, committed suicide by shooting. He was at the depot when Messrs. Mitchell and Comrie, two representatives of the elevator company, arrived. He walked with them to the postoffice and later excused himself to go to his home. He rushed to one of the upstairs rooms and shot himself. He left a note to his wife, the contents of which were not divulged. An examination of his accounts is in progress, and it is rumored he was short with the elevator people.

AGED COUPLE ASPHYXIATED.

Mr. and Mrs. Drake of Hastings Found Dead in Bed.

Hastings, Minn., Nov. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. Lucius M. Drake were found dead in bed in their residence, having evidently died from asphyxiation caused by gas escaping from a coal stove in the sitting room.

Stopped by Injunction.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 5. — Work on the new grade being built by the Milwaukee road at Redfield has been stopped by injunction. The intention of the company was to change their track so as to get close into town, instead of being out about a mile, as at present. The right of way across the farm of C. H. Myers had not been secured, and he served an injunction until the case could be settled.

Formerly Lived in St. Paul.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 5. — E. A. Manship, a shirt manufacturer, died this morning as the result of injuries received in an elevator accident a week ago. He came to Sioux City three years ago from St. Paul, and leaves a wife and two small children.

THE MISSING LINK.

It Is Dug Up on a Farm in Western Oregon.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 5. — On the farm of George Cochran, at Tangent, Or., J. C. Crawford and a man named Beam dug up a skeleton which they think may be that of the "missing link." All the bones were secured and will be articulated as soon as possible in order to show what kind of a creature they were once the frame of. They indicate a man of four feet eight inches, of large bones. The skull lacks the usual sutures. It is eighteen inches in circumference, four inches smaller than that of the average skull of the white man. The jaws are large and protruding and the teeth perfect. The vertebrae have an additional bone and socket for a missing bone. The bones of the legs and feet are normal, like those of a man, but in the arms the radius and ulna bones are two inches longer than the humerous bone, where they are generally considerable shorter, indicating an arm that reached below the knee. The bones of the fingers are longer than those of a man. The skeleton is not that of an Indian, being distinctly different.

GOPHERS WIN BY A POINT.

Wisconsin Loses by a Failure to Kick a Goal.

Minneapolis, Nov. 5. — Wisconsin's failure to kick an easy goal was responsible for its defeat by Minnesota Saturday. Each team scored a touchdown early in the game, and the Gophers kicked a goal from theirs, giving them the victory by a score of 6 to 5. The weather was as fine as ever brightened a big football match. Both teams were confident of winning, and both looked for bigger scores than were made. Phil King of Wisconsin believed his team could not lose. Dr. Williams of Minnesota was even more confident, and he thought Minnesota ought to score eighteen.

RUSH TO THE CLAM BEDS.

Activity of Pearl Hunters on the Upper Mississippi.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Nov. 5.—Discovery of pearls in the Upper Mississippi has caused a tremendous rush to the clam beds. House boats are now crowding the river and more than a thousand persons are encamped along the river bank. The finding of a few thousand dollars' worth of pearls by the diggers has started a raid on the river. One of the pearls recently found, the Allen pearl, weighed 100 grains and is said to be the largest perfect pearl yet taken from the river. It was purchased by William Moore of Comanche, Iowa, who paid $3,000 for it.

Killed an Alligator in Iowa.

Clinton, Iowa, Nov. 5.—John Hamilton, a young man, killed a good sized alligator in Jones county, which is supposed to have come up the Mississippi river. The animal was discovered near a creek some distance from the river. When Hamilton first saw the alligator he was badly frightened, as it opened its mouth and showed fight. Hamilton secured a long pole and, after considerable hard work succeeded in killing the alligator, which he dragged to his home after much difficulty.

Acquired by the N. P.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 5.—The Northern Pacific has acquired all the tide lands of the Tacoma Land and Improvement company and all the unplatted acreage of land on the tide flats and a large number of unsold lots of the land company for a consideration of $474,000. The railway company exchanges all of its bonds and stocks of the land company for the property and will hold no further interest in the land company.

Nearly Drowned in Pool.

Elma, Iowa, Nov. 5.—As Joseph Jilman was waiting for a south-bound freight train to clear the crossing his horse became frightened by the engine and, rearing, lost his balance and fell over backward, tipping Mr. Jilman, buggy and all into a pool of muddy water by the roadside, with Mr. Jilman underneath. He was nearly drowned, and died several hours later from his injuries.

Believes Hardy and Miller Innocent.

Anoka, Minn., Nov. 5. — Reuben Guy, one of the most prominent citizens of Anoka county, thinks the boys on trial for the Wise murder are innocent, and said that in his opinion the guilty parties were the ones that his daughter, Miss Maggie, and Miss Julia Hansen saw that night on the Brook Park cut off at the Coon Creek Junction, at Mr. Manley's.

Bring in First Deer.

West Superior, Wis., Nov. 5.—The first deer carcass brought to this city so far as known came in Saturday, although the law prohibits transportation until to-day. It was a 220-pound buck, which Warden Hugh Mills confiscated, having caught the hunter transporting it.

Blew Out the Gas.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—William Segelson, a cattleman of Ida county, Iowa, was found dead in bed at the Metropolitan hotel. The gas get was turned on. It is thought he blew out the gas before retiring.

Set Fire to Barn.

Independence, Iowa, Nov. 5. — The barn belonging to E. Cobb, with four tons of hay, was burned by tramps. Loss, $4,000; insurance, $2,500.

Killed by Vicious Horse.

Spring Valley, Minn., Nov. 5. — C. Jaynes, a farmer six miles north of here, was kicked by a horse Friday night and killed instantly.

All Starch Factories Running.

Anoka, Minn., Nov. 5.—Every starch factory in Anoka county is grinding steadily while this weather lasts. The price paid averages about 30 cents a hundred pounds, run of the field, and there is a good profit in it at that.

THE HEDGE.

Fair neighbor of the thatched cot,
With gloire de Dijon clustered gable,
So star sweet, on from plot to plot
Thou trippest, like a nymph of fable.

So blithe thy smile, so soft thy tone,
Thy love so good a life to lead in,
I'd fain the hedge were overthrown
And our two gardens made one Eden!

But "No!" cries Wisdom. "Spare the fence,
The thorn, the ivy blackbirds nest in;
Leave something for the finer sense,
Some dream of joy to hope and rest in,

"Some glad surprise, some mystery
Of inconceivably sweet meaning!"
Wisdom is wise. My friend and I
Scarce press the topmost twigs by leaning.

NIGHTMARE.

The Sensation That Always Makes a Man a Coward.

"Strange that we are always so cowardly in nightmares," remarked a New Orleans lawyer, who has a taste for the bizarre. "I don't believe anybody ever lived who stood up and made a square stand against the amorphous horror that invariably pursues us in such visions. When I have a nightmare and the usual monster gets on my trail, my blood turns to water, and my conduct would disgrace a sheep. I am beside myself with stark, downright fear, and I have no idea left in my head except to run like a rabbit. All pride, self respect, dread of ridicule and even the instinct of self defense are scattered to the winds, and I believe, honestly, I would be capable of any infamy in order to escape. I have no hesitation in confessing this, because, as far as I have been able to find out, everybody acts exactly the same way in the throes of nightmare, and I feel certain I would not make such a pitiable spectacle of myself in real life, no matter what might befall.

"I think that the explanation of the nightmare panic is to be found in the fact that the dream is almost invariably accompanied by a sense of suffocation. It is well established that choking—the 'shutting off of one's wind,' to use a homely phrase—has an effect upon the mind which is entirely distinct and different from that produced by any other form of pain or peril. It fills the victim with such horror and distraction that he is for the moment insane. He will do anything to get relief. This has been brought out on more than one occasion in the defense of men who have been choked and killed their assailants, and judges have held that the circumstances of such an attack should be given special consideration as extenuating the deed. In dreams the entire nervous system is relaxed, and it is natural to suppose that the mental effect of suffocation would be intensified. At least, that is the best apology I have to offer for my sprints through nightmare land."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Habit In a Horse's Work.

"When I retired from the contracting business a short time ago," said a well known man, "I had a number of horses that I was anxious to dispose of. Among them was one named Jerry, which for several years had been used to working on a drum. In such work a horse becomes accustomed to lifting his feet high to avoid striking the hoisting ropes. When the horses were put under the hammer, Jerry went to a Harlem grocer.

"About a week later the purchaser of Jerry called at my house and told me that he had a lot of trouble with the horse. He said that Jerry would go a short distance, when he would stop short and lift his feet high, and after doing this would go a little farther, only to repeat it again. I told the grocer why the horse stopped short and lifted his feet and also advised him to look up some contractor and sell the animal to him for hoisting purposes. He did so, notifying me that he received a larger price than he paid me for the horse."—New York Sun.

How He Got It.

In one of Chauncey M. Depew's stories he told of meeting a man as funny as himself.

"One day," said Mr. Depew, "I met a soldier who had been wounded in the face. He was a Union man, and I asked him in which battle he had been injured.

"'In the last battle of Bull Run, sir,' he replied.

"'But how could you get hit in the face at Bull Run?' I asked.

"'Well, sir,' said the man, half apologetically, 'after I had run a mile or two I got careless and looked back.'"

Sulphur Will Put Out Fires.

Grant me space in your paper to make more generally known a fact which has been known to me many years and doubtless to others, that sulphur thrown into the fire of a stove, furnace or fireplace will instantly extinguish the fire in a chimney or flue. If a small bag or parcel of sulphur, say three or four ounces, were kept in a handy place and used when needed as directed above, it might be the means of saving property and perhaps life.—Letter in New York Times.

Harder to Say No Than Yes.

He was a most worthy young man, with a fondness for discussing sociological and moral questions, and once started on his hobby he could scarcely be headed in any other direction. He had been quite devoted in his attention to one young woman for as much as six months, but she had been unable to bring him to his senses, though she was willing to confess that she had tried repeatedly to do so. Of course she had done it in the delicate ways women have in those matters, but what he needed was a club.

Not a great while ago he was calling as usual, and as usual he was neglecting sentiment for something that only made a girl tired. This time he was moralizing on the temptations of life and the proneness of people to yield without making the proper effort against them in whatever form they might appear.

"However," he said in conclusion, displaying a commendable spirit of charity for the weak, "it is a very difficult thing for any one to say 'No.'"

Here was an unexpected chance for her.

"And conversely," she responded slowly so he could get the full force of it, "it should be very easy for one to say 'Yes.'"

He looked her straight in the eyes at last, and a hush fell upon the scene.

"Um-er-um," he hesitated, "Miss Kate, am I a chump?"

"It is very difficult for one to say 'No,'" she said with a pretty little smile, and later she found it quite easy to say "Yes."—Washington Star.

His Genial Reception.

General Starr, a gallant old soldier, had an irrepressible dislike for young lieutenants fresh from West Point. In 1874 General Starr was in command at Fort Riley, and one day an orderly came to his quarters with the message that Lieutenant Morrison, just from West Point, was at the post ready to pay his respects and report for duty. In response to this message the old general was starting for his office, when his wife, a motherly old soul, plucked him by the sleeve and said, "Now, general, promise me that you won't be rough with that young man."

"Rough?" said the old man, smiling amiably upon his matrimonial companion. "Why, I'll be peaches and cream unless the young dog riles me."

Reaching his office, the general was confronted with a dapper little fellow as spick and span as though he had just come from the hands of his barber and tailor, while he had the half supercilious air that seems inseparable from the first stages of military education.

Looking the young lieutenant over for half a moment, the old general said with great dignity: "How do you do, Mr. Morrison. I am pleased to see you." Then as a flush gradually mounted over his weather beaten features he added: "I am always glad to see you young men from the Military academy. You—you—(here the general ended with a roar) you think yourself so hanged smart!"—Kansas City Journal.

Tired Metals.

It is a fact of comparatively recent discovery in chemical metallurgy that metals lose their vitality from repetitions of shocks and strains and may be said, as the expression is, to suffer from fatigue—that is, they may be worked till their molecules fail to hold together.

As is familiarly known, bars of tin, rods of brass and wires of any metal will separate owing to fatigue if bent backward and forward continuously. But by careful experiments, however, the fact is made to appear that a remedy exists for this condition of metals if the overstrain does not border on rupture, and this remedy is very much like that which is applied in the case of an overworked human frame—namely, rest.

Feather edged tools recover their vitality better than any other. Of course the length of time required for this rest varies with different metals and the amount of strain to which they have been subjected.

Hard metals, such as iron and steel, use up one and two years' time in the process. On the other hand, soft metals, like lead, retain their cohesive force longer and also require less rest.—Pearson's Weekly.

Why John Laughed.

"I don't know what is coming to us," sighed Mrs. Jones as she handed the paper over to her husband. "I'm sure things are bad enough already."

"Why, what's the matter now, my dear?" murmured John, with a mouthful of muffin.

"Matter, indeed," snorted Mrs. Jones. "Just like you men. Haven't the poor rate, water and other rates all been increased, and now the papers say the birth rate is going up. They ought to—Now, John, what are you laughing at?"—London Standard.

Dress.

A Success.

"Was the wedding a success?"

How Twain Introduced Hawley.

"Only once did Mark Twain appear in public as a political speaker," says Will M. Clemens in Ainslee's. "As a conscientious Republican in his political preferences Mr. Clemens took an active interest in the presidential campaign of 1880. While visiting in Elmira, N. Y., in the fall of that year he made a short speech one Saturday night, introducing to a Republican meeting General Hawley of Connecticut. In the course of his remarks Mr. Clemens said:

"'General Hawley is a member of my church at Hartford and the author of "Beautiful Snow." Maybe he will deny that. But I am only here to give him a character from his last place. As a pure citizen I respect him, as a personal friend of years I have the warmest regard for him, as a neighbor whose vegetable garden adjoins mine, why—why, I watch him. As the author of "Beautiful Snow" he has added a new pang to winter. He is a square, true man in honest politics, and I must say he occupies a mighty lonesome position. So broad, so bountiful is his character that he never turned a tramp empty handed from his door, but always gave him a letter of introduction to me. Pure, honest, incorruptible, that is Joe Hawley. Such a man in politics is like a bottle of perfumery in a glue factory—it may moderate the stench, but it doesn't destroy it. I haven't said any more of him than I would say of myself. Ladies and gentlemen, this is General Hawley.'"

When a Kiss Was Valuable.

The practice of kissing the hands was instituted by the early Roman rulers as a mark of subjection as much as one of respect, and under the first Cæsars the custom was kept up, but only for a time. These worthies conceived the idea that the proper homage due to their exalted station called for less familiar modes of obeisance, so the privilege of kissing the emperor's hand was reserved as a special mark of condescension or distinction for officers of high rank.

Roman fathers considered the practice of kissing of so delicate a nature that they never kissed their wives in the presence of their daughters. Then, too, only the nearest relatives were allowed to kiss their kindred of the gentler sex on the mouth, for in those days, as now, kissing was not a mere arbitrary sign, but it was the spontaneous language of the affections, especially that of love.

Under the Romans if a lover kissed his betrothed before marriage she inherited half of his wordly goods in the event of his death before the marriage ceremony, and if she died her heritage descended to her nearest relatives.—Frank H. Vizetelly in Woman's Home Companion.

Easy Remedy.

Doctor—Good morning, Mr. Lover. What can I do for you?

Mr. Lover—I—I called, sir, to—to ask for the hand of—of your daughter.

"Humph! Appetite good?"

"Not very."

"How is your pulse?"

"Very rapid when—when I am with her, very feeble when away."

"Troubled with palpitation?"

"Awfully when I think of her."

"Take my daughter. You'll soon be cured. One guinea, please."—Pearson's Weekly.

Chinese as Cooks.

Second only to the French are the Chinese when it comes to culinary skill, and with simple materials they will contrive to put together a meal which would shame an ordinary American cook. In peasant families the wife or daughter does the cooking, but in all large establishments the cooks are invariably men.

Innumerable are the illusions and legerdemain tricks of custom, but of all these, perhaps the cleverest is her knack of persuading us that the miraculous by simple repetition ceases to be miraculous.—Carlyle.

Bangkok is a city of waters. It is an Indo-Chinese Venice. More people live in floating houses on the Menam, the Nile of Siam, and the many canals than in permanent buildings.

He Crushed the Hecklers.

The man who asks questions and insists on their being answered is a familiar presence at all party meetings. He is known as the heckler. The speaker is not allowed to disregard him. If a statement is disputed, it is the orator's place to make it good. Any member of the audience may rise to his feet and shout out a contradiction whenever he feels like it, and by the custom of English public life the speaker is expected to make some reply on the spot.

Mr. Chamberlain was always a dangerous man to cross in debate, but the personal feeling against him was so bitter for years after his withdrawal from the ranks of the separatists that many an unhappy man was driven to tilt against his shield. It was delicious to watch Mr. Chamberlain's handling of the situation. He would pause when the interruption grew serious and give the heckler a chance to make himself well heard. "Now if you will allow me I will ask that gentleman to get upon a chair that we may all have the pleasure of seeing him." A dozen anxious hands would hoist the objector into unwelcome prominence. "Now, sir," came the clear, passionless voice, "will you kindly speak up? I should be sorry if any one missed what you have to say."

The heckler, now quite unnerved, would stammer out something, and Mr. Chamberlain, listening with a malicious smile, would quietly readjust his eyeglass and, turning to the audience, fling out a reply—cool, cutting and decisive.—Sydney Brooks in Harper's Magazine.

Camp of this town raised for a certain church member not long ago? He was sick and needy and the M. W. A.'s gave it, although he was not a member of the society. We are afraid that he would never have got a cent if there had been no M. W. Camp here?"

The growth of the U. S. in population during the past ten years—nearly 21 per cent—as shown by the official figures given out this week—76,295,220—has been entirely satisfactory. Whether the same can be said of the growth of manliness, independence, and political intelligence cannot be positively stated until after the election, which will show whether a majority of the voters will vote their known convictions or will allow themselves to be driven to the polls and to be made to vote as the local bosses in the pay of the trusts shall dictate. American manhood vs. serfdom is an issue as well as the republic vs. the empire.

What fools mortals make of themselves over politics—and I shouldn't wonder if I was as big a fool as any of the whole. Only the other day several citizens, worked themselves up to fever heat, upon a prominent street corner, swore, abused each other, called real naughty names, got red in the face and then parted, feeling mad as wet hens. Neither gained anything by the awful exhibition of temper, and all went away of the same opinion still. Human nature is a funny creation. Getting excited over the different candidates, and yet the election of either, makes precious little difference to a single one of those participating in the heated argument. But we've played the fool ever since I can remember and I guess we always will. That's the way of the men, and they will do it.—Gossip in Anoka Union.

Best Way to Treat a Sprain.

In treating a sprain wring a folded flannel out of boiling water by laying it in a thick towel and twisting the ends in opposite directions; shake it to cool it a little, lay it on the painful part and cover it with a piece of dry flannel. Change the fomentations until six have been applied, being careful not to have them so hot as to burn the skin. Bandage the part if possible and in six or eight hours repeat the application. As soon as it can be borne rub well with extract of witch hazel.—November Ladie's Home Journal.

A couple of months ago an old man came into this office, and "stopped his paper," says the Battle Lake Review. We have frequently met him on the streets since that time and it is very amusing to us to note the look of surprise on the old fellow's face that we are still in existence regardless of the fact that he "stopped his paper." Some day, and it won't be very long, either, that poor old fellow will turn up his toes. His old heart will be stilled forever. Neighbors and friends will follow his lifeless clay to the cemetery and lay him to rest among the flowers. An obituary will appear in these columns, telling what a kind father, good neighbor and benovlent citizen he was—which lie the recording angel will kindly overlook the charity's sake—and in a short time he will be forgotten. As he lies out there in the cold graveyard, wrapped in the silent slumber of death, he will never know that the last kind words ever spoken of him, were those of the editor of the paper which in life he "stopped."

Hot Stuff.

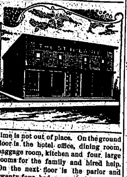
"THE ST. HILAIRE."

The old reliable Hotel St. Hilaire was again opened to the public last Monday under the management of Mr. O. Finberg. The renovation of the house is not yet finished but the work done does not interfere with the comfort of the guests. There are few more accommodating landlords in this section that Mr. Finberg and the house is already enjoying a good patronage. A mere description of the house at this time is not out of place. On the ground floor is the hotel office, dining room, baggage room, kitchen and four large rooms for the family and hired help. On the next floor is the parlor and twenty-four bed rooms with electric connections with office. Each room is elegantly furnished with the latest bed room suits which goes a long way in making a person feel home-like. Mrs. Finberg will superintend the work in the culinary department which is a guarantee that everything will be first-class. We do not hesitate in recommending the house to the traveling public.



Treatment of Hog Cholera.

Editor Farm, Stock & Home.

From many directions come report of hog cholera. Although I am a "burnt child" I don't dread the disease as much as I did, and I have had three bouts with it. The first time it cleared me out of a large herd; the next time it took 25 out of 50, and the next time (14 months ago) it got practically nothing out of over 100 head. I admit that I am liable at any time to have the "second wind" knocked out of me, for all this. But here is what I did the last time, and what I shall do again if the fiend gets after me: Pay close attention to the pigs every time they are fed and if one acts dumpish watch for him next meal time, and if he still has the blues get him away from the rest in a little house or corner of some barn by himself, and where you can study him over. If he is feverish, and wants nothing but water, look out. If in a day or so another pig gets the same way, and soon another, you can bet you've got it. At once let up on the feed of the whole herd. Give no corn, and just a little thin slop of shorts and let them hustle in a pasture, and have pure water to drink and a dry bed to sleep in. Get all those that refuse to eat greedily by themselves on a board floor where you can watch their droppings and see what they need most. Give them no water. Give a thin slop, and to every 4 quarts of this add 1 pint strong tobacco juice and ½ pint turpentine. If they are constipated add freely of raw linseed oil. If they scour give powdered venetian red in slop. If any refuse to touch the tobacco slop I catch and pour down them a little dose of tobacco juice and turpentine in a cup full of milk. I have great faith in the tobacco and turpentine. Use air-slacked lime freely as a disinfectant. It is a good plan if cholera threatens to give the whole herd constant access to a mixture of one bushel air slacked lime, one gallon salt and one quart sulphur. Put this in a box under cover and fasten it so it cannot be upset. Let high-priced nostrums alone. If you intend to doctor the sick ones at all, begin early. Try the tobacco and turpentine remedy in a good sensible manner and report results to F. S. & H.

Austin, Minn. A. O. Dinsmoor.

Flax and Rotation.

It is inevitable that the growing of flax will prove an important factor in crop rotation and the more profitable the crop remains the more certain that crop rotation will become the rule. Wheat after wheat is lingering sickness while flax after flax is a sudden and fatal disease, if not instant death, therefore flax cannot become the staple in a one-crop system of farming. If it is desirable to grow flax, means will be taken to prepare land for growing it in as short intervals between crops as possible, and this means a rotation of crop. And once that habit is formed it will not be abandoned even if flax growing is.—Farm, Stock & Home.

The Chivington Twins.

BY JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

(Copyrighted 1900: Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Hello, Jack Chivington! Hello, Chiv twin! Hello! Hello!"

A young fellow had just got out of a cab in front of the Auditorium Hotel. At this curious sort of hail he turned—and saw a neat automobile road wagon dashing by. The man in it was waving one hand excitedly and with the other slowing down the machine. The woman with him was looking back, her face alight with interest. The young fellow's glum face broke into a smile of pleased recognition, and as the other man made a skillful turn and brought his machine up to the curb, he stepped forward to shake hands, saying:

"Hello, Tom Butterworth! Glad to see you, old man."

"What in the name of all that's curious brings you so far away from home on Christmas Day?" began the man in the wagon, giving him some sort of a cabalistic hand grip. "And what makes you look so glum? Hope nothing's gone wrong. I say—hold on—I've forgotten my 'Manners.' Ha! Ha! Miss Manners, allow me to present to you Mr. John Agnew Chivington of New York, one of the famous 'Chiv twins' of whom you've heard so much; my classmate at college, and my very good friend."

"I am pleased to meet you, Miss Manners," said the young fellow, raising his hat and clasping a hand that was small and warm and very neatly gloved. "And I am proud to be introduced by such a past master of the art. There's only one thing wrong, and that is that I'm the other twin."

"None of your nonsense, now, old fellow," broke in Tom. "I know your tricks and ways. You can fool everybody else, but you can't put it over me. I'm the only man that ever could tell you two freaks apart. You're Jack and I know it; and Jack goes. Now, give an account of yourself, and do it quick. I want to know all about it."

"Well, I've been West on business. I've been delayed all along the trip, and ended up by missing connection here this morning. So I'm stranded here in Chicago on Christmas Day, when I expected to be at home. Isn't that enough to make a man look glum?"

"No, sir, it isn't. Now, look pleasant, please, while I tell you what you're going to do. To begin with, anybody should feel happy to be in Chicago and even more so on Christmas day. Next, you get into that cab and follow me home. We're going to keep Christmas in proper style at our house today. I'm just tickled to death to have a chance to show the effete East how the Wild and Woolly West celebrates. My better half is up to her neck this very minute in all sorts of schemes, and we're going to have a houseful of pretty sisters and cousins—of which the young woman here present is an average 'fair' sample."

"Tom, I'm shocked at you. Please remember that I am an engaged man, and the most devoted lover in all these United States, not excepting Hawaii, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Besides, a stranger at a family gathering is a regular kill-joy. Go away and leave me to my misery."

"Yes, I know Jim's tied fast to the apron strings of the beautiful Bessie Lee, but Jim cuts no ice here. Get into that cab and come along."

The young fellow was in the midst of protesting that he couldn't and shouldn't and wouldn't go, when he happened—just happened—to catch a glance from Miss Manner's eye. Whereupon he became confused in his argument, was ignominiously overborne by his friend, Tom, and ended by getting into the cab and following the automobile down Michigan avenue.

* * * *

"Ladies and Gentlemen," said Tom, rising from his chair and looking around at the merry faces about the Christmas board. "Fill up your glasses again! I have another toast for you—a long one, and a strong one, one to make you see double. Ready? All right; here goes:

"Once upon a time old Mother Nature was in a jovial mood and proceeded to lay herself out to have some fun at the expense of us poor mortals. So, when it came time to send a stork to a certain chimney, she sent two. Legend has it that the bundles they carried were so exactly alike that even the storks got them mixed up on the way. At any rate, when the doctor and the nurse opened the bundles they made haste to tie a red flannel rag about the neck of the contents of the first. Thereafter, as I am creditably informed, it was a case of red flannel rag or confusion with everyone except the mother. Here the mother love taught in some mysterious way to tell her twin sons apart. But the father, after giving medicine several times to the well twin and spanking the temporarily angelic twin, gave up the job in despair. In revenge he named the first bundle James Adams and the second John Agnew, that they might both write their names J. A. Chivington and thus still further afflict a suffering community. Their mother dressed them alike, and thus equipped these twins set out upon a career of comedy that was very close to tragedy.

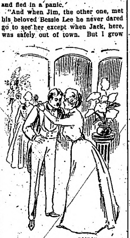
"When they burst in all their glory upon an astonished college world there were high jinks. They passed their examinations as one man, the indignant professors refusing to waste time on the same freshman twice. When the true inwardness of the situation became understood there was joy unfeigned in old South Hall. One tuition fee for the college and the other for beer money! One twin to call on the president for religious advice and the other to simultaneously cut the chapel bell rope or spike shut a recitation room door or to perform without possibility of detection any devilitry that the rest of us could concoct! Two souls with but a single body, two hearts that beat as one—even to taking turns at recitations!

"Later on these marvelous twins won for the United States of America the great and glorious victory of San Juan—for when they charged side by side up that historic hill in the ranks of the Rough Riders, the poor Spaniards thought that all our museum freaks had been turned loose on them, and fled in a panic.

"And when Jim, the other one, met his beloved Bessie Lee he never dared go to see her except when Jack, here, was safely out of town. But I grow loquacious. Here's to The Twins—for they're a jolly good fellow!"



"I, love you, Jack."

* * * *

"Why do you claim to be Mr. Jim when Cousin Tom says you are Mr. Jack?" murmured Lucy Manners' voice in the twin's ear as they sat down to rest outside the ball room, where the Christmas festivities were drawing to a hilarious close. It was a dim and shadowy nook, and a bunch of mistletoe hung suggestively near.

"In self-defense," answered the twin. "Now, if I were Jack—"

"If you were Jack," repeated the girl after him, mockingly, flashing mischief out of alluring eyes.

"I'd do this"—here he swept her under the mistletoe—"and this"—and he kissed her on the lips.

* * * *

"I love you, Lucy, will you be my—oh, I forgot—" and the Chivington Twin came to a dead stop and looked as foolish as might be expected of a lover pulled up short in the middle of a speech like this.

"Forgot what—the point?" laughed Lucy Manners, her face all alight with delight and mischief.

"Why, I've got to confess first, Lucy, I'm the other twin. I'm Jack."

"I should hope so! I don't want any heart-broken Bessie on my conscience."

"I mean I'm—I mean it was really Jim that first time—that Christmas—and—"

"Horrors! Then we've never been introduced. Sir—"

"Now, Lucy, don't; I—I—will you marry me, anyway?"

"Goodness! How do I know which one—"

"Hold on, now, dearest. I'll tell you all about it. Jim came straight to me and, says he: 'Jack, I've just seen the dearest little girl in the world—except my Bessie—out in Chicago. If I weren't head over heels in love already, I'd try for her myself. Tom Butterworth swore I was you, an—and I kind o' started things for you. Get a move on you, now, and write to her; I'll coach you all right.' And I did write and then I came to see you last summer—and you know the rest. Why, what are you laughing at?"

"Oh, Jack, the conceit of you twins! I've never been fooled a minute. I knew it was Jim that first time, but I—I wanted to see what you were like. You dear gump! Bessie Lee and I were room mates at Ogontz, and I knew how to tell you apart long before I ever saw either one of you. No, sir; I won't tell you Bessie's way—not yet. But I've got a way of my own—bend down so I can whisper—I love you, Jack."

Care in Shoeing Horses.

As a rule horseshoers do not consider the shape of the foot as they should. A foot that curves in from the coronet down toward the bottom of the wall will need a higher heel on the shoe than as if the hoof bulges out in front. A horse with a too high heel in front will end his steps further back under his body than he ought to. The intelligent shoer will always aim to preserve the proper balance of the foot, and if he knows his business he knows that it is frequently the case that the wall on the outside of the foot grows faster than the inside, or the heel may grow much slower than other parts of the foot.

Monument Robbed of Its Cannon.

Nearly twenty years ago Congress passed a special act giving an 880-pound cannon to a Grand Army post at Attleboro, Mass., and the piece was mounted on the top of a tall granite shaft as a soldiers' monument. Recently a gang of daring thieves carried the cannon away in broad daylight, and parts of it have just been recovered from a junk dealer who innocently purchased the same. Most of the metal has been melted up and run into various kinds of castings.

CHARM OF CHINA.

"High Living" Is a Commonplace in Celestial Empire.

What is the charm of China—that is, for Europeans? Why is it that not infrequently they prefer living there to remaining at home in civilized America? There is an account of a young woman, the daughter of wealthy parents, whose husband was an official of the Chinese imperial customs service under Sir Robert Hart. Her father, while making her a prolonged visit some four or five years ago, was struck even then by the signs of hostility to foreigners. He was so much impressed by the danger of life in China that he made his son-in-law a fine business offer, to remove any financial objections to returning to America. The son-in-law's consent was easily obtained, but the daughter yielded only out of regard for her father. Life in China seemed then to her far more attractive than life in America, because, for one thing, they have no "housekeeping" problem there. The perfection of the Chinese domestic service goes far toward making life there comfortable for Europeans. "You see," explains a resident, "giving a dinner in China means simply telling your major-domo that you want to give one. You don't have to bother about it further. So dinner-giving, formal and informal, is a feature of the life. The pick of a very good market—I refer to the treaty ports—is at your disposal, and what in America might be called 'high living' is a commonplace. The foreign residents, leading, of course, an isolated life, draw close together as a community, and form a charming social circle. They are, as a rule, true cosmopolites, well educated, well bred, representing all nationalities (twenty are represented in the Shanghai colony), cultured by travel, careful of etiquette, fond of sport; in short, people of the world, delighted to meet in their variety, all more or less on an equality, without the very rich to arouse envy or the very poor to excite pity. Then there is no pressure, no 'hustle,' such as we have here. All business stops at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and from then until 7 o'clock, the dinner hour, you have your choice of your favorite sport or diversion—riding, driving, boating tennis and cricket."

TRACTION ON TONGUE.

This Is the New Method of Saving the Drowning.

What is called the Laborde method is a surprising, simple and effective method of reviving the drowning. The asphyxiated person is placed on his back, with the head low, the clothing is loosened about the neck and the jaws are opened and kept open by a wedge passed between the molar teeth; a knife handle, a cane end or any suitable object of a size sufficient to keep the jaws distended will serve the purpose. The throat is freed of mucus by the finger wrapped in a fold or handkerchief. Traction on the tongue is then begun in the following manner: The thumb and index finger are covered by one thickness of a handkerchief to prevent the tongue slipping, and the tongue is seized as far back as possible from the tip. Fifteen times to the minute at about equal intervals the tongue is pulled out, sharply and the tension immediately relaxed. This traction must be so exerted that the whole body of the tongue is affected and not merely the tip. As the tongue is drawn out to its fullest extent the first two or three times it facilitates action if the index finger of the other hand is gently thrust in the pharynx, as though an effort were made to induce vomiting. These tractions should be kept up at least thirty minutes and may be continued an hour without result, but ought not to be discontinued under that time or even longer, for many persons have been restored to life and health who have been pronounced dead over an hour. If assistants are at hand it is well to supplement the above method by the use of mechanical artificial respiration according to mechanical artificial respiration.—Philadelphia Times.

Tea-Profit Secrets Revealed.

In Paris, at the Exposition, the British-Indian tea planters are doing exceedingly well by selling the leaves that cheer but not inebriate at 3 francs per pound, to the great astonishment of the Parisians, who have hitherto paid 6 francs, 7 francs and 8 francs for inferior qualities. In a little while we shall probably hear the same story from Russia, which in normal times spends £4,000,000 on the Chinese product. Or perhaps we shall not hear, and the story will have to be guessed at, for the Russian tea importers, among whom there are many millionaires, will substitute Indian tea for Chinese, say nothing about it and pocket the difference between the two prices.

A Floral Centenary.

Florence, the city of flowers, is about to celebrate a floral centenary—that of the dahlia, which was first imported to Europe from Mexico in 1790 by three Spanish explorers, who planted it in Madrid in the hope that the tubers might prove a cheap food for the starving peasantry. Instead of that, the beauty of its flowers attracted the attention of the rich, and in 1800 some specimens were taken to Paris. From this time the dahlia became one of the glories of European gardens. It also then first received a name, adapted from that of Dahl, the leading botanist of the day.

Railroad Pension Scheme.

The Lake Shore Railroad company is devising a pension scheme for the benefit of employes of long standing, who have reached an age of retirement. It will be similar to that now in force on the Pennsylvania railroad, the company giving a lump sum as the nucleus of a pension fund to be enlarged and maintained by a one per cent assessment on the monthly wage of employes.

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MRS. A. HARTLEY.

You ought to have known that when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

Mrs. Hartley, of 221 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill., whose portrait we publish, suffered all these agonies, and was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her case should be a warning to others, and her cure carry conviction to the minds of every suffering woman of the unfailing efficiency of Lydia E. PURE BLOOD
AND STRONG NERVES

With glowing health all things are possible, small annoyances fade into nothingness and real troubles are battled with successfully. Women who are blessed with perfect health are a constant joy to themselves and all around them. The beauty which health alone can make permanent is a crown which raises a woman above other women. Such beauty is always accompanied by a sweet disposition, for snappishness is a sure sign of ill-health and leaves its mark quickly on the features.

It seems to be the fashion for women to ignore health and sacrifice it to the little every-day trials, or offer it up on the altar of devotion to daily tasks. Then again the nervous organization of women is constantly attacked by woman's natural experiences, so that it is practically impossible for her to retain the beauty which nature gave her, unless she has discriminating advice and right support.

Dr. Greene's Nervura for the Blood and Nerves.

Trials and troubles are easily overcome by the women whose strength is the genuine strength of perfect health. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, bridges the chasm that separates the sickly woman from happiness. It fills her veins with blood that is pure and clean.

MRS. WM. E. BOSSE, of 85 Farrington St., Flushing, L. I., says:

"In regard to myself, I have suffered for years with disease, having been troubled with great nervousness, female complaints, indigestion, and great weakness and prostration. I did not have strength to do much of anything. Knowing the great value of health and strength I consulted doctors and took many medicines, but they all failed to cure me, and I grew worse rather than better. I happened to see in the papers how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, was doing in restoring to health everybody who took it, and I thought I would try a bottle. I used it and to my surprise I began to gain strength every day. I am so thankful that I tried it! It is certainly the most excellent tonic and strength giver. I recommend it very highly and wish that other people who are troubled in any way would take warning and use it."

TO PRESERVE WOMANLY BEAUTY

At all the stages of a woman's life Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is shown to be efficient to ward off the results of nervousness, or overwork, or impure blood. From early girlhood to advanced years, this world-renowned medicine builds up the forces destroyed by disease, grief, or over-exertion, and the effects of this great medicine are quickly felt and permanently retained. Let women guard well their health, and consult Dr. Greene freely. Nothing they can possibly do will so surely keep them strong and well, or repair the exhaustion from acute illness, nothing will work so continually to the preservation of beauty as the great health-giving Nervura. Dr. Greene's office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, where he may be consulted either by personal call or by letter. Women may write in perfect confidence, and get Dr. Greene's advice free.

FIGURES TELL THE STORY

Great Political Battle Decided in Favor of Republican National Ticket.

McKINLEY AND ROOSEVELT THE VICTORS

Returns From all States Practically Complete--Congress Remains in Republican Control.

Returns from practically all of the states are complete. The figures, though unofficial, leave no room for doubt, except in Kentucky, Idaho and Nebraska. In the two former the chances favor the Democrats, while both parties appear to be equally sanguine of capturing Nebraska. McKinley and Roosevelt are elected by a large popular vote and their vote in the electoral college will be 202, providing Nebraska turns out to have gone Republican.

The Republicans have elected at least 203 congressmen, with a combined opposition of 154, making a Republican majority of 49. In the senate the Republicans will have 56 votes, and the combined opposition, conceding 2 to Nebraska, of 37, making a Republican majority of 16.

The following is the electoral vote, with pluralities:

NEW YORK.

Gives Republican Ticket a Plurality of 145,000.

The official returns, although not quite complete, indicate that McKinley's plurality will be about 145,000. John B. Stanchfield, the Democratic nominee for governor, ran ahead of his party's presidential electors, but Odell's plurality still remains about 100,000. Both houses of the state legislature are Republican by a large majority, but a number of districts are close and it may require the official count to decide in several cases. The congressional representation from this state will consist of twenty-one Republicans and thirteen Democrats.

ILLINOIS

The State Is Republican by About 100,000.

McKinley and Roosevelt will carry Illinois by about 100,000. Yates, for governor, will have nearly as large a vote. Returns received from the state at large do not materially alter the political complexion of the next state legislature. The probability is that the Republicans will have a majority of about twenty-two on joint ballot, which means a Republican successor to Senator Cullom. It is impossible to give figures with strong assurance of accuracy, but the next Illinois legislature will probably be about as follows: Senate, Republicans thirty-four, Democrats seventeen; house, Republicans seventy-nine, Democrats, seventy-four.

INDIANA.

Republicans Win Out by About 30,000.

A plurality of anywhere from 28,000 to 32,000 for the Republican national ticket; the election of Col. W. T. Durbin (Rep.) to the governorship; the election of the entire state and Marion county Republican ticket, nine, and perhaps ten, out of thirteen congressmen, and the election of a legislature that will have a Republican majority of 40 on joint ballot is a summary in brief of the battle at the polls in Indiana.

NEBRASKA.

Result in Doubt With Both Sides Confident.

Election returns in Nebraska are so close as to be watched keenly. Chairman Lindsay of the Republicans claims that McKinley carries the state by 7,000 or more, the Republican state ticket wins by 5,000 to 7,000, and that the [illegible] have a majority of 17 in the legislature. They claim the re-election of Mercer and Burket for congress and the election of Pope, Moreland and possibly of Hayes. Against this the Democrats claim [illegible] carried the state, though by a narrow [illegible] in the legislature; fusion state officers are elected by 3,000 to 5,000.

The legislature will be in doubt until complete returns are in. Indications are that it will be fusion by a small majority. Both parties are claiming the lead on joint ballot.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Full Returns Give McKinley a Plurality of 82,088.

Two Victorious Candidates Felicitate Each Other.

Canton, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Following are the messages exchanged by the president and Vice President-elect Roosevelt:

"Oyster Bay, N. Y., Nov. 6.—President McKinley, Canton, Ohio: I congratulate you and I congratulate far more the nation. I feel the most heartfelt gratitude over the result.

—"Theodore Roosevelt."

"Canton, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, Oyster Bay, N. Y.: I heartily appreciate your kind expressions and congratulate you upon concluding in health one of the most memorable campaigns in our political history.

—"William McKinley."

Telegraphic congratulations were received from hundreds of prominent men. Senator Hanna sent the following:

"Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 7.—The continued confidence of the American people as expressed at the polls yesterday is a tribute to your personality and matchless administration. God bless and keep you for the patriotic purposes to which you have dedicated your life's work.

CANADIAN ELECTIONS.

The Government Is Returned by a Good Majority.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 8.—The result of yesterday's elections show that the government has been successful in securing a majority of from 50 to 70 members on the returns heard from, with 5 districts to hear from. Yesterday's elections were in 208 out of the 213 constituencies of the dominion, and the remaining five will hold their elections at later dates. This, of course, makes it entirely possible that when the elections are completed and when the later returns are received the present apparent majority may be reduced somewhat.

VAN SANT ELECTED

INCOMPLETE RETURNS GIVE HIM A MAJORITY.

Has a Lead of a Little Over 5,000 on The Returns Received — Several Counties Not Yet Heard From—Republicans Claim His Majority Will Be Not Less Than 4,000—Democrats Do Not Concede Lind's Defeat and Say Official Figures Only Can Decide.

St. Paul, Nov. 9.—Returns come in with painful tardiness from some of the counties. Pipestone, Roseau, Itasca and Cook have not yet been heard from. The figures at hand show a plurality for Van Sant for governor of 5,126. The Republicans claim that, allowing wide margins for possible errors and conservative estimates for the counties which have not sent in complete returns, Van Sant's plurality will not fall far below 4,000. For the presidential electors they claim the plurality will be close to 70,000. The returns now in give McKinley 67,591.

Chairman Rosing, of the Democratic central committee, says that he is not by any means prepared to concede the defeat of John Lind. "It is a close fight and it will certainly take the official returns to decide it. We have returns from fifty-nine counties, and the latest returns are in our favor. We still have hopes for Lind's election.

The legislature, as near as can be figured at this writing, will be composed of 91 Republicans and 21 opposition in the house.

WIN IN WISCONSIN

REPUBLICANS CARRY STATE BY ABOUT 106,000.

Robert M. La Follette Keeps Well Up With the Presidential Electors—Few Changes Likely to Be Made in State Offices.

Milwaukee, Nov. 7.—Everything took on its normal condition to-day and there were no signs that an election had been held. The complete figures of the Republican victory in Wisconsin will not be known for perhaps several days, as many of the precincts are far distant from railway stations and will be sent in by mail.

Gen. Bryant, chairman of the Republican state central committee, reduced his claims of plurality slightly from those previously given out, placing his latest estimates at 106,000 for both national and state tickets.

Chairman Worden of the Democratic state committee was at his office attending to the winding up of the affairs of the committee preparatory to closing the headquarters. Speaking of the result in the state he said the stupendous majorities were a surprise to everybody.

The Republican state headquarters will probably remain open until the complete returns have been received. Interest now centers in the appointments which will be made by Gov.-elect Robert M. La Follette. But few changes are likely to be made by the new governor and no changes are talked of in the offices of the other state offices.

The only counties in the state carried by the Democrats were Calumet, Dodge, Jefferson, Manitowoc and Ozaukee.

Gen. Bryant wired to Mr. La Follette in Madison from time to time that he was keeping up with McKinley. In most cases the returns show that the Republican nominees for congress were running about the same as the nominees for president and governor, except in the Second and Fourth districts, where Dahle and Otjen ran somewhat behind the ticket.

The pluralities of the Republican congressmen in the first six districts are First district, A. Cooper, 11,000; Second, Herman Dahle, 2,000; Third, J. W. Babcock, 13000; Fourth, Theodore Otjen, 2,500; Fifth, S. S. Barnay, 6,500; Sixth, J. H. Davidson, 7,000.

The Republicans elected ten assemblymen and the Democrats five in this city. The fight between Otjen and Peck in the Fourth congressional district was a warm one, Otjen winning out by a greatly reduced plurality.

Gen. Bryant, the Republican chairman, says: "We will have a solid congressional delegation, and the state legislature will be overwhelmingly Republican."

Complete returns from Milwaukee county give McKinley a plurality of 8,978, and La Follette (Rep.) for governor a plurality of about the same figures.

The congressmen elected are as follows: First district, Henry A. Cooper, (Rep.); Second district, Herman B. Dahl (Rep.); Third, Joseph W. Babcock, (Rep.); Fourth, Theobald Otjen (Rep.); Fifth, Samuel S. Barney (Rep.); Sixth, James H. Davidson (Rep.); Seventh, John J. Esch (Rep.); Eighth, Edward S. Miner, (Rep.); Ninth, Webster E. Brown (Rep.); Tenth, John J. Jenins (Rep.).

Out of 800 votes Barron county gives a Republican majority of 2,000. The entire Republican county ticket is elected.

WOLCOTT FOR THE CABINET.

It Is Said That He Will Succeed Secretary Hitchcock.

Denver, Nov. 7.—Senator E. C. Wolcott, who will be succeeded by a Democrat at the coming session of the legislature, has been offered and will accept a cabinet portfolio at the hands of President McKinley, it is announced authoritatively. The offer was made some time ago, it is stated, but the senator asked that it be held open until after the election in order that he could work for a vindication at the polls at the hands of Coloradoans. His request was granted, but the vindication he desired failed to materialize. It is understood, however, that he will be named in March next as secretary of the interior in place of E. A. Hitchcock of Missouri. Mr. Hitchcock has been desirous of retiring, it is said, for some time, but has been prevailed upon by the president to remain until the latter's term expires. He will, therefore, resign in March and decline a reappointment.

YELLING FOR YANKEES.

Traders in London Celebrate the Republican Victory.

London, Nov. 7.—There was wild scenes in Shorters' court on the stock exchange, where American railroads are traded in. A few excited brokers assembled there at 8:30 a. m., an hour before the opening, and an eager crowd started an outdoor market at 8:45, yelling for the Yankees. Prices jumped up from 2 to 3 points in less than ten minutes. The trading was fastest in the Atchisons, Louisville and Milwaukees, and was particularly noticeable in Union Pacifics. The stock exchange opened promptly at 9:30 and hundreds of brokers rushed in shouting "Unions." Prices would have risen faster, but the speculators took profits while they could. Atchisons were offered at 36 and then dropped to 35. Then the other stocks went down, but again there was a storm of buying, which turned the tide.

IN NORTH DAKOTA

RETURNS INDICATE A REPUBLICAN PLURALITY OF 12,000.

The State Republican Ticket Is Elected by a Safe Majority—Democrats Concede Everything but Claim Gains in the Legislature — Republicans Are Making Similar Claims.

Fargo, Nov. 8.—The returns from over the state indicate a plurality for McKinley of about 12,000. The state ticket and the congressman-at-large have been elected by good majorities. The Republicans claim gains in the legislature.

The Democratic state officials concede the defeat of everything, claiming only a slight gain in the legislature.

In the state judiciary the returns show the election of Judges Pollock in the Third, Glaspell in the Fifth, Cowan in the Second, Winchester in the Sixth, while the Democrats elected Judge Fisk, who was practically without opposition in the First, and Judge Lauder, in the Fourth. In the Seventh, Candidates Kneeshaw and Spencer both claim a victory, and the result may not be known till complete returns are in.

The city of Fargo gives McKinley a majority of about 650. In 1896 it gave him 241.

Forty-two precincts in North Dakota give McKinley 1,076 majority over Bryan. The same precincts gave McKinley a majority of 501 in 1896.

The city of Bismarck will give McKinley 175 majority. The city of Dickinson gives 185 majority for McKinley and the state ticket. Burleigh county will give the Republican state ticket 300 majority.

Fifteen counties out of forty in North Dakota give McKinley a majority of over 7,000. Some of the figures are: Cass, 1,600; Grand Forks, 1,000; Traill, 1,000; Ramsey, 600; Cavalier, 75; Nelson, 300; Griggs, 100; Walsh, 200; Billings, 100; Sargent, 175; Eddy, 500; Benson, 600; Stark, 300; Pierce, 500.

IN SOUTH DAKOTA

THE STATE IS REPUBLICAN BY ABOUT 20,000.

Reports From Many Counties Show in Detail Where the Big Gains Were Made—Legislature Republican.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 8. — South Dakota has 20,000 majority for the Republican state and national ticket. The legislature, with less than 14 fusionists, is 128 on joint ballot.

Reports from 841 precincts out of 1,150 in South Dakota give McKinley a plurality of 14,144. The Republicans concede only from 15 to 18 members of the legislature to the opposition out of a total of 132.

The vote for Republicans in the Black Hills had some remarkable features. Two-thirds of the votes cast were straight tickets without change. Martin, for congress, has run ahead of the ticket in every county.

Returns show that the fusion party elects for sheriff Elmer King, present sheriff, by about 20 votes, and two county commissioners, giving them complete control of the board. Majorities for Republican legislature about 200, and for McKinley about 400. The latter carried the city and county.

The returns from Codington county give McKinley 600 majority. The Republican legislative ticket is elected by 300 majority. The entire Republican county ticket is elected. This is a Republican gain of 400 over two years ago.

In twenty-two out of forty-two precincts in Minnehaha county, including the cities of Sioux Falls, Dell Rapids, Valley Springs and Garretson, McKinley has a majority of 764 over Bryan, a pronounced Republican gain.

The city of Sioux Falls, complete on vote for president, gives McKinley's plurality 493 over Bryan, a Republican gain of 413 over four years ago.

A dispatch from Milbank says Grant county will give 300 Republican majority.

The Black Hills are believed to be good for 1,000 majority for McKinley. Lead gave 879, Deadwood 72 and the balance of Lawrence county about 350. The congressional and state tickets ran evenly with McKinley.

Sixteen out of forty-two precincts in Beadle county gave McKinley 521, Bryan 235, and the Republican state ticket about the same as McKinley. E. N. Vance, senator, and A. W. Wilwarth and J. P. Davis, representatives, all Republicans, are elected by 150 majority.

Turner county will give McKinley and the Republican ticket 1,000 majority.

KENTUCKY RETURNS COMPLETE

Give Bryan a Majority of 7,635—Talk of a Contest.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 11.—With unofficial returns from every precinct in Kentucky the Courier-Journal puts Bryan's majority at 7,635, and Beckham's at 4,110. The county boards canvassed the returns in every county in the state and 50 counties out of 119 whose official returns have been received did not materially change the majorities in the foregoing. There is no doubt that the full official returns will vary somewhat from the unofficial figures. It is hardly possible that majorities of 7,635 and 4,110 shall be wiped out, however, unless the unexpected happens in the counties where the official returns are not in. Chairman Leslie Combs of the Republican campaign committee said he wished to state his position as to contests, and correct some erroneous impressions. He did not want to be understood as saying authoritatively that the Kentucky election will be contested. He is in favor of contesting the electoral vote of the state not because Kentucky's vote is needed by McKinley electors, but for a precedent. "If we allow this election to pass uncontested," says Chairman Combs, "we only foster more frauds for the future." Mr. Combs says there will be no contest for governor, and he has never advised that the governorship should be contested.

NEBRASKA FOR M'KINLEY.

The Latest Report Is That He Has 7,000 Plurality.

Omaha, Nov. 11. — Practically complete returns on electoral ticket and on governor show that McKinley carried Nebraska by about 7,000, and that the governorship is but a few votes either way and will require the official returns to decide the result. The state ticket will be divided. The fusionists elect lieutenant governor, attorney general and land commissioner and the Republicans auditor, treasurer and superintendent of instruction. The legislature is admitted to be very close.

VAN SANT'S PLURALITY.

Latest Figures Make It 3,903—Two Counties Incomplete.

St. Paul, Nov. 11.—No official figures have yet been received on the gubernatorial election. A careful revision and compilation of the returns received placed Van Sant's plurality at 3,903. It is believed that the official canvas will not vary much from these figures. The returns from Beltrami and Steele counties are incomplete. The Democrats have made a gain of one in the legislature, which now stands Republicans, 90; Democrats, 25.

Acknowledged by McKinley.

Washington, Nov. 11. — President McKinley answered Mr. Bryan's message of congratulation in the following dispatch: "I acknowledge with cordial thanks your message of congratulation and extend you my good wishes.

—"William McKinley."

Gets a Small Plurality.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 11.—Republicans now claim the election of G. W. Wheatley to congress from the Third district by a plurality of 10, without the vote of the soldiers now serving in the Philippines, which they say will be largely for him. This will give the Republicans a solid delegation in congress.

FROSTS IN THE SOUTH

Cause a Considerable Jump in Cotton.

New York, Nov. 11.—The news of killing frost in Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee caused a jump in prices at the cotton exchange of 13 to 17 points, or 65 to 85 cents a bale, accompanied by transactions reaching fully 300,000 bales. The Southern spot market rose 1-16 to 1-8 cent, and Liverpool prices moved up equal to 60 to 75 cents a bale. Many think the growing season is over and that the crop will fall below the world's requirement.

Character In Thighs.

A man's thighs interest me in any mood and at any time. While you may get a man's character from his face, you can, if you will, get his past life from his thigh. It is the walking beam of his locomotion, controls his paddles and is developed in proportion to its uses. It indicates, therefore, a man's habits and his mode of life.

If he has sat all day with one leg lapped over the other, arm on chair, head on hand, listening or studying—preachers, professors and all other sedentaries sit like this—then the thigh shrinks, the muscles droop, the bones of the ankle bulge, and the knee joints push through. If he delivers mail or collect bills or drives a pack mule or walks a towpath, the muscles of the thigh are hauled tight like cables, the knee of knots—one big bunch just below the strap of his knickerbockers, should he wear them.

If he carries big weights on his back—sacks of salt, as do the stevedores in Venice; or coal in gunnies, as do the coolies in Cuba, or wine casks or coffee in bags—then the calves swell abnormally, the thighs solidify; the lines of beauty are lost, but the lines of strength remain.

If, however, he has spent his life in the saddle, rounding up cattle, chasing Indians, hunting bandits in Mexico, ankle and foot loose, his knees clutched tightly, hugging that other part of him, the horse, then the muscles of the thigh round out their intended lines—the most subtle in the modulating curving of the body.—F. Hopkinson Smith in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The Sin Eater.

One of the most important figures at a Gaelic funeral of the old style is the sin eater. It falls to his lot to consume all the sins resting on the soul of the dead, and thereby enable the latter to rest easy in his grave.

In remote Wales and the highlands of Scotland a funeral is not always complete without this functionary. He is necessarily a poor, unfortunate person, for under happier circumstances he could not be persuaded to accept the responsibility of his post, and his part in the ceremony is taken seriously by himself and everybody else.

A loaf of bread and a jug of beer are laid upon the corpse. These are symbolic of sins committed during life. The sin eater is introduced and with much solemnity eats the bread and drinks the beer. As he is frequently a hungry man with a well developed taste for malt liquors, the part is usually played with zest a little out of keeping with the dreadful nature of the obligation assumed, for it is firmly believed that in thus eating and drinking the sin eater actually burdens his soul with the sins of the deceased.—Kansas City Independent.

The Dogskin Wouldn't Go Round.

Hungary swarms with barristers. It is the greatest ambition of the Hungarian peasant to make one of his sons an advocate.

The son of a small farmer in the neighborhood of Budapest was sent by his father to the law school of that town, but, either from lack of parts or the necessary application, he was plucked in the qualifying examination.

Not daring to return to the paternal abode empty handed after all the money that had been spent on his education, he conceived and executed the plan of forging a legal diploma. The father was not, however, so ignorant as not to be aware that such diplomas are always written on parchment—kutya-ber (dogskin)—in Hungary.

"Why is your certificate not made out on kutya-ber?" asked the old man.

"The fact is, father," coolly replied the youth, "there are more barristers than dogs in Hungary, and so there is not enough kutya-ber to make diplomas for us all."—London Answers.

The Too Liberal Use of Salt.

Salt draws the juices from beef in corning, toughens the fiber, makes it very indigestible and less nutritious. On cucumbers it draws out the water, toughens the fiber and renders them very indigestible. Salt acts in exactly the same way on fish as on meat. There are two ways of considering these changes. I would hardly say that salt destroys the food value, although it robs the flesh of part of its food value by making it less digestible.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Brevity of Ballarat.

It was in Ballarat that Mark Twain found the local language so puzzling at first, the good people of the place deeming life too short to dawdle in their talk.

The mayor called on the American humorist and laconically said, "K'm." Then when Mark Twain gave him a cigar he simply said, "Q."

Subsequent inquiry revealed that these terms were Ballaratese for "welcome" and "thank you."—London Chronicle.

What Tips Do.

A man who lives on an up town street where the houses cost from $25,000 up was surprised not long ago by seeing a man known to all New Yorkers who patronize a well known restaurant coming from a house several doors below him with an air of proprietorship. This restaurant employee stood on the sidewalk for a few moments and gazed admiringly at his house and then at its respectable neighbors. For many years he has been connected with a certain New York restaurant as an attendant, and his fees have been generous. He knew all its patrons by name, and his politeness and eagerness to render service have made him well liked. Wondering if this restaurant attendant, whom he knew only by his first name, could by any possibility have rented a house on that street, the old resident came out to satisfy his curiosity.

"Hello," he said. "What are you doing up here?"

"Good morning, Mr. Blank," said the restaurant attendant. "How do you like my new house? I have just bought it because I think that my family will like the neighborhood. You are perhaps aware that my tips have been generous for many years, and I can now afford to live in this house very easily."

His questioner had no objection to him as a neighbor, and he congratulated the restaurant attendant on his prosperity. The house had actually been bought by tips, for its owner's salary probably averaged about $15 a week.—New York Sun.

New Old Jokes.

"Is there any new joke under the sun?" asks George Augustus Sala, an English journalist and special correspondent.

"I doubt there being one very gravely," he answers and tells two anecdotes to support this skepticism.

An intelligent Greek who acted as Mr. Sala's guide while visiting Athens related to him as a modern Greek Joe Millerism the story of a lawsuit. A deaf plaintiff sued a deafer defendant before the deafest judge in all Greece. The plaintiff claimed so many hundred drachmas for rent that was due. The defendant pleaded that he never ground his corn at night. The judge in giving judgment observed: "Well, she's your mother, after all. You must keep her between you."

"When I got home I found," writes Mr. Sala, "this apparently up to date triad of ludicrous non sequiturs in a collection of ancient Greek epigrams."

There used to be told a story of Sheridan Knowles, the dramatist, who was a first rate hand at Irish bulls, meeting one of twin brothers and asking him, "Which of ye is the other?"

Mr. Sala compares this with the story of that very ancient jester, Hierocles:

"Of twins, one died. Skolastikos, meeting the survivor, asked him, 'Was it you who died or your brother?'"—Youth's Companion.

A Practical Joke.

He was a wag and was passing a large draper's shop in Manchester. There, drawn up, were three or four vehicles, and among them was a closed brougham with the driver fast asleep on the box. Evidently the mistress was inside the shop. Without a word the wag stole quickly up and, opening the carriage door, carefully slammed it to. In an instant the coachman straightened himself up and gazed up the street as if he had never seen anything more interesting to look at in his life. Then he stole a look over his shoulder and saw the wag standing, hat in hand, apparently conversing with some one inside the carriage.

"Thank you, yes. Good morning," said the practical joker and bowed himself gracefully away from the door, turning as he did so to look at the coachman and say, "Home!"

"Yes, sir! Tch! Get up!" and away went the brougham "home."

Where that "home" was, who the mistress of the carriage was or what she did or said when she came out of the shop or what the coachman did or said when he stopped at the door of "home" and found the carriage empty—all that only the coachman and the lady know.—London Tit-Bits.

A Clever Blind Man.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat tells of a blind man in a southern city who goes to the postoffice every day carrying a small, light riding whip, which he holds slightly inclined to the front, with the tip just touching the pavement. His sense of touch has become so delicate that the whip is almost an artificial eye. When the point encounters anything, he makes a few swift passes over the surface and generally determines the exact character of the obstacle. It is done so quickly and deftly as to attract no attention, and few passers have the least suspicion of the old man's infirmity. When he reaches the postoffice, he turns unhesitatingly, mounts the middle stairs, walks over to the lock boxes and without any feeling around thrusts a key into the right aperture.

Anxious Only About One Thing.

The ghastly rider on the white horse stopped at the gate.

"I am Death," he said to the sick man who was watching from the window.

"You are welcome," replied the latter and added in a whisper: "If you value your life, don't let my wife see you tying your horse to that tree. She'd never let anybody do that."—Philadelphia Press.

No Shattered Ideals.

"So she has gone home to her mother, has she? Don't you know, it's the saddest thing on earth to think of a trusting, fond woman awakening to find her ideals have been shattered, that she loves him no longer, that her idol has feet of clay"—

"Oh, there was nothing of that sort in it. She loves him as well as ever, but she went back to ma because she was hungry."—Indianapolis Press.

Vigilance.

Stubb—Is that new prison guard vigilant?

Penn—I should say so. Why, some one told him the gas was escaping, and he grabbed his gun.—Chicago News.

Answered.

"A fool can ask more questions than a wise man can answer." "Ain't that so? I can't answer you."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Speech That Made a Hit.

Edward Hanlan, ex-champion oarsman of the world, related a good story of how he delivered a speech after winning his second race in England. His first victory had found him unprepared. He was ready for his second with a speech composed for him by a newspaper friend neatly copied out on paper and stored away for use in his coat pocket.

When the crowd outside the clubhouse insisted upon seeing and hearing the winner, he was helped out upon a window ledge by his friends and held there by the coattails and the legs. The crowd cheered him wildly. He was too confused to speak. They cheered him again. He threw out his hand in a gesture of helplessness and moved his lips in some inaudible mumble of apology for his inability to deliver a speech. They could not hear on account of the noise that they were themselves making, but they encouraged him with a generous applause. He saw his escape and proceeded to shake his head and work his lips in a fine frenzy of oratory, gesticulating eloquently and smiling his thanks. The noisy and good natured crowd cheered him to the echo, and his friends drew him in from his precarious position on the window ledge.

"You carried that crowd along in style," they congratulated him. "What did you say? We couldn't hear you." "Yes. Give us an idea of your speech," the reporters put in, drawing out their notebooks.

Hanlan took the manuscript from his pocket. "Here's the whole thing," he said. "Do you want it all?"

"Well, rather," they answered. "That speech made a hit."—Argonaut.

Why He Carries a Cane.

"You wonder why I always carry a cane except when I am carrying an umbrella," remarked a well known Philadelphian the other afternoon. "Well, I don't mind telling you. It's all on account of umbrellas."

"Can't see the connection," rejoined the friend to whom he was talking.

"Didn't suppose you could. But you will when I have explained. You lose an umbrella every once in awhile, don't you? Put it down somewhere and walk off and leave it?"

"Yes; I have had that happen to me frequently."

"Well, I used to, but not since I took to carrying a cane. An acquaintance in Chicago put me on to the scheme. 'Get a cane of some kind,' he said to me one day, 'and carry it every day and every night that it doesn't rain. By that means you become so accustomed to having something in your hand you are lost without it. Then when a rainy day or evening comes and you are compelled to carry an umbrella about with you the benefit comes in. Say you have gone into a restaurant and when you come out the rain has stopped. You walk out into the street without your umbrella. Presto! After you have taken perhaps a dozen steps you miss something. Your cane carrying hand is minus the burden it usually bears. Back go your thoughts to your umbrella and back go your steps to get it. Simple? Of course it is, but the simple things oftentimes prove the most valuable."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Four Legged Weather Prophets.

Though the tortoise is an excellent weather prophet, the fact is known to comparatively few people. Tortoise farmers on the African coast notice that even 24 hours before rain falls these curious animals prepare for it by seeking the convenient shelter of overhanging rocks. It may be a bright, clear, sunshiny morning, but the farmers believe implicitly in the tactics of the tortoise, who is seldom mistaken, for the downpour is certain to come within the time stated.

A pet tortoise would be a practical present to bestow on one's friends. This curious premonition of the approach of rain is shared by many other animals and birds and may be explained partially by the fact that while rain is forming the atmosphere is increasing in weight, but there may also be some need of moisture which makes them aware of its approach or some habits of life [illegible] them [illegible] sensitive [illegible]

John Christie, a faithful employee at the mill for the past three seasons will leave to-day for his homestead in the town of Equality.

Al. Lehman, the machinest, left yesterday for his home at Minneapolis. He will return again about the first part of February.

And still another party gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Knowles last evening and dancing was the order of the evening.

At one time last week it was currently reported that a contest would follow the election—but the thing simmered down to "will it pay."

A surprise party had things their own way last Thursday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Post. They all had a good time.

Arnt Peterson was given a surprise at his home in the Kruse residence Sunday evening. A pleasant evening was spent by the jolly party.

Dr. Henry Francis has not sold out his practice in Thief River Falls as reported. He is still at liberty to attend to his old friends or new ones.

The dance given at the Hotel St. Hilaire Saturday evening was largely attended and the usually good time reported by all who were present.

This week the Pastors of the Crookston district of the United Norwegian church hold their semi-annual conference in the church on Water street.

Will Ford has his crew busily engaged in sluicing logs over the dam north of here and is in hopes of getting them all over before the river freezes up.

The Guttormson family have again taken up their residence in St. Hilaire after spending the summer at Grand Forks. They returned last Thursday.

A great many of the mill men who have put in the summer here departed yesterday for Minneapolis. Most of them say they will return again next spring.

The St. Hilaire Boom and Water Power Company will want from 200 to 400 cords of rock delivered in the village this winter for improvements on the dam.

Arne Skeie was compelled to give up his school near Tweet (for a time at least) and returned home Monday for the purpose of doctoring a bad case of rheumatism.

Foreman Burse of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company left Saturday for the pine districts where he was summoned to look after some business matters for the Company.

The St. Hilaire cornet band will give a dance at the dining room of the Hotel St. Hilaire, on Thanksgiving night Thursday November 29th. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

The social season in St. Hilaire must have opened as soon as the polls were closed judging from the number of party's held last week—as from one to three were held each evening.

Death claimed two notables on Monday—that of Marcus Daly, the well known Montana millionaire, who died in New York and Henry Villard the railroad magnate and financier.

Rev. J. H. Lawrence of Stephen, Minnesota, will preach in English next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Norwegian church on Water street. All are cordially invited to attend.

C. G. Rapp, who will represent the 61st district in the legislature this winter, left Monday on a business trip to Crookston and other points along the Duluth line. He was accompanied by Congressman Eddy.

It was the "solid south" that beat Johnson. No party lines drawn south of the "Mason Dixon" line so to speak; It was Red Lake Falls mar, first, last and all the time regardless of what party they belonged to.

Rev. Dr. Dodds the new presiding elder will conduct the quarterly conference on Saturday evening next at 8 o'clock. He will preach in the M. E. church on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock All are cordially invited.

Congressman Eddy spent a few hours here Monday while enroute to Thief River Falls where he went presumably to lay plans for opening the reservation—as that was his "holler" in this neck of the woods before election.

Ole T. Axvig, of North Dakota, but better known as "I ban har" was again elected by the republicans as representative. The boys at Bismark will again have lots of fun this winter—same as they had some twelve years ago.

Andy McNabb, who has held down a position in the mill here for the past two years, and by the way a man who can shove more lath in ten hours than anyone living in the lumbering regions left Thursday for Mesaba where he will spend the winter. Andy promises to return again next season.

Fresh oysters in any style at A. F. Lang's.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Keenan will leave next Monday for Seattle, Washington, where they will make their future home. Dan is considered an old resident here and will be greatly missed in the shipping department when the mill starts as he was a familiar figure in that department during the past three seasons. The SPECTATOR joins with their many friends in wishing them well wherever they may go.

The large mill of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company closed down Monday night after a successful run throughout the entire open season. They have again for the third time played in the best of luck as they have run the entire season without an accident or breakdown which no doubt is largely due to the able management of such practical men as Superintendent Miller and his assistant, Wm. Burse as well as a few others that we might name. The output of lumber for this season is in the neighborhood of forty million feet. Next years cut promises to be a heavy one as they have on hand about twenty million feet of logs and the mill will be put in operation as soon as the weather will permit.

Most democrats are rather glad than otherwise that the republicans secured the control of the House along with the Presidency. As Tom Reed remarked when the democrats met with similar success, "Let the tail go along with the hide." If the democrats had elected a majority of the next House, the republicans would have made use of that control to sneak out of responsibility for everything that was done or left undone during the first two years of Mr. McKinley's second term. With the President, the Senate and the House they must accept full responsibility both for what is done and what is left undone, which cannot fail to be beneficial to the democratic party in the end.

"Would you like a standing advertisement?" asked the editor. "Oh, I only want an item," was the response. "Would you like to subscribe for the paper?" "Well no; I am taking all I can read now, I may take yours when some of them runs out." The next day the editor wanted two spokes put in his buggy wheel and dashboard fixed. He went to the shopkeeped and said, "You can fix this buggy if you want a job to keep you busy." The shopkeeper looked it over and said, "The spokes will be fifty cents each and the dashboard one dollar making two dollars for the necessary repairs." "But," said the scribe, "I don't intend to pay anything for it. I thought you might want to fill up your time, just an item, you know."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Corresndent

As soon as they were sure that Mr. McKinley was re-elected the republicans began the squabble over the official plums of the next administration and it is likely to grow hotter and hotter until the distribution is made. At least four members of the Cabinet are slated for voluntary retirement. Attorney General Griggs, whose extensive trust practice was said to be worth something like $100,000 a year to him when he resigned the governorship of New Jersey to enter the Cabinet because of the relations between him and the late Vice President Hobart, is anxious to quit public life and get rich; Secretary Long who already has a fortune, wishes to retire and take things easy; Postmaster General Smith is said to prefer returning to his editorial desk to remaining in public life, and Secretary Hay has not enjoyed his public position since he was so harshly and generally criticized for being overfriendly with England and the English. Secretaries Gage, Hitchcock and Wilson will, according to current gossip, be members of the new cabinet. Perry Heath, who so strongly endorsed Neely, the Cuban postal fund thief, and who resigned the position of First Assistant Postmaster General to become Secretary of the republican national committee and Hanna's personal representative in the management of the campaign, is said to have told friends that he would be Postmaster General under the second McKinley administration, unless he concluded not to accept the portfolio. If he isn't Postmaster General it will not be because he declines to accept. That much may be set down as certain.

The Girl and Her Vocation.

"The future wage-earning girl should have in her mind during the latter part of her school life the selection of her profession," writes Margaret E. Sangster in the November Ladies' Home Journal. "I think it well for her, too, very quietly, but with intention, to cast about among her friends for suggestions, to ask the kind officers of one and another, and to make known her need of immediate employment so soon as she leaves school. Many good positions are lost because of indecision, or false pride, or unwise reticence on the part of those who seek them. The mental attitude of the girl in search of employment should be neither indifferent nor patronizing; she should set in motion every legitimate means, and let those who may be able to assist her know something of her situation. They can help, and she can seek with much greater hope of success if the goal in view be something definite."

HELPED THE CHIEF.

How a Loyal Engineer Did His Brother Great Service.

Meadville, Pa., Nov. 12.—(Special)—The Loyalty of the Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is proverbial. A circumstance occurred in this city some days ago, which emphasizes this feeling.

Frank J. Zeller, is Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers No. 143. He is extremely popular among his fellow railway men, and one of the best known Engineers running out of Meadville. When the announcement was made a short time ago that Frank was pretty sick, it caused a great deal of regret among the boys. Soon he was missed from his engine, having had to "lay off" on account of his back. A brother of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who had been ill with similar symptoms, some time before, and who had been pulled through, called to see Mr. Zeller, and in a brotherly way, took with him a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the Remedy which had cured him. He advised Mr. Zeller to try them, with the result that after seven boxes had been used, he was entirely well, and able to work.

In an interview Mr. Zeller states:

"I had suffered for four years with this affliction, being often kept awake at night with pains, and at times unable to work. I tried several of the advertised remedies, and found that they did me no earthly good. Finally, a member of our Order, who had been cured of Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills brought me a box, and asked me to try them. I had little faith in them, but as a drowning man grasps at a straw to help him, so I took the Pills. I used seven boxes, and am today as well and strong a man as there is in Pennsylvania."

Naturally, Mr. Zeller feels very grateful, and his complete recovery has delighted his many friends, and none more than the good Brother, who feels that he was instrumental in saving the life of the Chief.

The Nominee.

BY WM. PERRY BROWN.

(Copyrighted, 1900, Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Colonel Shoobooter, of Kanawha, was known as a man of eminently valorous parts in the locality which he had ornamented with his presence for many years. In questions pertaining to gentlemanly honor he was considered to be so completely au fait, as it were, that his decisions were greatly respected. In fact, what the colonel thought he did not know about "the code," the best style of duelling weapon, and the cleanly art of snuffing a candle at ten paces, might be easily stowed under the cranium of a flea.

When, therefore, he announced himself as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the predominant political party of his county, in convention assembled, his nomination and election began to be looked on as a foregone conclusion.

"Fine man, Shoobooter! Dead shot, suh! Good specimen of the Kentucky gentleman—be our next member, or he'll know the reason why, suh."

These and other kindred remarks were to be heard here and there from party wheelhorses.

When, therefore, he read in the "Kanawha Bull's Eye" a precisely similar announcement directly below his own by an audacious new-comer, signing himself Andrew Jackson Prock, the colonel's military whiskers curled with indignation.

Who was this upstart with the cribbed distinguished prefix to his very plebian surname? Inquiry developed that the gentleman lived down near Choogaloo, that he was agent for some powder mills, that he stored his wares in an isolated building adjoining—actually adjoining—a farm belonging to the great Shoobooter himself.

"Why, the fellow hasn't been here two years," quoth the colonel to his daughter Climeena, just returned from a long sojourn at an aunt's at Choogaloo. "I dare say he can not handle even a Winchester——"

"He seems to handle powder all right," she returned.

"In a low, trading sense, perhaps," commented the man of honor. "But are the people of Kanawha to vote for a fellow who crams his powder into kegs instead of gun barrels?"

"It might sell better, you know."

"Sell better!" snorted the pater familias; "the base commercialism of the age is poisoning even a maiden mind. That is one result of too many Procks, my dear. Ha! I will go down and publicly interrogate this fellow, who dares to store his explosives near my property. If I don't make him crawfish out of this nomination into one of his own powder barrels, I—I—"

"Well, pa, when I was down at aunty's Mr. Prock 'lowed he expected to get delegates enough to—"

"Climeena!" The colonel glared as well as thundered. "What do you know about this Andy Prock?" he finally demanded, a query which his daughter dodged by improvising a sudden hurry call kitchenward.

The following day Colonel Shoobooter rode over to Choogaloo, arriving in front of the postoffice as the mail was being distributed. A trim, alert-looking, youngish man stood on the sidewalk, reading his letters, one of which concluded as follows:

"The only, only chance for you to gain pa's consent is not to give way to him, to out-do him, to let him know you are what Kanawha calls 'dead game.' He isn't so very awful, after all, though folks think he is. Now you do as I say—that is, if you hope to marry.

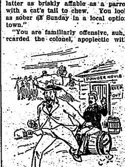
"CLIMEENA SHOOBOOTER."

"P. S.: He don't know a thing, and he'd fairly lift the roof off if he did. I leave you to manage it."

"Mr. Prock, I believe," mumbled the colonel as he rode up, halted his mule and stared grimly at the young man, who pushed his correspondence into his pocket.

"Why howdy, Shoobooter!" said the latter as briskly affable as a parrot with a cat's tail to chew. "You look as sober as Sunday in a local option town."

"You are familiarly offensive, suh," rcarded the colonel, apoplectic with sudden color. "What the devil do you mean by addressing me in such a style?"



As the fuse shortened to an inch or to the colonel sprang up.

"Because you spoke to me first. I'm not particular about my acquaintances just now," and his wink hinted of politics.

"Is that intended as an insult, suh?"

"Oh, I don't know. When a man is looking for insults he's apt to find one laying around loose."

A crowd was gathered to see Andrew Jackson Prock artistically carved, perforated, macerated.

"Well, suh, I will not bandy words further than to say that you are a low, offensive fellow. I repeat, a low, offensive fellow!"

"All right, Shoobooter, just as you say; not that I care, though."

"Confound your impudence! Why don't you put a handle to my name?"

"Didn't know you cared. Colonels are too thick around here to be very particular, anyhow."

"You hear this man?" The colonel looked around him. "Well, he's got to fight or take a whipping, that's all."

Mr. Prock lighted a cigar and puffed briskly in his would-be father-in-law's face.

"All right, Shoobooter," said [illegible] "Fight you my way. As the challenged party I suppose I may name time, place, weapons—eh, gentlemen?"

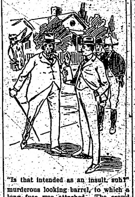
The crowd assented. Shoobooter would wipe him out, of course; so why not let the poor devil choose the time and manner of his own execution? He be the party's candidate? Wait until the colonel had sampled the powder man's fitness in the good old Kanawha way. With such methods, little doubt was there as to whom the nominee would be. Not Andrew Jackson Prock, certainly, though impudence was in the eye of him as he concluded:

"Now, Shoobooter, you're only a big blow, and I'll prove it to the crowd if you'll fetch 'em along. At 4 o'clock this afternoon, right in front of my powder house, I'll be there, and the weapons 'll be ready. So long!"

He sauntered off, leaving the crowd puzzled. The colonel was red with indignation, as he exclaimed:

"It's a put up job, gentlemen. But I'll see it through. He'll crawfish out somehow when we toe the mark."

So they all went at 4 p. m., to find Mr. Prock seated astride one end of a murderous looking barrel, to which a long fuse was attached. The crowd backed off discreetly, keeping a wary eye also on the powder house. The colonel stood as if paralyzed.



"Is that intended as an insult, suh?"

"Sit down on the other end, Shoobooter," called the young Hickory Prock cheerily. "Get away farther, boys. This is a square deal, and I don't want anybody hurt but me and this gingerbread colonel here. Why don't you sit down, Shoobooter? 'Fraid?"

The colonel groaned, braced himself, then sat cautiously down on the extreme end of the barrel.

"This is not duelling, suh," he remonstrated. "It's—it's—"

"Come, come, Shoobooter!" interrupted Prock, taking out his match box. "I didn't 'low you'd back down so soon. Sit up close; let's be sociable for the minute or so we've got left. I heard you was a dead shot; I ain't. Thought I'd fix it so's we'd both have a show."

"But this is murder, massacre—"

"Still afraid? Well, well! And a Kanawha colonel, too. Never mind; here goes." Mr. Prock leaned over, fired the fuse, then calmly applied the remainder of the match to a cigar. "One minute more, colonel (puff, puff) before we go up. St-e-a-dy, Shoobooter! Hanged if I ever saw such an uncertain man before."

As the colonel watched the spitting fuse shorten his vaunted courage oozed away. To shoot and be shot at was one thing; to sit and be passively blown up was another. Prock sucked away as if he rather enjoyed it. By this time the crowd was mostly out of hearing. As the fuse shortened to an inch or two the colonel sprang up, uttered a yell of fear, mounted his mule and galloped off.

"Stop him boys," shouted Prock, putting out the fuse and producing a tin cup or two. As the crowd slowly returned, without capturing the colonel, however, the powder man whirled the barrel around, revealing a hitherto concealed faucet from which he drew something that diffused a pleasing, pungent and familiar aroma.

"What's that?" asked one as the crowd sniffed approvingly.

"Good red liquor," said Andrew Jackson Prock. "Do you suppose I'm fool enough to sit on a barrel of powder? If Shoobooter is I ain't, and he didn't seem to rest himself much, either. Drink hearty, boys—it's on me this time. Mebbe the colonel will show up at the convention, but I dunno; I dunno; he seemed to be in a powerful hurry."

They drank and drank. Then they rolled on the grass as the fun of the thing took deeper hold. But from that hour the Shoobooter reputation began to wane. Prock got the nomination. More than that, when he came round electioneering the colonel literally took to the woods. But he left a substitute on the front piazza, who said:

"Looks like you've scared pa off, but you can't run me."

Thereupon, unlike his great namesake, Candidate Prock ignominiously surrendered.

Timber on the Road.

Public roads in California for travel are often established by application to a court of competent jurisdiction after view, report and confirmation. Once established, they pass into the control and supervision of the township, county or other local authorities and are kept in repair by local taxation. By the common law, the fee of the soil remains in the original owner with the use of the road in the public. If vacated by the public he resumes exclusive possession of the ground. While used as a highway he is entitled to the timber and grass upon the surface and to all minerals below it. He may sue in trespass any one who obstructs the road, but the law is otherwise if he parts with the fee.

Proportion of Lawyers Increases.

In 1790 there were less than 3,000 lawyers in a total population of 4,000,000, or one to every 1,333 persons. In 1850 the ratio was about one in 1,000. The census of 1890 shows one lawyer to every 703 inhabitants, and that of 1900, Mr. Mayer predicts, will show a proportion of about one to 600.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

ST. VITUS' DANCE

Three great and complete cures effected by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

LULU FERRE
CORA LEARMOUTH
GRACIE BAILEY

Mrs. J. A. Ferre, who resides near 905 Main Street, Hartford, Conn., says:

"My daughter Lulu became very ill with St. Vitus' dance over a year ago. She became so bad that she lost the use of her right arm and side, and we thought at one time she would lose her speech. Her tongue was almost paralyzed. She was so bad she could not feed herself, and at night she would get so nervous I had to sit and hold her. I tried several doctors, but they did not do her any good. I did not find anything that would help her until I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. She is now, by the use of this medicine, entirely cured."

C. H. Bailey, Esq., of Waterbury, Vt., writes:

"I am more than glad to write about my little daughter. Until a short time ago she had always been a very delicate child and subject to sick spells lasting weeks at a time. She was very nervous, and our family doctor said we would never raise her, she was so delicate and feeble. We tried many remedies without the least good. We felt much anxiety about her, especially as no doctors could benefit her, and had great fear for her future. Learning of the wonders being done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to give it to her. She soon commenced to improve under its use, and rapidly gained in every respect. She eats and sleeps well, and her nerves are strong. The medicine has done wonders for her and it is the best we ever knew. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to everybody."

Mrs. J. Learmouth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., says:

"At ten years of age my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack. The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak, her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk. She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old and has been well ever since and to-day is a picture of health." [illegible]

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

June 12th, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

IS SHORT $200,000

BANK IS CLOSED BY A UNITED STATES EXAMINER.

Individual Bookkeeper Is Missing and It Is Said That His Accounts Show a Shortage of Over $200,000—Exposure of the Alleged Shortage Causes a Panic—Missing Man Said to Have Led a Fast Life With Wine, Women and Gambling in His Repertoire.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19. — United States Bank Examiner Tucker yesterday took possession of the German National Bank of Newport, Ky., and posted a notice that the bank would remain closed pending an examination. Examiner Tucker also announced that Frank Brown, the individual bookkeeper and cashier, was missing, and that a partial investigation showed that Brown was short about $201,000. Brown had been with the bank eighteen years, was one of the most trusted men ever connected with this old bank, and it is stated by the experts that his operations extended back as far as ten years. The capital stock of the bank is only $100,000. Brown's alleged shortage is double that amount and more than the reserve and all the assets, including their real estate. For two weeks there have been rumors that Brown was short and some depositors withdrew their accounts. Three weeks ago the bank examiners made a good statement for the bank and the officers and directors allayed suspicion by referring to the report of this examination and to their last statement. Last Wednesday Brown left and it was announced that he had gone hunting on a vacation. He did get a ticket for Odin, Ill., but it is learned now that he did not go there, and it is generally believed that he with plenty of money in his possession. It is learned that Brown was suspended last Tuesday pending an investigation, and that experts have been at work all the past week while the officers and directors have been making announcements that everything was all right. Last Friday the officers and directors, over their own names published in the papers of this city a statement that the bank had been found to be all right and that the rumors about Brown were false. They continued making these statements to the press as late as Saturday midnight, but the statements were not accepted by the Commercial-Tribune, which exposed the alleged shortage and caused a panic in Newport yesterday so that the bank had to be taken in charge by the examiner. The wildest scenes were witnessed in Newport yesterday and serious trouble is feared to-day.

Brown, it is alleged, was living a fast life, with wine, women and gambling in his repertoire. His career was not cut short by any discovery at the bank until a jealous woman gave him away. Brown is a widower with a son aged ten years who lives with Brown's father, Paris C. Brown, ex-mayor of Newport, and one of the leading business men of Cincinnati. Brown, it is said, wrote to a woman in Cincinnati that he was bound for South America, but the Enquirer says that it has good authority for saying that Brown sailed from New York on Saturday and that his destination is China.

INSURGENTS VICTORIOUS.

They Win Several Recent Fights in Colombia.

Kingston, Jam., Nov. 19.—The British steamer Atrato, Capt. Copp, which left Southampton Oct. 17 for Barbadoes, has arrived here from Colon, Colombia. Capt. Copp reports that the insurgents had gained several important victories the fortnight that preceded his departure, and that when he left Colon they were marching in force against Panama, where the stores had been closed in momentary expectation of attack. He says the three-masted schooner Marie Isabelle was ordered to leave Colon on Thursday because she had a cargo of gunpowder which the Colombian authorities believed was intended for the rebels, although it was consigned to a neighboring republic. It appears also from Capt. Copp's statement that business in Colombia is generally at a standstill and that the military difficulties of the situation are complicated by an outbreak of yellow fever, rapidly approaching the proportions of an epidemic at Port Limon and Bocas del Torro.

MAKES EVERY ARMOR USELESS.

New Naval Gun Proves Itself Able to Pierce Any Steel Plates for Ships.

Washington, Nov. 19.—The tests of the new twelve-inch naval gun within the last three days have resulted in some remarkable performances, entitling the gun to rank ahead of any of the twelve-inch guns thus far made in this country or abroad. With a charge of 360 pounds of smokeless powder, giving a pressure of sixteen and one-half tons per square inch the gun gave a muzzle velocity of 2,854 feet. Prof. Alger, the naval expert, says this is the highest ever attained by a twelve-inch gun, the record thus far ranging from 2,500 to 2,600 feet. With an 850-pound steel-tipped projectile the big gun would pierce any armor ever made.

SENATOR DAVIS WORSE.

Dr. Stone's Bulletin Is Less Reassuring.

St. Paul, Nov. 19.—Less reassuring was the only bulletin issued yesterday regarding Senator Davis. At 9:15 o'clock last night Dr. Stone announced the following:

"Senator Davis passed a very bad night; was restless and slightly delerious. Temperature this morning was 100 2-5; pulse, 106; respiration 28. Through the day to-day he has been feeling easier, but is again restless and partly delirious to-night. Temperature to-night, 99; pulse, 116; respiration, 28. —Alex J. Stone."

During the afternoon, however, it was said at the senator's house that he was certainly better than he was a week ago yesterday. For it was that night that he first exhibited signs of the kidney complication which was at once declared dangerous. The senator sat up in bed yesterday, and was even able to smoke two cigars in the course of the day. His appetite continued excellent for one so ill. He accepted considerable nourishment.

GAME LAW ENFORCED.

Party of Hunters From Indiana Heavily Fined in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Nov. 19. — People who came to Wisconsin to hunt, believing that the game laws are passed just for fun soon discover their mistake if they go into the woods without a license. William Salmon, Emmons Salmon, G. W. Harness, J. W. Galesberry and Dr. Haight of Kokomo, Ind., went into Vilas county to hunt deer. They made all the necessary preparations for the trip, taking guns, ammunition, food and camping outfits, but they either forgot to buy licenses or believed it did not make any difference in a wild and wolly county. But the game wardens are vigilant, and the hunters who pay licenses are also vigilant, consequently when a hunter discovers that some one is killing game when he has no legal right to do so, a warden is informed if one can be found. The Kokomo party contributed $250 to the expenses of the game warden's department of the state government, the fines being $50 each, together with the costs. There never has been so much big game in Wisconsin, and this is due to the fact that the deer and bears have been well protected.

GOPHERS' CLEAN VICTORY.

Northwestern Defeated by Score of 21 to 0.

Minneapolis, Nov. 19.—Victory is again Minnesota's, and by the convincing score of 21 to 0. Northwestern's gritty and clever football players could not stand against the terrific charges of the big North Star men, though they played a splendid game and used their heads in every play. The dash and brilliance of the Northwestern team at the outset astonished the rooters for the Gophers. Elliott and Johnson, the Evanstonian ends, caused frequent gasps for breath on the part of the 3,000 Minnesotans who were out to see the game despite the cold and threatening weather. This was only in the early part of the first half, however. The grand stand before long discovered that Minnesota was playing one of the fastest games of the season. Hoyt and Aune showed a speed quite equal to that exhibited by Johnson and Elliott. Northrop field had seen nothing of the kind before this fall.

DRANK CARBOLIC ACID.

Actor's Wife Attempts to End Her Troubles.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 19.—After brooding over family troubles and financial difficulties for a long time Mrs. Lizzie Sommers, wife of Perry Sommers, an actor at the Sixth Avenue theater, tried to end her life by swallowing a quantity of carbolic acid. The woman was alone in the room at the time and drank some of the poison from a bottle. She then uttered a series of fearful screams and her two children ran to her side. "I don't know why I did it," said she when her daughter asked her the cause of the rash act. A doctor was summoned who worked energetically over his patient for some time before she was out of danger.

DRIVES MOTOR MILES AWAY.

Novel Feat Performed by a Western Power Company.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 19.—The Snoqualmie Falls Power company of this city has performed a novel feat in the driving of an electric motor 153 miles distant from the generator. All the transmission lines of the company were called up in one continuous circuit commencing at Snoqualmie Falls, running to Seattle, back to the falls, then to Tacoma and back again to the falls. The regular transmission is 32 miles to Seattle and 44 miles to Tacoma.

FIRE AT OSHKOSH.

Dry Kiln of the Paine Lumber Company Is Burned.

Oshkosh, Wis., Nov. 19.—The building forming part of the extensive plant of the Paine Lumber company and known as the dry kiln, which was filled with a fine grade of lumber, was totally destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at $75,000; insurance, $40,000. The origin of the fire is unknown. The structure will be rebuilt.

BOTH SIDES ACTIVE

REBELS AND AMERICANS RESUME OPERATIONS.

Termination of Rains Brings About a Considerable Increase in Activity—Americans Undertaking a Series of Aggressive Movements Against the Insurgents — Rebels Continually Shooting Into Garrisoned Towns—Gen. Grant's Force Has a Lively Fight With the Enemy.

Manila, Nov. 19.—This is the first uncensored news by cablegram since the American occupation:

Last week witnessed a very considerable increase in rebel and American activity. There was much skirmishing and a few engagements in Southern Luzon. The termination of the rains permits a resumption of operations on both sides. The Americans are undertaking a series of aggressive movements against the insurgents, notably upon the Island of Samar, against Gen. Lukban, whose forces hold the entire island with the exception of three coast towns, each of which is garrisoned by two companies of the Twenty-ninth infantry and a platoon of artillery. The rebels are continually shooting into the garrisoned towns and our forces have not been sufficient to retaliate effectively. Commerce in Samar has been at a standstill and many inhabitants have departed. Gen. Hare has arrived there with 250 men. He will bring eight companies of the Twenty-fifth infantry from the Island of Manadarque, as they may be needed, and will proceed energetically to crush Gen. Lukban. Meanwhile United States gunboats will patrol the coast to of the insurgent leaders. Lukban still holds three members of the Forty-third regiment prisoners. Gen. Wheaton, commanding in the department of Northern Luzon, is sending reinforcements to Gen. Young's provinces, where the natives under Gen. Tinio and Aglipia, the excommunicated Filipino priest, are showing signs of restlessness, deserting the domiciles they have occupied during the rainy season and joining, under compulsion the forces of the insurgents in the mountains. Notable among the week's engagements was Gen. Grant's advance with Maccabebe and American scouts upon a rebel stronghold thirty-five miles north of Manila, which was defended by 200 insurgents armed with rifles. After skirmishing and fighting for the greater part of the day and night the enemy was dislodged from the mountain fastness and immense quantities of rice and stores with ammunition were destroyed. Fifty Filipinos were killed and many others wounded. The insurgents carried off their dead. The American loss was eleven privates and one officer wounded and one Maccabebe killed.

WILL SOON BE COMPLETED.

Minister Conger Takes a Hopeful View of the Negotiations.

Pekin, Nov. 17, via Shanghai, Nov. 19. —The belief that the note of the powers to the Chinese commissioners, Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang, will be completed soon is strengthened by the results of the recent informal conferences of the ministers of the powers. Mr. Conger, the United States minister said to a correspondent of the Associated Press to-day:

"The situation is apparently very favorable to the early beginning of negotiations for a preliminary settlement. I believe the next meeting of the foreign envoys will virtually settle all points of difference between the representatives of the powers, who will lose no time in presenting their demands. What the result will be it is impossible to foretell. Events have placed China in a very critical position. Whether she will be able to preserve her integrity and to save her trade, relations with the rest of the world will depend upon what the powers determine upon in the final settlement and upon her willingness to accept promptly the conditions proposed. It is quite unlikely if not impossible that the Chinese court will return to Pekin before next spring, but I do not anticipate any serious delay in the progress of the negotiations with the Chinese commissioners as they are in telegraphic communication with the court."

Military operations are virtually at a standstill. The German and Italian expeditions northward passed through the Nankau pass unopposed.

BOERS ARE ACTIVE.

Botha Establishes a Government at Roesendal.

Pretoria, Nov. 19. — The Boers are active. It is alleged that Commandant Louis Botha has established a government at Roesendal, north of Middelburg, and that with the £150,000 which he has available he is paying the fighting burghers a crown per day. Commandant Albers Ersmus is said to be at Oliphant's river with 2,000 men, 1,000 wagons and 12,000 cattle. From Heidelberg it is reported that the Boers are compelling the burghers who surrendered to take up arms again under pain of death.

New Mill Under Way.

Sioux Rapids, Iowa, Nov. 19. — The Business Men's association has been fortunate enough to close a contract with W. J. Pulford, Filmore, Minn., for the erection of a 60-barrel mill at a cost of $10,000. Both steam and water will be used. Mr. Pulford hopes to have it running in sixty days.

MEET AWFUL DEATH

FOUR LIVES LOST IN A BURNING BUILDING.

Oswayo, Pa., the Scene of a Terrible Catastrophe—Fire Breaks Out in a Hotel and Owing to the Lack of Fire Protection in the Town, That and Two Other Buildings Are Destroyed — Several People Were Injured and Many Had Narrow Escapes for Their Lives.

Oswayo, Pa., Nov. 19. — Four men were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the McGonigal house, a three-story frame building, the hotel barn and the opera house. The three buildings were burned to the ground in half an hour from the time the fire started.

The town has no fire department, the only protection being a pump at the tannery. The fire originated in the McGonigal house from an overpressure of natural gas. There were thirty people in the hotel, which was a flimsey structure. Two men were seriously injured. There were many narrow escapes, most of the occupants jumping from windows. The flames licked up the hotel building as if it were built of tinder. Nothing remains of the four unfortunate men but a few charred bones. The tannery employes connected a line of hose to the burning buildings, but on account of some trouble with the pump there was considerable delay in getting a stream on the fire and the flames had got beyond control. The property loss is estimated at $5,000.

AFTER THE REDSKINS.

Soldiers Leave Juarez for the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 19.—One company of soldiers from the post at Juarez was sent to the scene of the Apache outbreak in the Sierra Nevada mountains. The Mexican government evidently considers the situation serious, for troops have been sent from several interior points and it is believed that small bands of renegades can be hemmed up in the mountains and exterminated before they can make their way back to the Arizona reservation. A party of Mormons is in pursuit. A dispatch from Arizona confirms the report that the Indians escaped from the reservation at San Carlos. It says that only nine soldiers have been left to guard 3,000 Indians and that the redskins have been restless for weeks.

A Unique Introduction.

One day when calling upon Gambetta I found him vastly amused over a visit which he had received a few minutes previously from the late General Meredith Read, who for a number of years was United States envoy at Athens.

Then general, who until that time had been a perfect stranger to the great French statesman, had entered the latter's presence, carrying in his hand a volume entitled "Men of the Time," or some work of the kind. This he opened, without saying a word, and laid on Gambetta's desk before attempting to greet him or to explain the purpose of his call.

Then, pointing to a column which contained a very eulogistic biographical notice of himself, he exclaimed, "Kindly read that," and when Gambetta, who read English with the utmost facility, had, in compliance with the request, cast his eye over the page in question, General Read rose from his chair, and with a bow to Gambetta pointed to himself, exclaiming in tones of pardonable pride, "C'est moi."

Then, and not until then, did he extend his hand to the great tribune, who, having meanwhile risen from his chair, expressed his pleasure at making the acquaintance of so distinguished an officer, who had rendered such valuable services to the United States.

Gambetta informed me that in the whole of his long experience of public life he had never known a man to introduce himself in so delightfully original a manner.—Critic.

"Ze Flaveur Del'cat."

At one of his famous little dinners a prominent professional man of Washington was greatly pleased with the salad, as were also his guests. Evidently it was partly meat and partly vegetable, but the flavor was new, distinct and undeterminable. This was so faint that one guest declared "It's not a taste at all, only a smell."

At length some one suggested that the chef be asked for the recipe, upon which the host remarked:

"My man greatly dislikes being asked for recipes. On this occasion, however, his vanity may overcome him if we tell how greatly we have enjoyed the dinner, and the salad in particular. At any rate, we'll see."

The Frenchman soon appeared, and was visibly affected, not to say elated, by the compliments.

"Eet gif me gret plaisir," he said, "to tell how I mak ze sal-lad. Eet ver' seemple. I haf ze laitue 'range ready; an I haf ze meat chop ver' fine an dry; ze celeri I haf chop ver' fine; an I haf ze pamme de terre, ze patate, an stan a leetle an dry; zen I mix zem up. Simple Questions.

The beginnings of a new primer have been made by one of our exchanges. The questions may be indefinitely continued by teacher and pupil.

"See the corn in the field. Can the corn walk?"

"No, the corn stalks."

"See the pretty cake. Does the cake stalk?"

"Never. But you should see a cake walk."

"I have a rope. Can the rope walk?"

"Yes, if it is taut."

"The hen is in the garden. Does the hen rise?"

"No, the hen sets."

"The mercury is in the tube. Will the mercury set?"

"No, my child. Wait until July and see."

A Variation.

The two old friends, as has been narrated before, met again after many years of separation.

"By the way, Brown," said Jones, "do you remember that snubnosed cross eyed little Tilbury girl with a face on her that would derail an express train? She used to live somewhere in your neighborhood, I think."

"Oh, yes, I remember her perfectly," replied Brown.

"Whatever became of her?"

"I am sorry to disappoint you, Jones"—here is where the variation comes in—"but I have not the slightest idea. I didn't marry her."—London King.

Among the aborigines of Australia the most common form of punishment less than death is the spearing of the offender through different parts of the body.

Our learning is so long in getting and so very imperfect that the greatest clerk knows not the thousandth part of what he is ignorant.—Jeremy Taylor.

Australia, it is estimated, is capable of supporting at least 100,000,000 inhabitants.

A Chinese Story.

M. Monnier, the well known French Asiatic traveler, vouches for the truth of the following story of how his friend, Hop Sing, a traveled oriental and man of means and refinement, was on one occasion sorely victimized. Hop Sing lived in the street of the roasted corn, as unsavory and as ill paved a street as any in all Peking. The local mandarin was an intimate friend of his, and Hop Sing availed himself of this friendship to press the mandarin to have the street repaved. Certainly. At once. The men would be at work on it before Hop Sing had returned home. A week passed, then another visit, and so on, until, in despair, Hop Sing determined to have the street repaired at his own expense. The work was satisfactorily completed.

The surprise of Hop Sing was only equaled by his indignation when, on awaking one morning, he found a gang of coolies upheaving the newly flagged street. His surprise grew when he heard from the mandarin's own lips that the men were there at his orders.

"You see, my dear friend," said the mandarin, "I am expecting the head inspector round here in a few days. Now, if he were to see the beautiful pavement you have laid down in your street he would come to the conclusion that there was money about, and he would assuredly bleed every vein in my body. This would mean my ruin. Don't you see why your pavement really must come up? It cost me one fortune to secure my post. I don't want to spend another in keeping it."

Thoreau's Mother's Ghost.

"Besides Thoreau and his mother, the house (at Concord) has had for its occupants A. Bronson Alcott and family, including his distinguished daughter, Louisa M., the author," writes Samuel S. Kingdon in The Ladies' Home Journal. "To them sometimes came the ghost of Mme. Thoreau. Those who know Mme. Thoreau and her habits confirm the description given by a servant, who left the house because of the visitation, in every detail; her tall, gaunt figure, her big, white cap, her stealthy step, her quiet comings, her noiseless goings.

"When seen, she invariably stood in the doorway, her great cap well adjusted, her neat handkerchief, half unfolded, tucked securely into the waistband of her full dress skirt—pausing a moment on the threshold, looking anxiously about, then stooping and running her finger along the edge of the mopboard, to see if perchance a speck of dust had found lodgment there. Proceeding to the workroom, she glanced in, then glided to the fireplace, stooping over it and motioning with her hands as if in the act of covering the coals with ashes.

"In life, it should be said, the two prominent characteristics of Mme. Thoreau were an abhorrence of dust and a dread of fire. Satisfied on these points, the spirit would disappear. Unlike other ghosts, this one always appeared in the daytime."

Anxious to Do His Best.

It was a mean trick, but, then, that is the kind that's usually successful.

"That dog," said the owner, "will bring me anything I send him for, and I am willing to bet on it."

Straightway a bet was arranged, and then the manager of the billiard hall suggested that he would like to have the pool table brought to him.

"Certainly," answered the owner of the dog, and he pointed to the table and said, "Fetch it!"

The dog raced around it once or twice and then grabbed a pocket and tore it off.

"Hold on!" cried the billiard man. "He'll ruin the table."

"Of course," answered the owner of the dog, "but if you give him time he'll get it all over here. You didn't suppose he could bring it in one trip, did you?"

But the billiard man paid the bet.—Chicago Post.

A Friend In Need.

About half an hour had been expended by the bashful young man in a series of advances and retreats, and little Johnny's cramped position behind the sofa was becoming somewhat painful.

"I wish I dared"— the young man commenced on a new attack, when the couple were electrified by an impatient exclamation behind them: "Aw, make a break! She's dead easy!"—Brooklyn Life.

Town Gossip.

It is generally agreed that the small town is a pleasant place to live in, except that there is always a great amount of gossip in such places. Why do not worthy people control in this matter of gossip as they do in other respects? Are the small towns of the country to be made undesirable as places of residences to please a lot of cheap people who ought to be controlled and regulated?—Atchison Globe.

Forewarned.

A Yorkshire vicar tells how he once received the following note from one of his parishioners: "This is to give notice that I and Miss Jemima Brearley are coming to your church on Saturday afternoon next to undergo the operation of matrimony at your hands. Please be prompt, as the cab is hired by the hour. Farewarned is forearmed."—London Tit-Bits.

His Simple System.

"How were you able," said the poor man, "to acquire such an immense fortune?"

"By a very simple method," replied the wealthy citizen. "When I was poor, I made out I was rich, and when I got rich I made out I was poor."—Columbus (O.) State Journal.

Cool and Methodical.

A lawyer who worthily bears a distinguished name occupies an old fashioned mansion on the edge of New York. His sister, who lives with him, tells a laughable story, which is reported in Harper's Round Table, illustrating his coolness and love of method.

Recently his sister tiptoed into his room some time after midnight and told him she thought burglars were in the house. The lawyer put on his dressing gown and went down stairs.

In the back hall he found a rough looking man trying to open a door that led into the back yard. The burglar had unlocked the door and was pulling at it with all his might. The lawyer, seeing the robber's predicament, called to him:

"It does not open that way, you idiot! It slides back!"

Away From Home.

It breaks parents to have their boys leave home, but it is the best thing that can ever happen to them. A man gets a training when away from home that he needs in after life, and which he can never receive at home. It is a grandmotherly notion that a man should be tucked in his bed at home every night until the day he marries and goes to a home of his own; such hothouse treatment puts him in poor condition for the cold blasts he is bound to encounter later in life.—Atchison Globe.

The Other Way.

A pale and disheveled Frenchman who had not found "a life on the ocean wave" all that could be expected, was sinking into his steamer chair, when a passenger asked cheerily: "Ah, good morning, monsieur; have you breakfasted?"

"No, monsieur," answered the pallid Frenchman. "I have not breakfasted; on the contrary!"

A part of the curious list of Lady Littleton's wedding outfit 200 years ago is as follows: "A black paddysway gown and coat, a pink unwatered pabby sute of cloaths, a gold stuff sute of cloaths, a white worked with sneal sute of cloaths."

Only Turkish flags are allowed in Constantinople.

The Blue Pencil.

"This," said the man who was showing the visitors about the office of the metropolitan daily, "is the copy readers' room. It is the place where the matter sent in for publication is boiled down to the right dimensions."

"Doesn't that make it warm?" giggled one of the young women.

"No," he replied. "But the men who write the stuff get pretty hot over it sometimes."—Chicago Tribune.

Perhaps you have noticed that the man with five grown up daughters never brings home a fashion magazine of his own volition.—Somerville Journal.

You complain about the laws being made in favor of the rich against the poor, yet there are more poor people than there are rich and the officers are elected by the majority of ballots and if you let a lot of political tricksters gobble up your offices and run your government, then you should keep your mouths shut and suffer.—Peoples Press Crookston.

Standard Oil stock went to over $700 for each $100 share after election last week. The capital stock of this trust is about a hundred million dollars par value, and seven hundred millions at market value. Fifty millions of dollars in dividends have paid on the stock of this company during the present year. Of all the trusts this is the most greedy and pitiless. With a three cent per gallon raise it this year took out of the pockets of the people $20,000,000 which, heaven knows, it did not need. It evidently robs just for the fun of the thing.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forcasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25 cents. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

A number of farmers east of here figured strongly on cutting their flax fields after the ground froze but in all probabilities there is too much snow now and the standing crop of flax will be a total loss. Ole Johnson, commissioner of the 3rd district figures his loss at about $300, while others in his vicinity will lose more or less.

Life in a country town would lose half of its interest were it not for the postoffice. Here the rich and poor, the high, the low, come every day. The business man comes in, opens his box, takes out his mail and hurries on to his work. The farmes, with his overalls, comes in whistling a tune and gets the mail for all his neighbors. The small boy sticks his head up to the window and asks for "our mail." Then the maiden with a white apron calls for a letter which she knew would come today, and failing to get it, she puckers up her mouth so prettily that you feel like sitting down and writing her one, and so on. Through the postoffice runs joy, hopes and disappointments.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Corresndent

Washington is looking forward with great pleasure to the coming three years of congress. This is entirely natural when the circumstances of the case are considered. Washington depends on the Government for existence. A republican congress always brings, not only vastly larger and more wasteful appropriations than does a democratic one, but it attracts a coterie of wealthy men, trust managers, lobbyists and the like, who come to solicit favors that they would never dare to ask from the Democrats. These men spend their money freely and produce "prosperity" here. Then again, the result of the election insures the retention of most of the present clerks in their positions and frees them from fear of the "rotation in office" advocated by the democrats. Of course, the other side of this appeals to those who are outside and want to have their turn at the public table, but these latter are not in Washington to any great extent while the former are. Last session, although the appropriations were the largest in the history of the country whether in peace or war, still there was some curb on them in view of the approaching elections. Now there will be none, and a riot of jobs may be expected. The river and harbor bill will probably be the largest in history, the public building bill will cost millions, the ship subsidy and army and navy appropriations will be almost without limit, and a goodly portion of all of these will find their way into Washington pockets. Hence, Washington is happy.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

A number of farmers near Russia are still cutting flax. Rather an odd sight to see harvesting of grain going on after the ground is covered with snow. Much of the flax sown about Russia was very late, and the heavy rains has made the ground too soft to work a binder over it until now. Some of the flax, now being cut, will yield a very fair crop and its high price makes it profitable to work even under the most unfavorable circumstances.—Beltrami Independent, Nov. 17.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

Electing A Railroad Commissioner.

It would be difficult to imagine a more absured situation than the one revealed by the election of the Minnesota railroad commissioners. These officials have formerly been appointed by the governor. But the commission had been so uniformly unsatisfactory that the people demanded that it be made elective, and it was so made. The republican party then nominated for the commission one man who as a membes of the commission for seven years had contributed as much, certainly, as any other one man to the dissatisfaction referred to. Another nominee on that ticket was taken out of an enviornment that gave assurance that he would be no improvement on the men who had formed the unsatisfactory commission of the past. It was confessed by party managers that those nominations were "unfortunate" "a mistake" etc., yet the dear people elected them both, simply because they were on the ticket of the majority party of the state. The people elected to a position that they asked to be made elective rather than appointive, a sort of men that they made themselves believe they would get rid of if they had the power to elect them! The situation proves that about the only consideration given to candidates for office is the party ticket they are on or the political party which they belong to. This leads the thoughtful to wonder if our people are really capable of intelligently judging of the capacity of other people for self government!—Farm Stock & Home.

Settlers Must Pay.

One feature of the claiming of lands in the four townships that formed a part of the White Earth reservation, and that will be opened for settlement in December, has heretofore been overlooked in the mention of the case. It is the fact that the settlers do not get the benefit of the commutation clause in the land laws, and that they must, in addition to living on the claims five years, pay for the land at the rate of $1.25 per acre. This is not generally understood, and will tend to abate somewhat of the rush for the lands that was expected.

The free homes bill in its provisions does not apply to lands that may be opened subsequent to its passage. It is quite likely, however, that this matter will be brought before congress, possibly when the commutation privilege on Red Lake lands is brought up which will be at the coming session, and provision made for the White Earth lands to be included in the privileges extended to the Red Lake lands.

The agricultural lands in the four townships amount to about 38,000 acres out of the total of 87,000, the remainder being scheduled as pine lands. The date of sale on the latter is Nov. 27th and the agricultural lands will be thrown open Dec. 4.—Crookston Times.

A Plucky Little School Ma'am.

The village of Raymond, S. Dak., can boast of a school ma'am that for her industry, pluck and frugality is setting an example that is worthy of imitation by her butterfly sisters farther east. For several winters she has driven three miles to a country school house, built her own fires and took care of her horse. Then instead of putting her money into fancy togoery invests it in stock. She now has twenty-seven head of fine cattle. She proposes to keep right of earning more money, buying more cattle and earning the money to hire them kept until (we suppose) some fine young fellow comes along with an equal supply of gumption to start a partnership ranch. In this same village we found a young fellow holding down a box of codfish, wasting his best energies in pulling death and destruction from a cigarette, while he complained that "there were no chances to get a start in that forsaken country." We intimated that he might be mistaken, and requested him to ask Miss Nelson, the plucky little school ma'am, about it.—The Farmer.

The Value of Goodness.

If an article isn't good, it is dear at any price. But, there is a constant joy in anything that really satisfies—as, for instance, "Golden Grain Belt" beer. Now, beer is an article that should be in every family. The best, brewed of pure barley malt and hops, comes from the Minneapolis Brewing Company. It comes in pints or quarts. Order of your dealer, or Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

—Do you want to sell your farm? The John Grove Land and Loan Company of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

This world is full of flatterers, slanderers and hypocrites. The majority of men will speak sweetly of you to your face and tell you that the band ought to play whenever you come along, but when discussing you to others there is always more or less sprinkling of profanity in their remarks. When you are prosperous and can wear a clean shirt and a spiketailed coat during working hours, you will find it an easy matter to wade around in friends up to your neck, but if ill-luck happens to overtake you, your friends will be about as scarce as snow-balls at a Fourth of July celebration. The fellow who once came to you and told you how smart you were will then pass you by with the cold and haughty stare of a wax policeman. Perhaps a few of the old companions will come around and mingle their tears with yours, but they will be very, very few. Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep, and the world laughs at you.—Ex.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

MRS. JOHN WILLIAMS.

No other medicine has such a record for absolute cures, and no other medicine is "just as good." Women who want a cure should insist upon getting Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when they ask for it at a store. Anyway, write a letter to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her all your troubles. Her advice is free.

Selecting Glassware.

To select glass with discretion it is necessary to understand somewhat of its manufacture, and to recall the properties of the chemicals of which it is composed. These materials are chiefly soda, potash, lime, alumina and oxide of lead. The quality of the glass to be manufactured depends upon the amount of the basic material united with the silica or sand. The best glass is made with lead, which gives to it luster, fusibility and high refractory powers. It is often called flint glass, to distinguish it from lime glass, which is much cheaper and of a decidedly greenish tint. Flint glass is that which is most generally used for cutting and polishing. It may be picked out by the clear, bell-like tone which it sends forth when struck. This test may be made without any danger of breaking the glass, if it be held firmly in one hand while the upper parts or edge, is sharply struck with a pencil or other instrument, the only care requisite being to see that the glass does not touch any object when it is struck, since, if there be room for it to vibrate, glass will never break.—Harper's Bazar.

Mrs. Olberg, a Prominent Minnesota Lady, Tells a Remarkable Story.

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 19.—(Special)—There are few men and women in this state or indeed in the whole northwest, who have not heard, or do not know personally Mrs. Henriette C. Olberg of this city.

Mrs. Olberg was Judge of Linen and Linen Fabrics at the World's Fair, at Chicago, and Superintendent of Flax Exhibit at the International Exposition at Omaha, Nebraska, in 1898. Mrs. Olberg is Secretary of the National Flax, Hemp and Ramie Association, and Assistant Editor of the "Distaff."

Her official duties are naturally very onerous, and involve a great deal of traveling and living away from home. She says:

"During the World's Fair in Chicago, my official duties so taxed my strength, that I thought I would have to give them up. Through the continual change of food and irregular meal hours, and a poor quality of water, I lost my appetite, and became wakeful and nervous in the extreme. My Kidneys refused to perform their usual duties. One of my assistants advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and sent for a box. I am pleased to say that I derived immediate and permanent benefit. I used three boxes, and feel ten years younger.

"I have great confidence in the efficacy of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and am always glad to speak a good word in their favor.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are weak women's best friend."

BY MRS. MOSES P. HANDY.

(Copyrighted, 1900, Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It was the last grand hop of the season. To-morrow the band would leave, and thereafter, for the two weeks before the final closing of the hotel, the remaining guests would dance in the parlors, to the sound of the piano and one violin. Lucy Alston found herself feeling melancholy, and somewhat sentimental. It had been a happy summer, the happiest of her life. She was well aware that much of her joy was due to the society of Horace Poindexter who was, to her mind, the most charming man she had ever met. Her experience of charming men, however, was small. Mrs. Poindexter took one of her nieces away with her every summer, and this year the lot had fallen to Lucy. Mr. Sturdivant came down to the Beach every Saturday, to stay over Sunday, and from the first he had singled her out as the especial object of his attentions. More than one person had warned her, more or less good-naturedly, as people will, that such attentions on his part were rarely serious. Her aunt, especially, had cautioned her. "Horace Sturdivant thinks himself a pauper," Mrs. Poindexter had said. "He has about $5,000 a year, which to a man of his tastes, spells poverty. And every one knows that he will never marry any woman that is not an heiress."

Five thousand dollars a year seemed wealth to Lucy. She failed to attach due importance to her aunt's counsel. Mr. Sturdivant was assiduous in his courtesies; he waltzed delightfully and had "a tongue which might wile the laverock from the cloud." All the other women adored him; therefore, how could poor, unsophisticated Lucy fail to feel his fascinations? With "Youth at the helm, and Pleasure at the prow," how can love be always on the lookout for rocks and shoals?

"Good-bye, dear, God bless you, good-bye."

Much practice had made Mr. Sturdivant past-master in the art of love-making. His eyes were volumes of affection, his voice a caress, his whole manner eloquent of tender and delicate admiration. Yet he had never spoken one word to her which might not have been proclaimed from the house-tops.

To-night Lucy felt vaguely uneasy, and bethought her of the wisdom which had been whispered into her ears. His air was sad and distrait, with an indefinable chill overlying its accustomed tenderness. They had danced together, the last waltz of the year, and the well-known music had a wonderfully mournful cadence to her sensitive ear.

"Oh, you girls, you frivolous girls," wailed viol, violins, and cornet in unison. Somehow it all seemed a dream, and Lucy gave a little sigh when the melody ceased, and the dancers stood still. She could have gone on waltzing forever, her hand on his shoulder, his, clasping her waist, and his eyes looking into hers.

"Get a wrap, and come out on the terrace, the tide is in and the moonlight on the water is beautiful. I want you to see it," Mr. Sturdivant commanded rather than asked. She obeyed without question, and was back in a moment, with a fleecy shawl wound about her head and shoulders. "How pretty she is," he thought. The damp sea-air, which made other women's locks hang lank and limp, caused her's to curl in bewitching rings about her forehead. He gave her hand a tender pressure as he drew it through his arm, but he did not speak, and for a while they stood on the terrace in silence, watching the waves as they charged the shore, and retreated, baffled always. "How like it is to life," sighed Mr. Sturdivant, with his eyes looking out to sea. "Always the same vain striving for the unattainable."

Lucy bravely choked down the lump in her throat. "I feel to-night like Cinderella," she said. "The ball is over, and in a little while I shall retire to my nook, and take up my humdrum life again."

Mr. Sturdivant gave a little start. He had not expected the idyl to end so soon. "How so?" he asked. "Mrs. Poindexter has taken rooms at the Alhambra for the winter. You will find that gayer than this."

"I shall not be with her. Auntie takes her nieces in turn, there are ten of us all counted, and I had my turn this summer."

Mr. Sturdivant experienced an unpleasant shock. He had already taken care to hunt up the will of the late Aaron Poindexter, and discovered, to his regret, that his widow had only a life interest in his large estate. However, that interest was absolute, and gave Mrs. Poindexter an income greater than an extravagant woman could easily spend.

Surely she might be expected to do something for a favorite niece. He would be content with comparatively little. Now this house of cards fell to earth.

"I am very sorry. This, then, is probably our last evening together. I must go back to town early to-morrow morning, on business." Oh, the infinite tenderness and sadness of his tone! It held the cadence which the French call "tears in the voice."

Lucy pulled herself together with a mental jerk. She felt as though she had taken a plunge into cold water. This, then, after all that had passed during the last few [illegible] farewell. But, no, he could not mean it.

"Not necessarily. South Stamford is not quite out of the world. It can be reached by rail from Boston," she ventured to say.

"Is that where you live? Child, it is as far away from my world as the antipodes. Besides, when a man knows himself too weak to resist temptation, what can he do but flee?"

"How can a man measure his strength unless he tries it?"

"Ah, you know so little of the world When a man's lot in life is so hard that he dares not ask a woman to share it, what can he do but love and run away? Perhaps he ought not to love in the first instance, but human nature is helpless; a man is only a man."

"Has the woman no right to be considered? Suppose she loves too?"

Lucy felt surprised at and a little ashamed of her boldness. But he was making the conversation impersonal, which gave her some excuse to speak. He shook his head. "Ah, no; in that case he is bound to protect her against herself. How can a man worthy of a name drag a woman he loves down to poverty; even though she does not wish to be parted from him? Good-by, dear, God bless you, good-by."

They were in the shadow of the pavilion, practically alone; he gave one quick glance around, then caught her in his arms and, holding her, kissed her passionately, once, twice, thrice. Never before had he so wholly forgotten himself. He loved the girl as well as he could love anything except his precious self, and her appealing eyes and quivering lips broke down his self control. It was done in an instant; he released her so quickly that she had not even time to struggle; then he rushed her back to the hotel piazza, and left her, without a word.

Lucy sank into a seat to collect her breath. She was more indignant than broken hearted. This, then, was what the man called love. She thought of her father, who, with her mother at his side, had fought his way to independence, indeed to prominence: he was a local judge and had represented his district in congress. They found themselves, with all their children, passing rich on five thousand dollars a year.

"Thank heaven I am not an heiress to be married for my money," she said to herself, at last, fervently.

Upstairs Mrs. Poindexter was at her desk, writing to her brother.

"I have seen my nieces, in turn," she said, "and Lucy, of them all, I find most congenial. I wish to keep her as long as you can spare her. Despite the fact that Mr. Poindexter's estate reverts, at my death, to his relatives, I own some property, in my own right, and my ample income enables me every year to add something thereto. If I live a few years longer, as may reasonably be expected, the child will be fully provided for, the advantages which I can offer her meanwhile, are, I am sure, such as you and her mother will appreciate."

Shooting Stars.

According to Camille Flammarion, a well-known authority, what are called "shooting stars" are small bodies, weighing at most a few pounds, and consisting mainly of iron and carbon. They traverse space in swarms and also revolve around the sun in long elliptical courses like comets. When these little bodies enter the sun's orbit they are deflected toward the earth and great numbers of them are seen in a single night. Their brightness is due to the heat engendered by the energy of their motion. Their speed is enormous, 4½ kilometers a second, while the speed of the earth on its orbit is only 5 kilometers a second. Consequently when a shower of them approaches the earth in the direction opposite to its course, the initial speed is 72 kilometers a second; when they follow on its course they gain 16½ kilometers a second on it. Their mean rate of approach is between 30 and 40 kilometers a second. The friction engenders a temperature of 3,000 degrees, Celsius, subject to which they burst into flame.

Twine Made in Penitentiaries.

Minnesota's binding-twine plant, established in the state penitentiary, is as much a success as the like institution in Kansas. By this means the problem of convict labor has been solved in these two states to the satisfaction of about everyone concerned, including the labor unions. Members of the latter are gratified, as well as satisfied, as penitentiary-made twine is a direct slap at a trust. The farmers, too, are happy, as they get their binding twine at from 3 to 5 cents less a pound than is charged for the product of the trust. The only complaint in each state is that the penitentiary plants are not large enough to supply the demand.—New York Post.

Opening of French Hunting Season.

In France, one has to get an official permit to hunt, and the hunting season now having been opened by President Loubet at Rambouillet, nearly half a million permits have been granted. Times have changed since the French farmers, toward the end of the last century, were forbidden to kill a rabbit under pain of death. The right of chase belonged to the privileged and those were so few that the country was overrun and the farmers were obliged to sit up at night to keep their crops from being devoured.

Lincoln as a Fire-Builder.

How the Lincoln stories grow! A correspondent writing to the Constitution from near Louisville, Ky. says: "Mr. Lincoln stopped over night at my uncle's house long before he became president. It was cold weather, and the family did not rise as early as usual. When my uncle came down he found Mr. Lincoln giving the negro servant lessons in making a fire. 'I made the fire in the next room,' he said. 'Go and warm by it till I fix this one!'"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Noted Knight Templar Owes His Health to Peruna.

Colonel T. P. Moody, a prominent Knight Templar, is well known in every city in the United States west of Buffalo, N. Y., as a Jeweler's Auctioneer. In the city of Chicago as a prominent lodge man, being a member of the K. T.'s and also of the Masons. The cut shows Colonel Moody in the costume of the Oriental Consistory Masons, 32d degree.

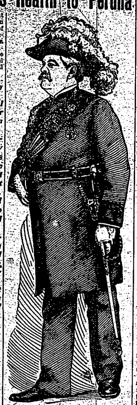
In a recent letter from 5900 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly.

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but the relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago I started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years.

"The soreness has left my stomach entirely and I am free from indigestion and dyspepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere."

"My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with a bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left her lungs and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly, T. P. Moody.



Colonel T. P. Moody, of Chicago, had Catarrh Twenty-five Years and Was Cured by Peruna.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to catarrh in different locations and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the surprise caused by the first publication of it to all people, both professional and non-professional, was amusing. And yet we have never enumerated all of the diseases which are classed as catarrh. It must be confessed, however, to see even this partial list drawn up in battle array is rather appalling. If the reader desires to see this list, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

BOTH SIMPLE AND DIFFICULT.

The Chinese Language Has No Grammatical Rules, But Is Made Up of Many Dialects.

Paradoxical though it may sound, we are strictly within the limits of accuracy when we say that Chinese is, at the same time, the simplest and most difficult language in the world; most simple from the absence of those grammatical rules and inflectional forms which vex the student of European languages; most difficult because of the combination of different languages—and all known as Chinese.

The "book" Chinese is never spoken, while the colloquial in written form would merit the supreme contempt of the average Chinese student and supercilious scholar.

The written character is universally the same throughout the empire; but each province, city, town and village seems to have reserved the right to invent its own pronunciation of those written words which are common to the whole nation, and which constitute an eternal and inseparable bond which will link the eighteen provinces together as long as China remains a nation.

The possibility of two Chinamen meeting each other, and, while each speaks Chinese, being unable to indulge in mutual conversation in that language, will at once serve forcibly to illustrate the pronounced differences of the Mongolian tongue.

It would be more correct to say that China possesses a number of languages, distinct and separate, and each subdivided into numerous dialects, a linguistic condition which at once suggests the absence of railroads or other means of bringing the various provincials into conversational contact with each other.—Frederick Poole, in New Lippincott.

THE MAKING OF HISTORY.

An Art in Which Our Versatile Cousins, the French People, Are Unrivaled.

France is the incarnation of the Muse of History, inasmuch as she is never idle. Her mode of making history is distinct from that of any other nation, and especially from ours. England makes history in a matter-of-fact, utterly unhistrionic and utterly nonspectacular way; just as her best historians record it, in a sober, solid and and often the reverse of brilliant manner. Our incidents are not magnified into episodes, and our episodes are not inflated to the size of conclusive events. There is no concerted, orchestral accompaniment to our rejoicings; on the contrary, there is much cacophony under the name of cheering. We are lions who roar like bulls of Bashan; we are the most materially civilized people on the face of the globe who cannot combine to decorate or illuminate a single thoroughfare in a thoroughly artistic manner.

On the other hand, there is no yelling of "Treason!" at the slightest reserve. We are, in fact, a staid, unimaginative people, who take our pleasures not "moult tristement," as Froissard had it, but sedately, until our animal spirits get the better of us, and find vent in the aforesaid Bull-of-Bashan roars. But our cheerfulness is, for all that, never exhausted, and the largest stock of it is reserved for "duty" in the case of misfortune. Our cheerfulness is the bootjack of our resignation.—Illustrated London News.

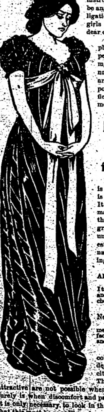
FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the obligations of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected, that severe mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.



Dr. Greene's NERVURA for the Blood and Nerves

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

MRS. MARY FRANCES LYTLE, of 3 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

MRS. WILLIAM BARTELS, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to see that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

ALLIES NOW AGREED

PRELIMINARY TREATY HAS BEEN FINALLY FRAMED.

Terms Believed to Be in Substantial Agreement With the French Note—Compromise as Regards Indemnity and Guarantees—Nothing Now Remains Except to Get the Approval of the Respective Governments—Americans Capture a Village and Defeat Bandits.

Pekin, Nov. 26.—At a meeting Saturday of the ministers of the allied powers an agreement was reached upon the terms of the preliminary treaty. Nothing now remains except to secure the approval of the respective governments before definite measures on the Chinese peace treaty are begun. The terms are believed to be in substantial agreement with the French note to the powers, namely, punishment of guilty, indemnities to governments and individuals, retention of strong legation guards and the occupation of certain places between Pekin and Taku. M. de Giers, the Russian minister, persisted in his refusal to agree to the provision that China should agree to pay an indemnity for the outrages committed by the Boxers and give guarantees against their repetition. The British and German governments had made no change in the instructions to their ministers, and it appeared as though no agreement could be reached. A in the wording of the point. This was adopted and a satisfactory agreement was reached. It is understood that the change is simply in the wording and does not affect the meaning of the provision. The ministers determined the future boundaries of the legation grounds. The matter was discussed and settled so far as the ministers are concerned. Their decision, however, is subject to the approval of the military authorities, who will look over the limits agreed upon and decide if the grounds as proposed by the ministers will be easy to defend. If they decide that there are military objections the boundaries will be changed. A party of American cavalry went to disperse a band of bandits in a village sixteen miles from Pekin. The village was found strongly fortified, but the Americans attacked and captured it, killing seven Chinese.

Compromise Was Suggested

SKELETON IN A WELL.

Discovery Causes Much Excitement at Pana, Ill.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 26.—Much excitement was occasioned in this vicinity by the discovery of a skeleton in a well on the Brunot farm, four miles north of here. In April of last year the dead body of Jane Brunot was found in this well. Mrs Brunot was murdered by two of her nephews who are now serving life sentences in the Chester penitentiary. Yesterday the work of cleaning the well out was commenced, and at the bottom was found the almost perfect skeleton of a young girl. A bracelet, a comb and a key, also were found. The deepest mystery surrounds the gruesome find, but it is believed the two young men now serving life sentences may be able to throw some light on the case.

SAVED BY POLICE.

Chicago Man Nearly Mobbed for Striking a Woman.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Harry Kimberg a grocer, was only saved from the fury of a mob in front of the court house by the prompt interference of the police. Kimberg was a witness in the divorce case brought by Dr. J. M. Abello against his wife Sarah, and gave evidence assailing the woman's character. As they reached the street it is alleged that Mrs. Abello slapped Kimberg in the face, when he turned and, after felling her with a blow, kicked her in the head. The woman's cries brought a big crowd to the spot in an instant. Kimberg was struck from all sides and threats were made to kill him. The arrival of officers from the city building saved him.

BAN ON INTOXICANTS.

Burlington Employes Prohibited From Using Liquor or Tobacco.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Employes of the Burlington were surprised to read in the new books of rules just issued by that company the following: "Use of intoxicants by employes while on duty is prohibited. Their habitual use or the frequenting of saloons where they are sold is sufficient cause for dismissal. The use of tobacco by employes in or about station buildings or on passenger cars is prohibited."

Though employes of this system have understood for years that habitual use of intoxicants would not be countenanced, this is the first time prohibitory rules to this effect have been printed in the company's book of instructions to its employes.

A Heroic Girl.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Walking a narrow stone ledge thirty feet from the ground, connecting the balcony of her father's residence with a neighbor's, Miss Jennie Younglove early yesterday morning gave the alarm that a burglar was at work in her home. A squad of policemen responded to a telephone call, but the intruder, after frightening Miss Younglove's mother into hysterics, had escaped. Mr. Younglove was absent from the city and the two women and a servant were alone in the house. Having given the alarm Miss Younglove retraced her steps to protect her mother. The burglar took nothing of value.

Floods Reported in the Ohio Valley—Considerable Damage to Property.

Cincinnati, Nov. 26.—Floods are reported all along the Ohio valley. In almost the entire valley it has been raining since last Tuesday and almost continuously since Friday. While no lives are reported lost the damage to property is considerable. The Licking river in Kentucky is very high and caused some damage on the Ohio side by its waters rushing across the Ohio channel and sweeping the Cincinnati landing. One of the bridges over the Licking river, connecting Covington and Newport, was swept away. The lumber yards and mills and shipping generally suffered great loss. On the Ohio side the Great and the Little Miami rivers are both high floods along the tributaries of the Ohio river are reported everywhere. The Ohio rose eight feet here during the last twenty-four hours, and it is rising more rapidly now.

HIS PULSE WEAKER

SENATOR DAVIS' CONDITION SHOWS NO MATERIAL CHANGE.

While Awake He Is Delirious and Restless—Still Able to Take Abundant Nourishment—Temperature, Pulse and Respiration Unchanged Except That the Pulse Is Weaker—Passes a Very Restless Afternoon—Dr. Stone's Bulletin.

St. Paul, Nov. 26.—The anxiety of Senator Davis' family and friends was not increased yesterday. Neither was it diminished. He passed a better night Saturday night and a very restless afternoon yesterday. Yet he slept some during the day. The record of his pulse, temperature and respiration were nearly identical with the corresponding records of the day before. His pulse, however, was not quite so strong. He was mildly and almost constantly delirious when awake. He was still able to take abundant nourishment. This facility of assimilation has gone far, indeed, toward maintaining a vigor that was hardly to be expected. As has been his custom Sundays, Dr. Stone confined his public statements yesterday to a single bulletin. This was issued at midnight:

"Senator Davis' condition has not materially changed since yesterday. He rested more quietly last night and he has slept more to-day. But his temperature, pulse and respiration are practically the same, save that the pulse is a little weaker.

SCUFFLE ENDS FATALLY.

Distressing Tragedy Occurs in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Nov. 26.—A particularly unfortunate and distressing affair occurred in the billiard room of the West hotel shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The immediate result was the killing of Leonard R. Day, a well known young man, the arrest and incarceration of Frank H. Hamilton, a newspaper reporter, against whom is brought the charge of murder and the complete prostration of a widowed mother, a greatly esteemed pioneer resident of Minneapolis.

There is a good deal of mystery about the sad occurrence, owing mainly to the somewhat vague and wholly unsatisfactory evidence of the men who could reasonably be depended upon to give an intelligent and reliable version of the affair. The fatal wound was inflicted with a knife, and in the course of a scuffle between Day and Hamilton, and in the presence of eight or more intelligent and discriminating men, all sober and all within close proximity of the belligerents. The young men are said to have had a quarrel in which the name of a prominent young society woman figured.

JACK LONG'S TWO THANKSGIVINGS

Seated by the glowing embers in the gloomy old firelit hall, watching the flame retreat, advance, flare up in splendor, and then die into a dull glow, was Jack Long. Thirty-five years had elapsed since Jack first saw the light of day, and his life had been as full of joy and misery, of light and shadows, as the ordinary life of mankind.

Typical of the ever-burning glow was a love within his heart which ten years had not smothered.

Like the fire flame leaping high and sinking low, was the hope in his breast.

As Jack sat there alone, gazing into the fire, thoughts of bygone days came over him, trooping at his memory's call.

Mingled with those memories was a fair and radiant maiden, with hair of sunshine and eyes of azure. This image conjured up so vivid and lifelike was his loving, laughing sweetheart, Queenie Graham, as she looked on that Thanksgiving night so long ago.

It would be ten years on the morrow since he had last gazed upon the dimpled, smiling, roguish face which he loved so well.

They were then betrothed, and she wore the betrothal ring which he had placed upon her finger only a few weeks before.

How vivid that picture came before his eyes. Ten years seemed to have rolled backward, and he was a youth of 25 again, and Queenie Graham, his adored one, a blushing maiden of 18.

The old-fashioned farmhouse, with white, oaken floor, and the boys with their sweethearts, and the jolly old fiddler who played half asleep, only awaking to call out in deep, stentorious tones:

"Swing partners to place."

The lamps swinging from the ceiling flooded the scene with the most brilliant light.

Gay laughter and jest told of light hearts, and happy faces glowed to the soul-stirring music of the "Irish Washerwoman," sawed off by the fiddler.

Jack's love, like all true love, did not run smooth. In fact, love begets its own misery. He was madly jealous when she smiled on Sam Brown, and in swinging partners Sam held her hand too long and squeezed it too ardently to suit the jealous lover.

"Queenie, you're a flirt," he declared, "I saw you wink at Sam Brown."

She turned on him with proud, flashing eyes, and said:

"Don't be surprised if I call you another. You kissed Susie Bell."

"That's not true."

"Yes, you did; for I heard her tell Mary Courtwright."

"It is false, Queenie," he cried, in his indignation. Susie Bell was a round-faced, ugly country girl with no attractions, and tongue given to mischief making.

The dance went on, and the lovers' quarrel with it. As Jack and Queenie whirled in the giddy mazes of the dance that silly, childish quarrel waxed hot, entrancing her beauty with every angry word she uttered.

At last, as the "set was over," she suddenly jerked the betrothal emblem from her finger, and thrusting it into his hand said:

"Here is your ring, you can marry Miss Sue."

With a heavy heart the angry Jack Long donned his topcoat and winding his muffler about his neck to keep the chill, November air from his throat, went out into the night never to look upon the face of that adored being again.

He heard from Queenie occasionally, and at last that she had gone east to live. How far east or what part of the east he did not know, and was too proud to ask.

She was lost to him forever, and he grew melancholy. He went west, to be as far from her as possible, and engaged in business at a frontier town with cowboys and ranchmen for his as- [illegible] riders were wanted, and he had learned to mount the wildest broncho.

He enlisted, and hurried off to the front. At Santiago he landed, and in the march to the city was in the first skirmish.

Then came that noble charge on San Juan hill. He led the charge amid dust and heat, fighting like a mad man until struck down, faint and bleeding, he lay on mother earth to die.

"Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one, shall I never see you more?" he was heard to murmur, as borne away from the field. Somehow there was something in this piteous cry which touched the hearts of those who heard it. A newspaper man who was near sent with his report the following brief sentence:

"A soldier, wounded and dying, while being carried from the field, was heard to exclaim with his last breath: 'Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one!' No doubt this piteous appeal wrung from a noble heart was to some faithless sweetheart who had deserted him years before."

"WILL YOU DANCE WITH ME?"

This simple little paragraph had been copied and recopied, and discussed, and made the theme for countless stories and ballads.

But Jack, who uttered it, didn't die. He lived to return to America, was honorably discharged, and resolved to pass another Thanksgiving in the old neighborhood where his young days had been spent. So he returned, after an absence of nearly ten years, and was at the house of his father on this evening, gazing sadly into the fire which seemed to reflect his own aching heart.

What was life to him now?

That chief charm, that only light to his soul, had gone out, leaving all gloom and darkness.

He was like an old man.

His hair, once dark as the raven's wing, showed traces of silver in it, and his face, so handsome, clear and fresh, now had the lines of care upon it.

Though he sometimes smiled and assumed an appearance of gayety, his mother knew that his heart was sad.

But that mother had a hope that happiness would yet dawn on her son. She had a piece of intelligence she had not broken to him. Queenie Graham, after an absence of ten years, had returned to visit an aunt.

There was to be a great Thanksgiving party at Jack's grandmother's, the oldest lady in the neighborhood, at which she was to invite all the young folks, for "Grandma Goodwin" took great pleasure in young people.

Queenie would no doubt be there, and she determined that Jack should meet her. The mother knew that her son's pride would keep him away if he knew Queenie was to be there, so she kept that surprise a secret from him.

She little knew how love had humbled Jack's pride.

In the vest pocket of the veteran, he carried the self same ring which Queenie had thrust back on him ten years before. It was next his heart when he stormed San Juan hill, and he hoped if he was slain the bullet would pass within the golden circle of his youthful love, and that he might die with her name on his lips.

But fate destined Jack to live. He was once more home, among friends who had crowded about to hear him tell of the wild charge and the storm of death.

Would he go to grandmother's next day to the Thanksgiving dinner? Yes, he would.

The mother was happy.

The old carriage was loaded with jolly young folks and middle-aged people, and among them the veteran of San Juan.

Grandma's table groaned with plenty, goose and turkey, pies and candies, cider, nuts and apples in abundance.

But what was far more precious to the ex-rough rider was a radiant face he had loved so long before.

He thought she had suffered as well [illegible]

Queenie's beauty was matured and seemed more heightened by time. She was far more lovely than before. After the first moment's shock of surprise pride assumed control, and placed each other on the guard.

They longed to break the ice, but neither wanted to make the advance.

After the feasting was over the happy group assembled in the great parlor to talk over pleasant reminiscences or indulge in a quiet tete-a-tete.

Then someone, may his tribe increase, said:

"I brought my violin. I will play and call off; let us have a dance tonight."

The suggestion was greeted with a hearty shout, and the young fellows rushed to find their partners.

Right quickly they all took their places on the floor, when they found that they wanted just one couple more.

"Come, come, Soldier Jack, secure a partner," cried the voluntary musician.

Moved by some uncontrollable impulse, Jack arose and went to where Queenie Graham sat, and, bending low, whispered:

"Will you come and dance 'Haste to the Wedding' with me?"

She assented, and all were at their places.

Then someone on the piano accompanied the violin in that sweet old melody, "Haste to the Wedding."

There is always an opportunity in a quadrille for a sly word now and then between partners.

"All join hands and circle to the right."

"I want to ask you something," she whispered, when they were at their places again.

"What is it?"

"First four forward and back again."

And away they went.

When next they had an opportunity she thrust into his hand an item clipped from a newspaper.

It was of a young soldier carried bleeding and dying from San Juan hill, murmuring:

"Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one, shall I never see you more?"

"Was that you?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered.

Then he took her hand. It trembled, and her azure eyes grew dim.

"Balance all."

It was several minutes before either could speak.

The sweet-tuned violin, accompanied by the piano, poured forth such soul-stirring music as can be found only in that precious old air, "Haste to the Wedding."

He was about to speak when the musician "calling off" shouted:

"Gents to places—all promenade."

It gave him an opportunity to recover himself, and when next they glided across the room he whispered: "Say, Queenie, will you keep that old promise you made long ago?"

She looked up at him, smiling through her tears.

Ten years of misery and suffering had passed since he held that hand.

Oh, it was reward for all that suffering!

"Queenie, I have it yet," he whispered, taking from his vest pocket the betrothal ring which he had carried all these years.

"It has never left me, for I always had hoped that a time might come when I could restore it to the finger where it belonged. It was with me on that dark, gloomy day at San Juan hill, where I saw so many noble men die.

"I carried it over my heart and prayed that if I fell some Sphanish bullet might pass through the band of love to reach a heart that beat for you. Oh, Queenie, did you know that you have never——"

"Swing partners to place."

What an abomination was that old fiddler and the dance to Jack.

When he next got an opportunity he whispered:

"Never been out of my mind."

CLANCY'S RAFFLE.

There's a raffle down at Clancy's;
They are throwing for a "turk."
By the way the dice-box dances
You can see it's hard at work.

Whew! the air is close and smoky!
There's a crowd about the beer;
Every stalwart thirsty blokey
Downs his pint without a fear.

"Twinty-wan," called Jerry Clancy
And he pounded on the bar;
"Shure, the game is rather chancy,
Lucky divil that ye are!

"Come, O'Brien, tak' the bi-r-d!"
Then said Clancy, with a wink:
"Whirra, boys, an' haven't ye hear-r-d
O'Brien ashk yez ahl to dhrink?"

There were twenty-seven husky men
Gathered there about the bar.
"Whiskey here!" each shouted then,
Clancy answered: "Here yez are!

"Tin cints aich, ye lucky sinner!"
"Faix!" O'Brien said, "that's nate!
'Tis a mighty costly dinner—
[illegible] pounds in weight!"

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.

VOLUME XX — ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1900. — NUMBER 19.

ALLIES NOW AGREED

PRELIMINARY TREATY HAS BEEN FINALLY FRAMED.

Terms Believed to Be in Substantial Agreement With the French Note —Compromise as Regards Indemnity and Guarantees—Nothing Now Remains Except to Get the Approval of the Respective Governments—Americans Capture a Village and Defeat Bandits.

Pekin, Nov. 26.—At a meeting Saturday of the ministers of the allied powers an agreement was reached upon the terms of the preliminary treaty. Nothing now remains except to secure the approval of the respective governments before definite measures on the Chinese peace treaty are begun. The terms are believed to be in substantial agreement with the French note to the powers, namely, punishment of guilty, indemnities to governments and individuals, retention of strong legation guards and the occupation of certain places between Pekin and Taku. M. de Giers, the Russian minister, persisted in his refusal to agree to the provision that China should agree to pay an indemnity for the outrages committed by the Boxers and give guarantees against their repetition. The British and German governments had made no change in the instructions to their ministers, and it appeared as though no agreement could be reached. A in the wording of the point. This was adopted and a satisfactory agreement was reached. It is understood that the change is simply in the wording and does not affect the meaning of the provision. The ministers determined the future boundaries of the legation grounds. The matter was discussed and settled so far as the ministers are concerned. Their decision, however, is subject to the approval of the military authorities, who will look over the limits agreed upon and decide if the grounds as proposed by the ministers will be easy to defend. If they decide that there are military objections the boundaries will be changed. A party of American cavalry went to disperse a band of bandits in a village, sixteen miles from Pekin. The village was found strongly fortified, but the Americans attacked and captured it, killing seven Chinese.

SKELETON IN A WELL.

Discovery Causes Much Excitement at Pana, Ill.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 26.—Much excitement was occasioned in this vicinity by the discovery of a skeleton in a well on the Brunot farm, four miles north of here. In April of last year the dead body of Jane Brunot was found in this well. Mrs Brunot was murdered by two of her nephews who are now serving life sentences in the Chester penitentiary. Yesterday the work of cleaning the well out was commenced, and at the bottom was found the almost perfect skeleton of a young girl. A bracelet, a comb and a key, also were found. The deepest mystery surrounds the gruesome find, but it is believed the two young men now serving life sentences may be able to throw some light on the case.

SAVED BY POLICE.

Chicago Man Nearly Mobbed for Striking a Woman.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Harry Kimberg a grocer, was only saved from the fury of a mob in front of the court house by the prompt interference of the police. Kimberg was a witness in the divorce case brought by Dr. J. M. Abello against his wife Sarah, and gave evidence assailing the woman's character. As they reached the street it is alleged that Mrs. Abello slapped Kimberg in the face, when he turned and, after felling her with a blow, kicked her in the head. The woman's cries brought a big crowd to the spot in an instant. Kimberg was struck from all sides and threats were made to kill him. The arrival of officers from the city building saved him.

BAN ON INTOXICANTS.

Burlington Employes Prohibited From Using Liquor or Tobacco.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Employes of the Burlington were surprised to read in the new books of rules just issued by that company the following: "Use of intoxicants by employes while on duty is prohibited. Their habitual use or the frequenting of saloons where they are sold is sufficient cause for dismissal. The use of tobacco by employes in or about station buildings or on passenger cars is prohibited."

Though employes of this system have understood for years that habitual use of intoxicants would not be countenanced, this is the first time prohibitory rules to this effect have been printed in the company's book of instructions to its employes.

A Heroic Girl.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Walking a narrow stone ledge thirty feet from the ground, connecting the balcony of her father's residence with a neighbor's, Miss Jennie Younglove early yesterday morning gave the alarm that a burglar was at work in her home. A squad of policemen responded to a telephone call, but the intruder, after frightening Miss Younglove's mother into hysterics, had escaped. Mr. Younglove was absent from the city and the two women and a servant were alone in the house. Having given the alarm Miss Younglove retraced her steps to protect her mother. The burglar took nothing of value.

Non-Union Men Assaulted.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Ten men employed on the Mandel building were assaulted by union pickets. No effort was made by the police to escort the workmen from the building in a body, and the union men hammered them severely.

The Licking river in Kentucky is very high and caused some damage on the Ohio side by its waters rushing across the Ohio channel and sweeping the Cincinnati landing. One of the bridges over the Licking river, connecting Covington and Newport, was swept away. The lumber yards and mills and shipping generally suffered great loss. On the Ohio side the Great and the Little Miami rivers are both high. floods along the tributaries of the Ohio river are reported everywhere. The Ohio rose eight feet here during the last twenty-four hours, and it is rising more rapidly now.

HIS PULSE WEAKER

SENATOR DAVIS' CONDITION SHOWS NO MATERIAL CHANGE.

While Awake He Is Delirious and Restless — Still Able to Take Abundant Nourishment—Temperature, Pulse and Respiration Unchanged Except That the Pulse Is Weaker — Passes a Very Restless Afternoon—Dr. Stone's Bulletin.

St. Paul, Nov. 26.—The anxiety of Senator Davis' family and friends was not increased yesterday. Neither was it diminished. He passed a better night Saturday night and a very restless afternoon yesterday. Yet he slept some during the day. The record of his pulse, temperature and respiration were nearly identical with the corresponding records of the day before. His pulse, however, was not quite so strong. He was mildly and almost constantly delirious when awake. He was still able to take abundant nourishment. This facility of assimilation has gone far, indeed, toward maintaining a vigor that was hardly to be expected. As has been his custom Sundays, Dr. Stone confined his public statements yesterday to a single bulletin. This was issued at midnight:

"Senator Davis' condition has not materially changed since yesterday. He rested more quietly last night and he has slept more to-day. But his temperature, pulse and respiration are practically the same, save that the pulse is a little weaker.

SCUFFLE ENDS FATALLY.

Distressing Tragedy Occurs in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Nov. 26.—A particularly unfortunate and distressing affair occurred in the billiard room of the West hotel shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The immediate result was the killing of Leonard R. Day, a well known young man, the arrest and incarceration of Frank H. Hamilton, a newspaper reporter, against whom is brought the charge of murder and the complete prostration of a widowed mother, a greatly esteemed pioneer resident of Minneapolis.

There is a good deal of mystery about the sad occurrence, owing mainly to the somewhat vague and wholly unsatisfactory evidence of the men who could reasonably be depended upon to give an intelligent and reliable version of the affair. The fatal wound was inflicted with a knife, and in the course of a scuffle between Day and Hamilton, and in the presence of eight or more intelligent and discriminating men, all sober and all within close proximity of the belligerents. The young men are said to have had a quarrel in which the name of a prominent young society woman figured.

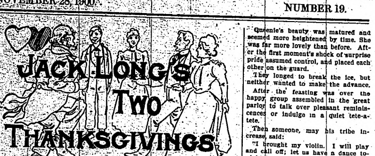
Looking for Bargains.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 26.— [illegible]



Seated by the glowing embers in the gloomy old firelit hall, watching the flame retreat, advance, flare up in splendor, and then die into a dull glow, was Jack Long. Thirty-five years had elapsed since Jack first saw the light of day, and his life had been as full of joy and misery, of light and shadows, as the ordinary life of mankind.

Typical of the ever-burning glow was a love within his heart which ten years had not smothered.

Like the fire flame leaping high and sinking low, was the hope in his breast.

As Jack sat there alone, gazing into the fire, thoughts of bygone days came over him, trooping at his memory's call.

Mingled with those memories was a fair and radiant maiden, with hair of sunshine and eyes of azure. This image conjured up so vivid and lifelike was his loving, laughing sweetheart, Queenie Graham, as she looked on that Thanksgiving night so long ago.

It would be ten years on the morrow since he had last gazed upon the dimpled, smiling, roguish face which he loved so well.

They were then betrothed, and she wore the betrothal ring which he had placed upon her finger only a few weeks before.

How vivid that picture came before his eyes. Ten years seemed to have rolled backward, and he was a youth of 25 again, and Queenie Graham, his adored one, a blushing maiden of 18.

The old-fashioned farmhouse, with white, oaken floor, and the boys with their sweethearts, and the jolly old fiddler who played half asleep, only awaking to call out in deep, stentorious tones:

"Swing partners to place."

The lamps swinging from the ceiling flooded the scene with the most brilliant light.

Gay laughter, and jest told of light hearts, and happy faces glowed to the soul-stirring music of the "Irish Washerwoman," sawed off by the fiddler.

Jack's love, like all true love, did not run smooth. In fact, love begets its own misery. He was madly jealous when she smiled on Sam Brown, and in swinging partners Sam held her hand too long and squeezed it too ardently to suit the jealous lover.

"Queenie, you're a flirt," he declared, "I saw you wink at Sam Brown."

She turned on him with proud, flashing eyes, and said:

"Don't be surprised if I call you another. You kissed Susie Bell."

"That's not true."

"Yes, you did; for I heard her tell Mary Courtwright."

"It is false, Queenie," he cried, in his indignation. "Susie Bell was a round-faced, ugly country girl with no attractions, and tongue given to mischief making."

The dance went on, and the lovers' quarrel with it. As Jack and Queenie whirled in the giddy mazes of the dance that silly, childish quarrel waxed hot, entrancing her beauty with every angry word she uttered.

At last, as the "set was over" she suddenly jerked the betrothal emblem from her finger, and thrusting it into his hand said:

"Here is your ring, you can marry Miss Sue."

With a heavy heart the angry Jack Long donned his topcoat and winding his muffler about his neck to keep the chill November air from his throat, went out into the night never to look upon the face of that adored being again.

He heard from Queenie occasionally, and at last that she had gone east to live. How far east or what part of the east he did not know, and was too proud to ask.

She was lost to him forever, and he grew melancholy. He went west, to be as far from her as possible, and engaged in business at a frontier town with cowboys and cattlemen for his as- [illegible]

"QUEENIE, OH, MY LONG-LOST LOVE."

[illegible] riders were wanted, and he had learned to mount the wildest broncho.

He enlisted, and hurried off to the front. At Santiago he landed, and in the march to the city was in the first skirmish.

Then came that noble charge on San Juan hill. He led the charge amid dust and heat, fighting like a mad man until struck down, faint and bleeding, he lay on mother earth to die.

"Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one, shall I never see you more?" he was heard to murmur, as borne away from the field. Somehow there was something in this piteous cry which touched the hearts of those who heard it. A newspaper man who was near sent with his report the following brief sentence:

"A soldier, wounded and dying, while being carried from the field, was heard to exclaim with his last breath: 'Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one!' No doubt this piteous appeal wrung from a noble heart was to some faithless sweetheart who had deserted him years before."

"WILL YOU DANCE WITH ME?"

This simple little paragraph had been copied and recopied, and discussed, and made the theme for countless stories and ballads.

But Jack, who uttered it, didn't die. He lived to return to America, was honorably discharged, and resolved to pass another Thanksgiving in the old neighborhood where his young days had been spent. So he returned, after an absence of nearly ten years, and was at the house of his father on this evening, gazing sadly into the fire which seemed to reflect his own aching heart.

What was life to him now?

That chief charm, that only light to his soul, had gone out, leaving all gloom and darkness.

He was like an old man.

His hair, once dark as the raven's wing, showed traces of silver in it, and his face, so handsome, clear and fresh, now had the lines of care upon it.

Though he sometimes smiled and assumed an appearance of gayety, his mother knew that his heart was sad.

But that mother had a hope that happiness would yet dawn on her son.

She had a piece of intelligence she had not broken to him. Queenie Graham, after an absence of ten years, had returned to visit an aunt.

There was to be a great Thanksgiving party at Jack's grandmother's, the oldest lady in the neighborhood, at which she was to invite all the young folks, for "Grandma Goodwin" took great pleasure in young people.

Queenie would no doubt be there, and she determined that Jack should meet her. The mother knew that her son's pride would keep him away if he knew Queenie was to be there, so she kept that surprise a secret from him.

She little knew how love had humbled Jack's pride.

In the vest pocket of the veteran, he carried the self same ring which Queenie had thrust back on him ten years before. It was next his heart when he stormed San Juan hill, and he hoped if he was slain the bullet would pass within the golden circle of his youthful love, and that he might die with her name on his lips.

But fate destined Jack to live. He was once more home, among friends who had crowded about to hear him tell of the wild charge and the storm of death.

Would he go to grandmother's next day, to the Thanksgiving dinner? Yes, he would.

The mother was happy.

The old carriage was loaded with jolly young folks and middle-aged people, and among them the veteran of San Juan.

Grandma's table groaned with plenty, goose and turkey, pies and candies, chestnuts and apples in abundance.

But what was far more precious to the ex-rough rider was a radiant face he had loved so long before.

She thought she had suffered as well [illegible]

Queenie's beauty was matured and seemed more heightened by time. She was far more lovely than before. After the first moment's shock of surprise pride assumed control, and placed each other on the guard.

They longed to break the ice, but neither wanted to make the advance.

After the feasting was over the happy group assembled in the great parlor to talk over pleasant reminiscences or indulge in a quiet tete-a-tete.

Then someone, may his tribe increase, said:

"I brought my violin. I will play and call off; let us have a dance to-night."

The suggestion was greeted with a hearty shout, and the young fellows rushed to find their partners.

Right quickly they all took their places on the floor, when they found that they wanted just one couple more.

"Come, come, Soldier Jack, secure a partner," cried the voluntary musician.

Moved by some uncontrollable impulse, Jack arose and went to where Queenie Graham sat, and, bending low, whispered:

"Will you come and dance 'Haste to the Wedding' with me?"

She assented, and all were at their places.

Then someone on the piano accompanied the violin in that sweet old melody, "Haste to the Wedding."

There is always an opportunity in a quadrille for a sly word now and then between partners.

"All join hands and circle to the right."

"I want to ask you something," she whispered, when they were at their places again.

"What is it?"

"First four forward and back again."

And away they went.

When next they had an opportunity she thrust into his hand an item clipped from a newspaper.

It was of a young soldier carried bleeding and dying from San Juan hill, murmuring:

"Queenie, Queenie, oh, my long-lost loved one, shall I never see you more?"

"Was that you?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered.

Then he took her hand. It trembled, and her azure eyes grew dim.

"Balance all."

It was several minutes before either could speak.

The sweet-tuned violin, accompanied by the piano, poured forth such soul-stirring music as can be found only in that precious old air, "Haste to the Wedding."

He was about to speak when the musician "calling off" shouted:

"Gents to places—all promenade."

It gave him an opportunity to recover himself, and when next they glided across the room he whispered:

"Say, Queenie, will you keep that old promise you made long ago?"

She looked up at him, smiling through her tears.

Ten years of misery and suffering had passed since he held that hand.

Oh, it was reward for all that suffering!

"Queenie, I have it yet," he whispered, taking from his vest pocket the betrothal ring which he had carried all these years.

"It has never left me, for I always had hoped that a time might come when I could restore it to the finger where it belonged. It was with me on that dark, gloomy day at San Juan hill, where I saw so many noble men die.

"I carried it over my heart and prayed that if I fell some Spanish bullet might pass through the band of love to reach a heart that beat for you. Oh, Queenie, did you know that you have never—"

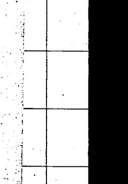
"Swing partners to place."

What an abomination was that old fiddler and the dance to Jack.

When he next got an opportunity he whispered:

"Never been out of my mind."

CLANCY'S RAFFLE.



There's a raffle down at Clancy's;
They are throwing for a "turk";
By the way the dice-box dances
You can see it's hard at work.

Whew! the air is close and smoky!
There's a crowd about the bar;
Every stalwart thirsty blokey
Downs his pint without a fear.

"Twinty-wan," called Jerry Clancy
And he pounded on the bar,
"Shure, the game is rather chancy,
Lucky divil that ye are!"

"Come, O'Brien, tak' the bi-r-d!"
Then said Clancy, with a wink!
"Whirra, boys, an' have ye hear-r-d
O'Brien ask ye all to dhrink?"

There were twenty-seven husky men
Gathered there about the bar,
"Whiskey here!" each shouted then.
Clancy answered: "Here yes are!"

"Tin cints a drink, ye lucky sinner!"
"Faix!" O'Brien, "that's not fair!"
'Tis a [illegible] turkey dinner

What Russia Is Like.

In Russia everything is large and everything is loud. Moscow is like an immense village, and everything in it is built broad, not high, because there is so much space to cover. The public squares, unpaved and surrounded by a little rim of cobbles, are as big as meadows. The arcades and passages, with their cellars below, their shops above, their glass roofs, are so enormous that they could hold the Passage des Panoramas and the Burlington Arcade and the galleries at Milan without filling more than a corner of them. Colors shriek and flame; the Muscovite eyes sees only by emphasis and by contrast; red is completed either by another red or by a bright blue. There are no shades, no reticences, no modulations. The restaurants are filled with the din of vast mechanical organs, with drums and cymbals; a great bell clashes against a chain on all the trams to clear the road; the music which one hears is a ferocity of brass. The masons who build the houses build in top boots, red shirts and pink trousers; the houses are painted red or green or blue; the churches are like the temples of savage idols, tortured into every unnatural shape and colored with glaring color. Bare feet, osier sandals and legs swathed in rags pass to and fro among the top boots of the middle classes, the patent leather boots of the upper classes, like the inner savagery of a race still so near barbarism, made evident in that survival of the footgear of primitive races.—Saturday Review.

The Senate's Hole In the Wall.

When the nineteenth century was as yet only half grown, senators applied customarily for their toddies at the so called Hole In the Wall, a small circular room just off the postoffice of the upper house. The latter body, as will be remembered, then occupied what is now the chamber of the supreme court, and the postoffice was across the main corridor of the building on the same floor. When a wearer of the toga found himself in need of a "shifter," he had only to cross over to the mails department and pass through it to the little circular room aforesaid, which was about the size of a pantry.

The Hole In the Wall was the first senate restaurant, and the bill of fare for edibles was short, though to the point. There were ham, guaranteed to have been smoked for six months, a veritable sublimation of the pork product; likewise corned beef and bread and cheese, but very little else. They served, however, as an accompaniment for the fluids, and when the Hole was crowded, as was often the case, senators ate their sandwiches outside, in the postoffice.—Washington Post.

He Obeyed.

Murat Halstead, the great journalist of wartimes, went to General William T. Sherman's headquarters once for the "latest news from the front." Halstead was armed with many fine introductory letters, but decided to rely mainly on one given him by Thomas Ewing, Sherman's brother-in-law. He found the general and presented Ewing's letter. The general opened it somewhat impatiently, read a few lines, folded it and said:

"Ah, you come from Ewing, and you desire to have 'all the latest news,' the 'next probable move' of our army, eh? Well, there's a train leaving this town for Cincinnati at 2 o'clock. Here, take this ticket, and step over there and get your dinner, and then get on that train."

"Well, but, General Sherman"— began the newspaper man. But Sherman waved him off.

"Go over and get a good dinner; we have plenty and always strive to treat our friends well. But be sure you don t miss that 2 o'clock train!" And Halstead wisely obeyed.

Deportment on a Car Platform.

He had studied all the rules of courtesy laid down for conductors and had profited by them. He did not intend to be caught napping.

"What car is this?" asked the sweet young thing.

He doffed his cap and gave her a Chesterfieldian bow.

"Madam," he said, "this is car No. 319."

"I mean," she explained, "what is its destination?"

"Madam," he answered with the same courtesy, "it affords me pleasure to be able to inform you that its destination is the car barn."—Chicago Post.

She Was Sensitive.

"Your face is like an open book," sighed Mr. Softleigh to Miss Gooph, accompanying the remark with what he thought was his most winning smile.

"If I had as big a mouth as yours I would not talk about other people's," sniffed the young lady as she flounced out of the room, thus teaching the young man to cling to the good old, unmistakable taffy talk when he desires to be complimentary.—Baltimore American.

One of Mozart's Outbreaks.

Mozart, being once on a visit at Marseilles, went incognito to hear the performance of his "Villanella Rapita." He had reason to be tolerably well satisfied, till, in the midst of the principal aria, the orchestra, through some error in the copying of the score, sounded a D natural where the composer had written D sharp. This substitution did not injure the harmony, but gave a commonplace character to the phrase, and obscured the sentiment of the composer.

Mozart no sooner heard it than he started up vehemently, and, from the middle of the pit, cried out in a voice of thunder: "Will you play D sharp, you wretches?"

The sensation produced in the theater may be imagined. The actors were astounded, the lady who was singing stopped short, the orchestra followed her example, and the audience, with loud exclamations, demanded the expulsion of the offender. He was accordingly seized, and required to name himself. He did so, and at the name of Mozart the clamor subsided, and was succeeded by shouts of applause from all sides.

It was insisted that the opera should be recommenced. Mozart was installed in the orchestra, and directed the whole performance. This time the D sharp was played in its proper place, and the musicians themselves were surprised at the superior effect produced. After the opera Mozart was conducted in triumph to his hotel.

Too Much Burns.

Charles Mackay once told this story in connection with a Burns memorial: Mackay had promised to collect shillings for some monument to the honor of Burns, and he applied with confidence for a subscription to an Englishman who had represented in parliament for many years a certain Scottish borough.

"No," said Mr. Fortescue Harrison. "I am no longer in parliament, and I have now much pleasure in refusing to subscribe the shilling which in former days I should have been obliged to give. What I have suffered through Burns heaven alone can tell! First, I had to praise him in the most fulsome manner, without having read his works. Then I had to learn to recite portions of his poems by heart, and in doing so to give the verses as much as possible with a Scotch accent. I have had to walk without my hat and with the rain pouring down upon my unprotected head as leader of a procession in honor of Burns, and under these circumstances I refuse with genuine delight to give a shilling or any smaller sum to the object you have in view."

The Laziest Man.

The laziest man in North America discovered himself the other evening in the swell bachelor apartments not far from Lafayette square where he lives. He was lying on a couch in his lounging room, smoking a cigar, when the cigar went out—that is to say, the fire at the end of the cigar departed. The man raised himself on one arm with great effort, and snapped the messenger bell that was installed over the couch. Then he reclined and waited. After about ten minutes there was a knock at the door, and a messenger boy entered.

"D'jou ring, sir?" asked the boy.

"Yes, son," said the laziest man in the western hemisphere. "Just gimme a match off that table there, will you?"

The boy handed the man on the couch a match and waited. The man relighted his cigar and smoked on.

"D'jou want me to go somewhere, sir?" asked the boy, fidgeting.

"No, that's all," said the man. "Take that half dollar on the table."

Then the boy went out, grinning.

That man ought to be on some government "commission" to investigate something somewhere.—Washington Star.

No Nonsense.

Once in awhile there is a princess from whose lips plain words fall more readily than precious stones. One such, the wife of one of London's leading editors, figures in the "Personal Recollections" of H. Sutherland Edwards.

The editor had occasion to present a distinguished gentleman to his wife. He spoke as a husband, but he was not far wrong when he said, "Allow me to introduce you to the most charming woman in Europe."

"Don't be a fool, Sam!" said the lady, as she extended her hand.

The Smiths are everywhere. In Italy they are called Smithi, in Holland, Schmidt; in Russia, Smitowski, in Spain, Smithus; in Poland, Schmittweiski and in Mexico Smitri. Things grow very fast in the short Greenland summer. As soon as the snow melts off, in many places the ground is covered with a vine which bears a small berry something like a huckleberry. It is nearly tasteless, but juicy, and the natives are fond of it.

The Tavernier Pearl.

The Track Foreman.

The track foreman actually accounts for a greater proportion of the railroad's expenditures than any other employee, because the greatest cost of railroading is in the roadbed, and its equipment and the expense of maintaining it. The track foreman is in fact an important employee, but about the only time a passenger ever sees his sunburned face is while he is being whisked by between stations at 60 miles an hour.—New York Sun.

Burlington Route

CANADIAN EXCURSIONS

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago —through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its track smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul Burlington trains leave St. Paul 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and information. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31. 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from the date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The exact rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until Dec. 24th. Application can be made to him for any future information needed.
